JACKSON & PERKINS

NEW FALL 1950

Catalog of Roses

and Perennials

A FEW OF THE JACKSON & PERKINS STYLE LEADERS FOR 1951

GOLDEN SCEPTER
(Pat. 910). A new yellow Hybrid Tea—with long buds opening into majestic 5½" blooms.

VOLCANO
(Pat. 951). Carmine buds expand to 6-7" glowing cherry-red blooms. Very fragrant.

FASHION
(Pat. 789). Entirely new color—coral-pink suffused with gold. 5-time Award Winner.

NEW YORKER
(Pat. 823). BEST red rose of all time! Fragrant 6½" blooms from June until frost.

DIAMOND JUBILEE
(Pat. 824). Our own 75th Anniversary Rose! Tremendous 5-6" glowing buff-orange blooms.

WE cordially invite you to discover . . . within the pages of Jackson & Perkins' new full-color catalog . . . a preview of your 1951 rose garden. In this colorful book, you will find a rich panorama of the world's finest Modern Roses . . . Hybrid Teas, Floribundas, Climbers, All-America Winners which will transform your garden into a symphony of color, beauty and fragrance. You will see, for the first time, the wonderful new J&P varieties . . . Golden Scepter, Opera, Volcano, White Pinocchio, etc. . . . glorious roses that are destined to become the 1951 favorites of rose-lovers all over America.

ALL J & P PLANTS ARE GUARANTEED TO LIVE & BLOOM IN YOUR GARDEN

There is also a wide selection of our hardy perennials . . . delphiniums, violas, phlox, etc., . . . which will greatly enhance the beauty of your garden. And you will find a wealth of gardening information—planting hints and suggestions for floral arrangements—plus many money-saving offers.

In order to receive your free copy of the new Fall 1950 Edition of this world-famous catalog, simply fill in and mail the coupon at the right. However, since we always receive many, many more requests for catalogs than we are able to fill—we urge you to mail the coupon today.

When the membership rolls close again—as they must in a few short weeks!—you will be glad indeed that you seized upon this opportunity to obtain BEAUTIFUL, beautiful BOOKS LIKE THESE~AT THE SAME PRICE AS AN ORDINARY NOVEL!

Now—but for a brief time only!—you can obtain a unique collection of the world's classics, especially illustrated by the world's great artists, well printed on permanent papers—for the same price as rental library books!

WHEN THE MEMBERSHIP rolls of The Heritage Club are publicly opened to new members—and you may know that this does not happen often—you are offered an unusual opportunity which you should be alert to seize.

Now The Heritage Club is preparing the announcement of the Fifteenth Anniversary Series of its fine books, for distribution to its members during the coming twelve months; and the membership rolls are opened for a brief time.

THE HERITAGE CLUB distributes to its members "the classics which are our heritage from the past, in editions which will be the heritage of the future." These books are not falsely "deluxe," nor are they old editions dressed up for a new market. They are especially designed by the most famous typographers, illustrated by the greatest of the world's artists, carefully printed by leading printers on papers which have been chemically tested to assure a life of at least two centuries, and then handsomely bound and boxed.

You may find this next statement hard to believe; but nevertheless it is true, and it seems a principal reason for the continuing success of this cooperative plan: the members obtain these books for the same price that they are called upon to pay for ordinary rental library books! Despite increases, during the past six years, of about one hundred percent in the costs of production, each member pays only $3.65 for each book—or only $3.28 if he pays in advance!

NOW THE PROSPECTUS for the Fifteenth Anniversary Series is being prepared, and in it are described all of the books which will be distributed to the members during the coming twelve months. To celebrate its Fifteenth Anniversary, the Club is making new editions of some of its most popular volumes which have for years been out of print—and fetching high prices in the resale market. Because the books have not yet been printed, it is possible for the directors of the Club to increase the number of copies; and, for that reason, the directors invite one thousand interested people to come into the membership at this time. If you apply for one of these new memberships (and in time to get one of them!), you will obtain books like these:

War & Peace, in a wonderful volume illustrated by Verestchagin and Eichenberg; Ivanhoe, with beautiful water-colors by Edward Wilson; Madame Bovary, illustrated in Paris by Pierre Brissaud; The Pilgrim's Progress, with the water-colors of William Blake; and The Way of All Flesh, and The House of the Seven Gables, and Faust . . .

Yet, if it should happen that you do not desire to have any of these books, you are given a list of dozens of Heritage books-in-print—from which you are permitted to select substitution titles. In short, you may obtain only the books you want, and yet you may obtain them at a price which is a phenomenal bargain.

THERE HAVE BEEN great book bargains before, of course, and there will be again. But it seems safe to say that never in the history of book publishing has a greater bargain than this been offered to wise buyers of books.

You are invited to put this statement to the test. If you will fill out the coupon printed herewith, and mail it to The Heritage Club, you will be sent a copy of the completely descriptive Prospectus. Also, one of the available memberships will be reserved for you until you have had time to study the Prospectus and decide whether to send in your formal application. But you'd be wise to send for the Prospectus now!

The Rembrandt Album—retail price, $13.50 will be yours free if you obtain a membership at this time!

It is 11 by 14 inches in size: and in it you will find mounted prints of thirty of Rembrandt van Rijn's most famous paintings, ready to be framed if you do not keep them inside the staunch Album. Included is a description of the paintings, and a chronologic account of Rembrandt's life. This Album will be sold for $13.50. But a copy will be given to you FREE, if you join the Club now!

A LOVING CUP with which the bride and groom will drink their first toast as Mr. and Mrs., is this glass goblet. Marked with their full names and the wedding date, it will take the honored place on their fireplace mantel. And if you make it your wedding remembrance to them, they'll drink to you, too, every anniversary. 6" high. $10 ppd. Allow two weeks delivery. Holiday House, Upper Montclair, N. J.

PICK THE BUCKET that is handsome enough to lift an entire room into distinction. It is made in England of solid brass, lacquered to prevent tarnishing, and if it were ours we'd heap it with masses of rhododendron leaves, spotlight it in the center of our summer fireplace. Come autumn, we'd fill it with kindling. 12½" high. $19.50 ppd. Jenifer House, New Marlboro Stage, Great Barrington, Mass.

GIVE HIM THE TOOLS and whether his diggin's are by the sea or in his back-yard sandbox, a little excavation man will dig a hole to China. A heavy aluminum pail, painted red or blue, has a rope for easy toting and the wooden shovel and hoe are sturdily constructed and smoothly finished. Pail 7" x 5½", tools 6½" long. $1.50 plus 15¢ post. The Block Shop, New Haven 11, Conn.

As a member YOU MAY BUY AS FEW AS FOUR BOOKS A YEAR . . .
YOU BUY ONLY SELECTIONS YOU INTEND TO BUY ANYWAY . . . YOU USUALLY PAY LESS FOR THEM
. . . YOU SHARE IN MILLIONS OF DOLLARS WORTH OF BOOK-DIVIDENDS

YOUR CHOICE IS WIDE: In addition to the monthly selections, the Club makes available Special Editions of widely-discussed books. Thus your choice is wide—from 25 to 30 books a year. You receive a careful description of each selection and if you think it is a book you would not enjoy, you send back a form (always provided) specifying some other book you may want. Or you may simply say: "Send me nothing."

WHAT YOU PAY . . . AND HOW: You simply pay the special members' price for each selection you buy, which is usually lower than the regular retail price. A bill is mailed with each book you indicate you want. (A small charge is added to cover postage and mailing expenses.)

BOOK-DIVIDEND PLAN . . . WHAT IT IS: After your first purchase, with every second book you buy—from among the Club selections and Special Editions—you receive a Book-Dividend. This member-profit-sharing is similar to what happens in any consumer co-operative. A fixed percentage of what each member pays is set aside in a fund, which is finally invested in enormous editions of other books, and these are the Book-Dividends you receive as a member. In the past four years alone over $50,000,000 worth of free books (retail value) were distributed among members.

GOOD SENSE FOR READING FAMILIES: Why not buy from the Club the monthly selections you would buy anyway? You will usually pay less for them and you will share in the Club's Book-Dividends. And, not least, you will actually get and read particular new books, which you are anxious not to miss, but which you frequently do fail to read—through oversight or procrastination.

Please enroll me as a member of the Book-of-the-Month Club.* I am to receive, free, A TREASURY OF EARLY AMERICAN HOMES. This will be sent with my first purchase indicated below. Thereafter for every two monthly selections—or Special Members' Editions—I purchase from the Club, I am to receive, free, the current Book-Dividend then being distributed. I agree to purchase at least four monthly selections—or Special Members' Editions—from the Club during the first year I am a member, and I may cancel my membership any time after buying four such books from the Club.

PEEL PAINT TO BARE WOOD WITH ONE EASY STROKE

NEW ELECTRICAL TOOL removes 1 to 10 or more coats of paint from any wood surface as easy as cutting butter with a hot knife. No scraping, cutting, burning, sanding, or chemicals. The new Lectro Paint Peeler instantly softens paint electrically and peels it off the surface clean to the bare wood with one easy stroke. It's faster than a blow torch—there's no danger of fire—will not scorch or burn delicate wood surfaces. Makes no mess—no smell—it's even fun to use. Removes any paint, enamel quickly and easily. Sturdily constructed to last for years. Sent complete with extra long, quality electrical cord. Simply plug into any A.C. or D.C. outlet—let heat for several minutes and remove paint to the bare wood on exterior or interior painted surfaces, floors, woodwork, cupboards, furniture, antiques, boats, window-sills, screens, doors—a hundred other uses. Price $4.95 postpa'd—nothing else to buy. FLATTER-PAX is a light-as-a-feather traveling beauty kit, equipped with 4 plastic non-breakable bottles and 2 jars, each in its own pocket, with room in the middle for wash cloth, nail polish, etc. Then remove the cover, tie it under your chin, and you're all set for the shower! In clear plastic with pink piping, $7.25 ppd. The Women's Educational and Industrial Union, 246 Boylston St., Boston 16, Mass.

SERVICE STAR. A hand-painted metal tray, wearing this kind of a price tag, will be the belle of any butler's pantry. We particularly like its size for cocktails, and the open handles for steady trips between kitchen and terrace. In black with extremely beautiful floral design, it measures 21" x 9½", costs just $4.50 ppd. Old Guilford Forge, Guilford, Connecticut.

DRY UP! The Solvay Air-Dryette, Jr., is the most outstanding air drying unit in the low-cost field. Solvay Calcium Chloride, the chemical used in the Dryette attracts moisture as a magnet attracts steel, will remove from the air up to 3½ qts. of moisture per day, may be purchased locally. Think of your basement, your husband's dark room! Air Dryette, Jr. $9.95 exp. coll. J. L. Hudson, Detroit, Mich.

Your pride and joy...

You've good reason to be proud when walls are *Vitrolite. It looks like the height of luxury. Yet it's one of the most practical wall materials you can choose for bathroom, powder room and kitchen.

Smooth as a mirror, lustrous as a jewel . . . Vitrolite keeps its beauty for life. It's GLASS. Children's carefree splashing can't harm it. Neither can colognes, creams or lipstick. Once-over-lightly with a damp cloth . . . and Vitrolite sparkles like new. It doesn't fade, craze, swell or warp. Never needs refinishing.

Vitrolite colors are a joy, too. They correlate perfectly . . . assure distinctive decoration. Ask your L·O·F Glass Distributor to show them to you and give you all details. Or write for our Vitrolite book. *®

Vitrolite colors are correlated to assure perfect harmony whether you blend or contrast them. Shower above is jade with cactus green.

How to leave home and like it

by Louisa M. Comstock

Dates and rates are changeable. Prospective tourists should confirm this information with their travel agents, transportation companies, or hotels

Before you plan a habitual, year-in, year-out summer jaunt, here are a few of the reasons why you may wish to give thought to the lush and trade-wind-cooled islands of the Caribbean as summer vacation territory:

Prices are very much to your advantage. You'll find bargains in French perfume, Danish silver, Swiss watches, British leather, Dutch Delft-blue pottery, and foreign-make cameras in duty-free ports like Willemstad, Curaçao. You get something like a 40 per cent bonus throughout the British West Indies because of the devaluation of British currency. And low summer-season rates affect both hotels and transportation everywhere. You can see Jamaica, for instance, on a special summer package tour, eight days, all expenses included with accommodations at the Tower Isle and Myrtle Bank hotels, only $89. Pan American also, for instance, offers a summer reduction of 25 per cent on all Clipper round trips, and invites you to use it either to reach a single destination or to make a circle tour covering the entire excursion itinerary.

Entry formalities have been eased, as in the Netherlands West Indies, where you can stay for 24 hours with no formalities whatsoever, merely by producing a birth certificate. In the Dominican Republic a $1 tourist card covers all. In Jamaica, where car owners are no longer required to make a duty deposit, the car license fee has been waived altogether, and a special tourist driving license, good for 120 days, is yours free if you merely show your home state driver's license and sign your name.

Many new hotels, like the Dominican Republic's Montana, Puerto Rico's Caribe-Hilton, Grenada's Santa Maria, St. Vincent's Blue Caribbean, Haiti's Roosevelt—close to its International Exposition grounds—remain open all year. You might like a folksy place like the new Butlin's Bahamas Vacation Village on Grand Bahama Island, which is just that, plus swimming pools, private beaches, docks for boating enthusiasts, and a segregation plan whereby those who like quiet can have it, those who don't need not, and families with children can turn them over to a recreation program as healthy for the youngsters as it is a relief to their parents. Or you might prefer de luxe "city-apartment" accommoda- (Continued on page 95) rooted in the past, yet unfolding the promise of tomorrow!

Reflecting America's cultural growth from the days of pioneer Cherry Valley to the highly urbanized Empire State of today, Stickley "American" furniture has a charm and individuality all its own. It is more than "reproduction" furniture. Rather, it is a truly living American style — one that follows a basic tradition and character, yet ever evolves to fit the changing needs and means of today's homes.

Every Stickley piece has the characteristics of custom-built furniture — is soundly and honestly built from solid cherry — famous fruitwood that has gone into treasured American creations for the last three centuries.

A STICKLEY "Little Heirloom" only $6.50 This handy footstool is typical of Stickley's cherry wood, solid construction and "Old Mansion" finish. Sold only by postpaid mail at the special introductory price of $6.50 Included with the stool is a full-size container of famous Stickley Furniture Polish, the dressing that preserves and beautifies the finish of any cabinet wood. It's a rare parent who hasn't wished cars provided a folding play-and-napping bunk like Travelot for tots. Together, the locking sections create a car-length lounge; the long one alone leaves room for an adult to sit alongside. On outings, Travelot doubles as a picnic table. Sturdy top is waterproof Presdwood; structure and folding U-bases are steel. $13 a set (state car make, model, year). Lewis & Conger, New York, N. Y.

Old-fashioned, turned ice-cream is like no other. It's made just that way by this motor-turned, quart-size Handyfreeze. No work, extra speed. Ordinary ice-cubes and salt suffice for packing. A streamlined, insulated tub modernly houses an old-time scraping paddle and cream can. With extra cans you can freeze several flavors and refrigerate them, cans and all. $17. AC only; extra cans $1.50 ea. Hammacher Schlemmer, N. Y. C.

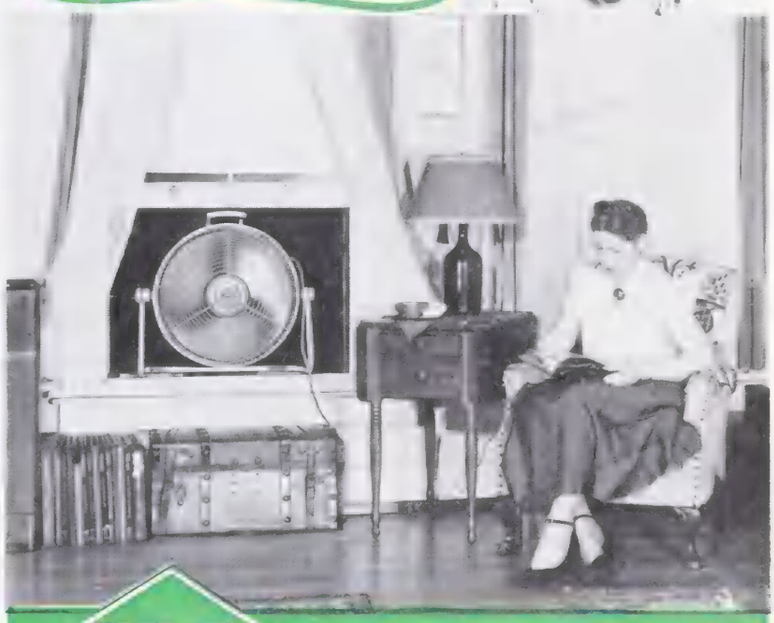
Barfair-77 Sail Preservative reaches yachtsmen after an illustrious career as a mildew-and-rot proofer—on Brigantine Yankee's world cruise, the Blue Dolphin and other famed boats. Beyond adding less than 1% weight, Barfair-ing leaves sails unchanged. It lasts 2 to 3 years—at least 1 even in extreme tropics. $5 a qt. (treats 300 sq. ft. 4 oz. canvas—non-water-proofed fabric only). Ratsey & Lapthorn, New York 64, N. Y.

With a Bunny Bear Carry-Crib stored in the car trunk, baby has the comforts of home anywhere. Rustproof plastic screening in top and sides "air condition" it and keep out insects—a boon for the beach and outdoor naps at home. Top zips wide open. The steel-legged Vinylfilm crib folds like a luggage rack with its 18" x 36" Vinylfilm-covered Tufflex mattress inside. Base is white enamel. $19.95 complete. Carson's, Chicago, Ill.

Like the 1949 Master DeLuxe Barbecue Cart, this 1950 streamlined model achieves barbecueing perfection by two vertical, heat-controlled fire beds that blanket food in reflected heat. The sleek new base detaches all-in-one to convert the cart into an indoor fireplace grill. Modernized chassis is of weatherproofed, rust-resistant plated steel. $38.95, incl. interchangeable broiler and spit. Woodward & Lothrop, Washington, D. C.



This easily-toted Kitch-N-Kamp Griddle cooks picnic "eats" in short order, and does them to a "T." A mere dime-size fire readies it for grilling in one minute. Minus its metal stand, the 10¼" x 16" cast aluminum griddle performs with equal aplomb on the kitchen range or outdoor grill. It's reinforced to prevent warping and a special finish keeps food from sticking. $2.95, with stand. Mayfair Gifts, Forest Hills, N. Y.

ILG VENTILATION

Thousands of women share Mrs. Caster's enthusiasm for the Ilgdualaire Cooling Fan. Some praise its versatility. (At night, it's a window fan, pulling in cool, fresh air, lowering inside temperature 10° to 20°. By day, it's a circulating fan.) Some laud its quietness. (It whispers while it works—you can hardly tell when it's operating.) Others write about its portability. (Any member of the family can easily move it from room to room.) Why should you simmer this summer? Send coupon below for FREE BOOKLET and name of nearby ILG dealer.

The Ilgdualaire features compact, streamline design. Patented Type "Q" Fan Wheel moves more air more quietly. Bracket base pivots for operation from any angle. Other ILG fans for cooling homes, apartments from one to nine rooms.

You asked these questions about

The American Style

How do I recognize the American Style?

You recognize it by its perfect blend of good looks and usefulness. If the design you are looking at leaves anything to be desired in practicality, then it is probably not truly "American." Any product consisting primarily of a facade with only a thin performance behind the facade is ruled out.

Is the American Style traditional or modern?

It might be either—or both—provided it qualifies on the score of usefulness. Antiques and traditional designs are not ruled out, per se. But they must have great functional value. The criterion of performance will eliminate much traditional design—as well as much modern.

Is the American Style a fixed style like Chippendale or Sheraton or Adam or Federal or Early American?

No. You cannot identify it by the shape of a chair leg or the pediment on a chest. Its forms are changing and will continue to change as long as it is an expression of our changing way of life and our changing society. As long as Americans are free to do what they want, this style will never reach a status quo, will constantly be changing and improving as we try to better our living.

Where did the American Style come from?

It grew out of the American soil and our way of doing things. The women who made quilts and hooked rugs, the men who carved buttermolds and fashioned weather vanes, the Shaker furniture makers, the carpenters, the California mission craftsmen—all contributed to our indigenous culture from which this style is emerging.

Why has it taken so long for an American Style to emerge?

Because America has had so many foreign influences to assimilate and merge. Just as our citizens have come from all parts of the world, so have our ideas about form, beauty, and design. These ideas had to be synthesized before we could produce a native expression of our own.

Who is creating the American Style?

Everybody! Designers, factory production managers, technicians, laboratory workers, chemists, architects, decorators, landscape architects, retailers, manufacturers . . . anybody who takes a critical attitude about how we live and tries to improve it by making something better. This style has no oracles, no dictators, no fountainheads. It is made by many forces, interacting on each other, over a long period of time. It is shaped by our national attitudes that make us all want to live better.

Has the American Style been accepted by the people?

Yes. It is the People, above all, who are responsible for it. For, in a society where sales success affects what is made, and how it is made, the customer is King. Wherever the People's Choice is undistorted by geographical distribution or price, sales success amounts to a sort of popular vote on what the people want and like. By spending their money on what they like, the People accept or reject the experimental efforts of designers.

How does the American Style differ from European or Asiatic or Latin-American Styles?

In a truly American design, no shape, or line, or ornament is used for itself alone, because it is authorized by a school, or a government, or court. The shapes of American products are designed to suit their purposes—American purposes, which are in themselves different from those of other people, just as our living habits are different.

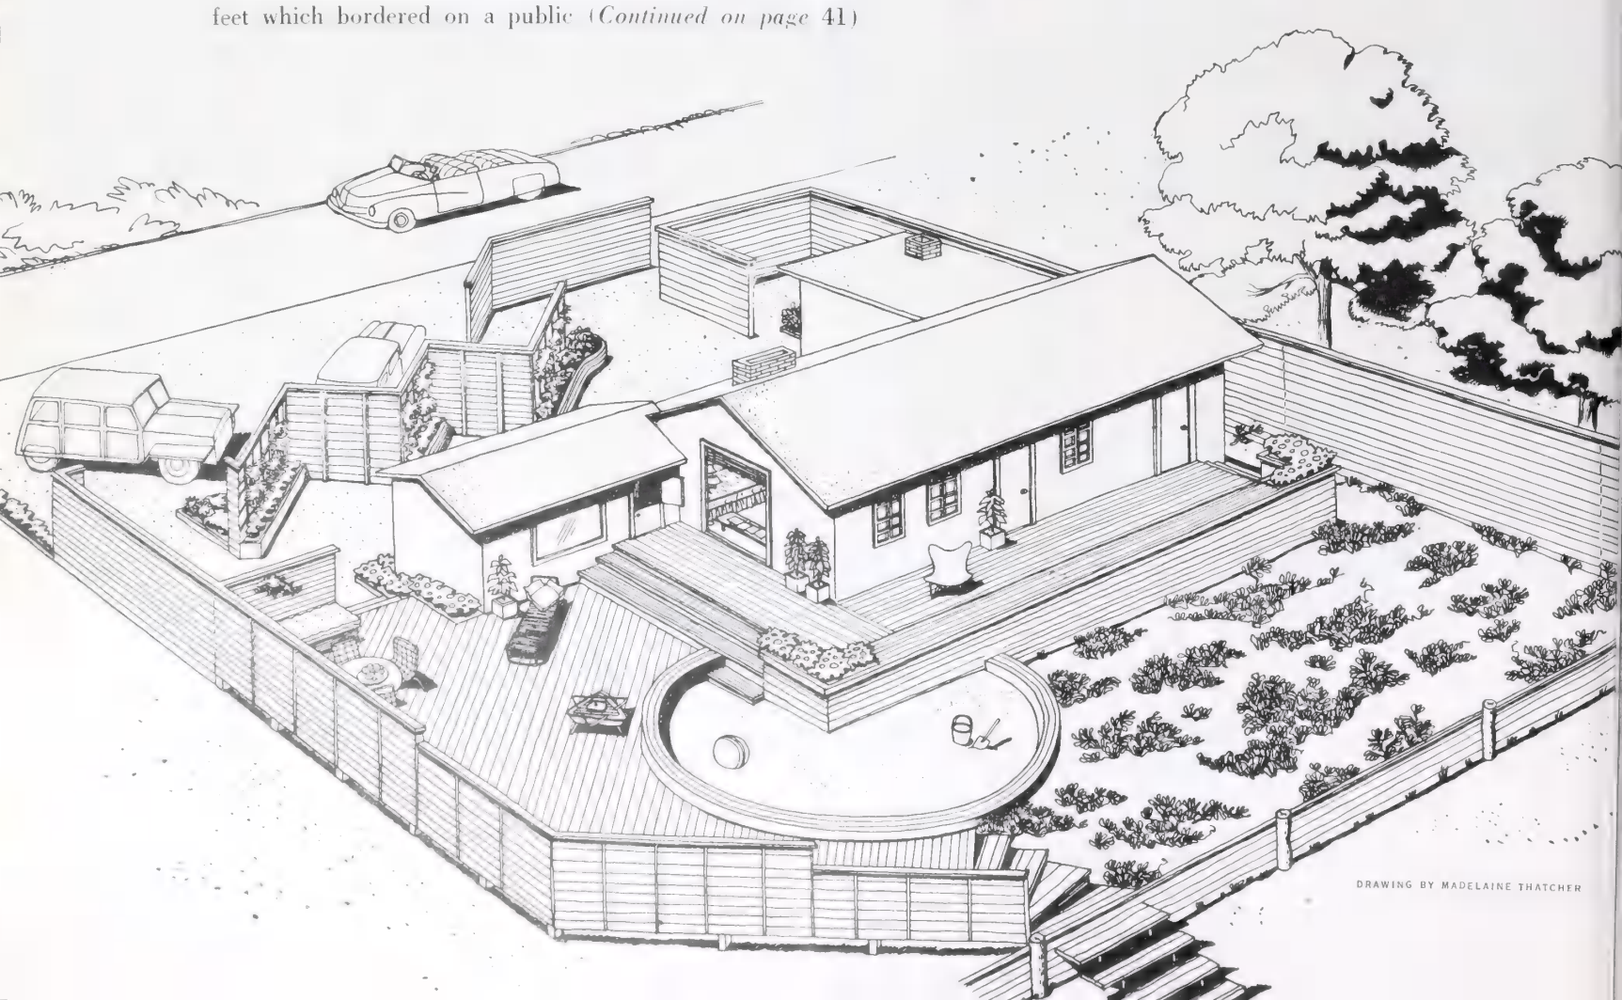
Why hasn't somebody recognized the American Style before now?

Probably because it is hard to see clearly what is closest to us. Perspective about oneself is notoriously elusive. Also, very few people have access to all kinds of sales records in all the fields pertaining to living, as well as access to pace-setting homes in all parts of the country. One without the other would not be enough. Editors of home and shelter magazines are fortunate in having these opportunities. But unless they travel a lot, and have receptive minds to understand what they see, they are likely to miss the essential underlying theme. They must know how to read the whole social scene before they are equipped to draw reliable conclusions.

The American Style means

Enjoyment—not Show

It is primarily a point of view that considers tangible returns in comfort and service more important than superficial effect. This beach house—built, furnished, and landscaped for $12,500 shows what we mean



by Mary Roche

"Yankee ingenuity"—a dominant note in the American character since way back when—is an indispensable ingredient of the American Style. But it amounts to a good deal more than a knack for inventing astonishing mechanical contrivances. It really means a talent for solving very present problems in a very practical way, and coming out with an answer that looks as well as it works.

See what ingenuity has gone into the design of this small beach plot at Aptos, California, and you will recognize the Style. The house, by itself, is nothing. But the property as a whole offers more than many estates three times its size.

The owners—Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Meyer and Charles B. Kuhn—started out with a modest lot measuring 75 by 102 feet which bordered on a public (Continued on page 41)

When fences are angled for privacy, living starts at the lot line. See how zig-zag fence in rear creates off-street parking space, while terrace (seen in color on our cover) more than doubles the area of this unpretentious house.

DRAWING BY MADELAINE THATCHER

High redwood fence gives privacy from neighbors and road, is pleasant textured background for climbing plants. Yellow cushions of "Restfoam," covered with vinyl-coated "Fiberglas" which does not fade or mildew. Furniture designed by Van Keppel-Green; barbecue grill, by Harris Armstrong.

Since the beach below is public, a round sandbox for private sunning was incorporated into the design of the deck and terrace by landscape architect, Thomas Church. Trees soften straight lines of fence bounding property. All of the wood is finished with Cabot's Creosote Shingle Stain.

A zig-zag fence like this one behind the house makes the yard seem bigger than it actually is since a moving line always appears to enclose more space than a straight boundary. The fence sections also provide an ideal place to feature plants where you can enjoy them from inside house.

Your eye is also fooled about the size of this tiny bedroom which looks larger than it is because the decoration really begins with the fence standing several feet outside the window. Your eye travels from the yellow coverlets on the beds, straight out the window, to the yellow fence beyond.

ALL PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER

A huge window looking out on the terrace makes the outdoor area look like another room and expands apparent size of living room. Couch piled high with cushions serves as a sofa during the day, as an extra bed at night.

Roll-up screens are used at windows instead of draperies which would only cut off the ocean view and make more work. All of the floors throughout the house are covered with easy-to-keep-clean asphalt tiles, plus washable rugs.

Enjoyment—not Show

beach. It was hemmed in on both sides by close neighbors, and in the rear by a narrow road backed by a steep cliff. Their obvious problem—securing shelter and furnishings—was solved by the simple method of scrounging: A prefabricated garage, transported from a few miles down the beach, served as a nucleus for a simple house. Furniture was scrounged from relatives' attics and second-hand shops. But the essential problem—securing privacy—was solved by the planning of landscape architect. Thomas D. Church.

The key to this plan is that the owners' living area starts at the lot line. Every square foot of space is put to use: none is squandered for useless window dressing. Privacy is achieved by the ingenious use of fences. These are not the four straight walls of a prison yard, but a graceful series of high, low, curved, oblique, and zig-zag obstacles which gently stop the eye without seeming to confine the owners or repel the neighbors.

The whole design looks as well as it works. The essence of its elegance is that it does work to provide enjoyment.

Wallpaper strewn with giddy pigeons makes the kitchen an inviting spot for informal meals, although dining equipment consists of no more than carpenter-built counter plus high stools. Between meals, counter serves as work space.

How to manipulate Sun and Shade

There are dozens of tricks you can use—on either old or new houses. They range all the way from trees and vines to awnings, overhangs. Then there's the neat trick of making the house shade itself

HOUSE BEAUTIFUL'S CLIMATE CONTROL PROJECT

The most serious climate problem in most parts of the U. S., is our terrific summer heat. Winter cold is no worse in most of the U. S. than anywhere else in the civilized world. Besides, winter cold is fairly easy to deal with: You just heat harder.

But summer heat gets worse in St. Louis, or New York, or Kansas City than it gets in the Congo or in Sumatra, and summer heat is hard to deal with. So our houses should take advantage of every possible means to keep us cool in summer. And there are quite a lot at hand that most people don't use—don't even seem to know about.

One good way to do this is to doctor the sun and shade effects on your house. They're the alpha and omega of summer comfort in the U. S. A.

Sun and shade on your house feel almost like sun and shade on you. You may not believe that. You say: "When I'm indoors, I'm in the shade. That's what I have my house for—to keep out the rain, the wind and the sun, too. What's the difference whether there's sun or shade outside?" But just watch yourself. Get shade on your house in summer, and you'll be a different man or woman. Get sun on it, and you wilt. Get sun in winter, and you feel not nearly so cooped up. And here is the reason why.

When the summer sun shines on a wall, it often heats the outside surface so it is too hot to touch. Naturally, in a few hours some of that heat seeps through to the inside. The inside wall-surface warms up a few degrees. And that's enough. You wilt. A warm wall acts just like a radiant-heating panel. It shines heat at you. (More precisely, it keeps you from shining heat at it. It bottles up your own animal-heat in you. Same net effect.) To do that, a wall doesn't have to be hot. It may still be cool to the touch, only not as cool as usual. That's enough to make the whole room an oven.

And that is how summer heat really comes to us: from our walls (and our ceilings!). I mean the oppressive part of the heat, the last bit that breaks the camel's back. Outdoors in the shade, you often feel alright, even if the air is quite hot and the humidity high. But indoors, surrounded by those faintly warm walls, you wilt.

But why not just open the windows wide and let the breeze blow? Well, of course a breezy room is less hot than a stagnant room. But you still haven't turned off that radiant heat. It keeps shining heat at you regardless of what the air does. You still feel much hotter than you would feel if those walls were cool!

But why not simply draw the window shades? Doing that will only keep the sun from shining into the house. It does not keep the sun from shining on the house. Your walls still get warm. (Continued on page 44)

HOW ONE MAN MANIPULATED HIS OWN SUN AND SHADE

When Victor E. Carbonara decided to build a new house in 1939, he had the advantage over most of us. For Carbonara is a designer and manufacturer of aircraft instruments, celestial-navigation devices, weather instruments. The cookings and blusterings of the atmosphere, the changing paths of the heavenly bodies, have been "old stuff" to him for 20 years. The factors through which climate affects humans—vapor pressure, heat radiation, heat flow through materials, humidity, condensation, wind flow—all that was old stuff to him. And a house, come right down to it, is a device for the control of climate.

In planning his house, he knew he would make full use of comfort machinery. He would have a thoroughly engineered heating plant—which meant air conditioning, de-humidification in summer, attic fans, insulation and so on. An engineer naturally is not shy about using technical aids like machinery. But because he is an engineer, he wants his machinery simple. He doesn't want to do by gadgetry what he can do by basic design—by elaboration what he can do by simplicity. (He'd learned in aircraft work that beautiful gadgetry is bad. It weighs too much and it can fail you at the critical moment.)

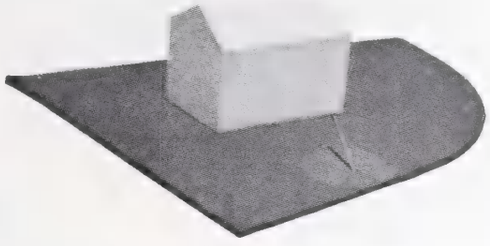
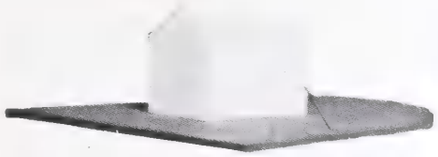
He knew he could not plan an elaborate heating plant until he first had the simpler thing: good insulation. And he would not plan his insulation until he had first done the still simpler thing: Design his house so it gets the necessary shade in summer, all possible sun in winter. For he says: "The sun is the most important thing that we've got."

But how to analyze sun and shade? The sun's path through the sky is different every day. Exactly where would the shadows fall, say, on a July the 4th at 5 P.M.? You try and figure that out on paper and you'll find it quite a job.



Then a house does not necessarily face straight north-and-south. Carbonara had been clever in buying his land. He had found a lot that was pie-shaped, bordering on a curved road. That way, the local building code would not dictate to him which way to face his house. He was free to turn it through a wide range of angles. But which was the best angle?

He faced up to another problem: A house is not always just a rectangular block. It has eaves and ells. Perhaps one wing is two-story, one wing single-story. How would the shadow of the high part fall across the low part?



The problem gets still more complex when you consider each room, and the time of day you want to use it. For example, Carbonara likes to have sunshine with his dinner. Now this is simply not possible on a normal living schedule, in winter. Logically, therefore, he (Continued on page 92)

THE BIGGEST THING IN CLIMATE CONTROL IS SUN CONTROL

Winter

The "naked" house, without overhanging eaves, is a poor deal. It's hot in summer. You see lots of them, especially in postwar houses built strictly to a price. An overhanging roof costs money and this money does not produce more or bigger rooms. It does not make the house easier to sell. It merely makes it more livable for the occupants after it is sold!

ROOF OVERHANG

Winter

The simplest tool of Sun Control you see right here: the overhanging roof on the south side of the house. In summer (top) it keeps the sun off your house and keeps you much cooler. In winter (above) it lets the sun into your windows and against your wall. It's cheerful, it saves you fuel money, and it also makes the house much more comfortable to live in.

SHED ROOF

Winter

A "shed roof" makes sense, for it has the strongest Climate Control effect—if the high side faces south. Compare it with roof at left. Both give equal shade in summer. In winter conventional roof shades top part of house. If it is a two-story house, whole top floor is shaded. Shed roof lets both stories have all the winter sun. Sun shines deep into all rooms.

A west-facing porch isn't very useful unless it is shaded from low sun. This cure does two things: makes porch more habitable, and stops sun heat before it hits walls of house itself. Pair of aluminum Venetian blinds turn back sun rays, store away in protective boxes up on ceiling when sun is gone. A perfect control measure for keeping west wall of house cool. Home of Dana Lathams.

The best way to keep the house comfortable in summer is to keep the walls from warming up. The obvious way to do that is to keep the sun off the walls. (Even after you've exhausted all the possibilities of doing this, you still insulate your walls.)

In winter the story is the same—only the other way 'round. How you feel depends a lot on the temperature of your walls! If the walls are cool, they shine coolness at you, and you feel cool. Now, it's easier to make up for wall-chill than to make up for those oppressive warm walls. All you have to do is heat harder. But still, it's hard to get quite comfortable in a room with a cool wall. If you heat hard enough to make up for wall-chill, then the air in the room gets overheated and stuffy.

In other words, there are many ways to keep warm. You can have warm air and cool walls, or cool air and warm walls, or middling air and middling walls. You may feel warm enough in any of these three ways, but there's a different flavor to the warmness. It has to do with the feel of the air in your lungs, in your nose, on your skin, with the humidity of the air (overheated air gets very dry). It also has to do with such things as the ozone content of the air. The doctors do not yet understand ozone—but it's a big Factor X. The flavor of the warmness of a house has a strong effect on body and nerves and mind. Generally, you'll feel more cheerful, less cooped-up if the air is not too warm and the walls not too cool.

EMIL SCHMIDLIN, ARCHITECT

The "eyebrow" for south walls and windows

When you don't have a roof overhang (as in two-story houses) to cast shade on south walls and windows, all is not lost. Use an eyebrow. It can be made of canvas, vines, wood louvers—anything the sun won't shine through. An eyebrow can be added to old houses that were built before we understood about such things. A trellis to support deciduous vines looks well anywhere.

Canvas eyebrow (on House Beautiful's Pace-Setter House of 1949) is lashed inside iron frame. Canvas is taken down for the winter, so does not cast any shade in months you welcome full sun. Combination of eyebrow and roof overhang produce 100% shade on south wall in hottest months of the year.

DESIGNED BY STYER'S NURSERY FOR 1950 PHILADELPHIA FLOWER SHOW

Sun in winter

Shade in summer

So, if you can get the winter sun to shine on your walls, it does make a difference. You save money, because you don't have to heat so hard. You get the benefit of sunny weather even though perhaps you don't go outdoors at all. You feel more cheerful. You feel warm in a more pleasant way.

But back to summer heat and how to beat it.

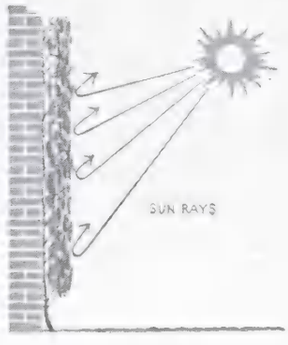
Your best weapon against the sun is your roof—if it's designed to be a sun-weapon. For it can shade vertical walls. If it wasn't designed right, there are often things you can do to fix it—or at least improve it. (See pictures on page 43.)

The best place to begin is on the west side of your house. Why the west side? Isn't the south side the hot side of a house?

Right here is one of the big ideas in Climate Control. In winter, yes, the south side is the warmest side. But in summer, the heaviest heat hits the house from the west! It's a good thing to know if you want to build a house, buy a house, rent a house —or even rent an apartment: The hot side is the west side.

Why is that? Let's follow the sun around on a summer day. (What follows is true, in general, for any place in the northern half of the U.S. It is true, in general, for any summer day. It is exactly true only for places very near the 42nd parallel—say, Salt Lake City, Omaha, Des Moines, Chicago, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, New York; and only for the longest days of the year. The times stated are "local apparent (Continued on next page)

EDWARD HUNTSMAN-TROUT LANDSCAPE ARCHITECT



Vines—nature's shade-maker

Leaves are ideally suited to stop sun heat You can grow a whole wall of them inexpensively and fairly quickly—depending on where you live. Use them to shade terraces, porches or western walls. For more about vines, turn to page 103.

Ivy, growing on an chain-link fence, can be a fine shade-maker on the west side of a paved terrace or porch. It grows fairly fast, and makes a handsome barrier. A creeper vine on masonry wall makes a fine sun-stopper. (See below.)

Shade where you want it in the garden

Should your house be not blessed with trees, and if the house itself doesn't throw shade where you want to sit, copy this handsome shade-maker, designed by Robert Anshen for Mrs. Sylvia Silverstone in Taxco, Mexico. It's made of shingle splits, and supported on two handsome stone columns.

time." "Standard Time," shown on your clock, may differ by up to 30 minutes: "Daylight Saving Time" by up to an hour and a half. But forget about those technicalities. Let's get on to the general idea of how the sun moves.

On a summer morning, the sun rises not in the east, but more nearly in the northeast. For several hours, therefore, it shines on the north wall of the house! The south wall is still in the shade. But mostly, of course, the morning sun shines on the east wall. It hits the north side at a small angle: the heating effect is not very great. It hits the east wall at a blunt angle, almost head-on. The heating effect on the east wall is therefore quite strong. But, comfort-wise, it does not do much harm. The air is still cool at that time of day: the house itself is still full of stored-up night-coolness; in fact, on a June or September morning, you may often welcome this early shot of sun heat.

At 8 A.M. the sun is exactly in the east, fairly high in the sky. The east wall gets strong radiation. But the north side now goes into the shade: the south side begins to get sun. Note that the sun doesn't come around to shine on it until quite late in the morning.

Toward noon, the sun's angle on the east wall becomes so small that its heating effect fades out; and of course at noon the east wall goes into the shade. During the noon hours, now, the south side faces the sun most. But it doesn't get as hot as you might expect. Even on a "naked" house, without roof-overhang, the summer noon sun has less heating power than you might expect. It shines against the south wall from so high, and hits it at so steep an angle. That is one reason why the south side, the warmest side in winter, is not the hottest side in summer. An hour of high-angle summer noon sunshine delivers less heat against your south wall than does an hour of low-angle winter noon sunshine!

At 8 A.M. the sun is exactly in the east, fairly high in the from now on till sunset. In hours of sunshine and angle of sunshine, it gets exactly the same treatment from the afternoon sun that the east wall got from the morning sun. But the difference is, meanwhile, the day itself has become hot. The air is hot. The house has lost its night-coolness. So now, this afternoon sun is what pushes the day over the brink—from good to bad; from what the human body can easily handle over to what makes it suffer considerable discomfort.

By 4 P.M. the sun is exactly in the west. Now the south wall

How to use a shade tree

When shade tree is directly west of screened porch, you get welcome morning sun for breakfast on porch or under tree. By lunch time, the terrace itself is completely shaded. As the sun moves around, the tree keeps deadly afternoon sun-heat off house walls.

Shade for the small garden is in the shade for the rest of the day and begins to cool off. (That is another reason why the south side is not the hot side in summer: It gets the summer sun late in the morning and loses it early in the afternoon. It actually gets fewer hours of sunshine in summer than in winter!)

The west side now gets more and more sun heat as the afternoon wears on. The lower the sun sinks, the more squarely does it hit the west wall, and the more powerful become its rays. In the dry, clear west, the sun is sometimes at its most terrific just before sunset. In the humid east, the sunshine finally cools down a little during the last couple of hours, because the sun sinks down into haze and vapor. But even so, it's still hot. And this late afternoon burst of heat stores itself in the walls and keeps the house hot long after sunset.

But against the killingly hot, low afternoon sun of summer, an overhanging roof on the west side of your house does not help you at all. (Continued on page 91)

A $25,000 Pace-Setter House

proves that ideas—not dollars—make better living

Since last month, when this home was first opened to the public, a lot of house-hungry people have gone through it. What they saw was revolutionary in the subdivision field. Here was a builder's house (he'll ultimately erect about 230 in this tract), built on an average-sized lot, with the looks, privacy, comfort, and amenities of an estate. The U.S.A. is full of houses costing twice the price and offering less in livability.

People ask: How can I get a house like this? The answer is simple: You can do it—and without being a millionaire—but you must know what's really important in a home and what's not. You must understand thoroughly what makes good value.

On these seven pages, you can see how this particular "good value" was accomplished: how the house was placed on its lot to yield sunny, wind-free living areas; how fences and plantings were used to win privacy from neighbors and street; how the house was furnished for casual good (Continued on page 51)

ALL DRAWINGS BY GEORGE COOPER RUDOLPH AND ASSOCIATES

The climate is "marginal." Like much of California, you can live outdoors in daytime most of the year IF you can be in the sun and out of the wind. House accomplishes this by wrapping itself around the terrace. Fences and planting also give wind control—plus privacy. In spring and fall this principle applies everywhere in U. S.

Street front faces north. By placing garage on northwest corner, front door gets a protected wind-free stoop. A 5-ft. fence gives privacy and wind protection to living room and porch. Result: a handsome yet unpretentious façade aimed not at impressing the passers-by, but at providing good living for the occupants.

You've a private—and better—climate on this southeast terrace. Protected from west winds and exposed to full sun, spring and fall weather will be really summery here. For rainy weather, the big porch offers protection; while for hot afternoons, the shaded northeast terrace offers a fine, outdoor sitting area.

House Beautiful's 3 Pace-Setter houses are on exhibition until Sept. 27. Read how to get there on page 106

You can have a Pace-Setter house and keep your homespun taste, too. Good modern design sets definite standards for performance but does not dictate style. So in the living-dining room, above, pine and chintz wallpaper and homey textures look perfectly natural with broad areas of glass. Note also how the part of the house you live in (see plan opposite) gets the desirable morning and early afternoon sunshine.

Cherry furniture of unaffected simplicity is the mainstay of the master bedroom. Desk and bench are pine. Contrasting color of printed drapery fabric accentuates "basic" color scheme. Keeping walls, bedspreads, carpet closely color-related makes room seem larger. Each bedroom has big closets, each its easy access to wide terrace. Such thoughtful Pace-Setter planning adds psychic dimension to even the smallest bedroom.

looks and easy maintenance. You can see that precious little attention was paid to "what people would think." Instead, they concentrated on the Big Three—Climate Control, Privacy, and the unpretentious hospitality that's characteristic of the emerging American Style.

Not that this house makes a bad neighbor—far from it. Take the problem of privacy. It's a two-way proposition; if you lack privacy, then your neighbor does too. So any measure you take to protect yourself also protects him. And sometimes these measures are surprisingly simple. If you study the plan of this Pace-Setter (right, below), you'll see that practically every window of the house overlooks its own garden. Now this costs no more than having them looking into your neighbor's drying yard. But it does take more knowledge and imagination —yours or your architect's or your builder's.

If you want winter sun flooding your living room the way it does in this house, you can get it. But only if you plan the room, the house, in fact, the plot with this in mind. The same thing goes for the master bedroom (bottom, opposite page.) Here you wake up to a real country vista, secluded and private. It's a good 200 ft. to the house behind; careless design would have windows looking right into the next-door kitchen 15 ft. away. That's why these rooms are bargains—somebody antici-

Both plot plan (above) and floor plan (below) help to make a better climate

Placed as near northwest corner of the plot as law allows, L-shaped house deflects winds yet gives outdoor living areas full benefit of sun. See how skillfully fences provide privacy and help control wind.

See how all major rooms are arranged to face south and east, toward sun and away from winds. Contrarywise, all service areas face north and west. Whole house gains privacy from this plan—plus fences.

Added delights of this house are the terraces off each bedroom. Seen through master-bedroom windows, below, is double chest that supplements pair of large closets. Good built-in storage space calls for less furniture, allows you more money to buy good pieces.

The living room is all the more livable because it is open to the garden on three sides. This would have been impractical were it not for the fences which insure privacy indoors as well as out. Tweedy textured carpet, leather lounge chair, a pouf that rolls, and a long sofa all provide for the creature comforts.

If you like the casual, lived-in look of these rooms, you're right in step with a major trend. For, if there's anything that marks the American Style, it's the discovery that a really well-designed, modern house offers a friendly background to good furnishings of any period. Our ancestors understood the importance of functionalism as well as we do. (Sometimes, for all their scanty resources, they understood it even better.)

So you don't need to apologize if your taste runs to old, mellowed oak instead of chrome and glass. What you do want to watch is that the pieces you buy have inherent simplicity, and fitness for the job they'll do for you. If you use these criteria in furnishing a house, you'll be surprised how well the pieces live together. And if you use the same criteria in buying, building, or remodeling a house, you can't go far wrong either.

Third bedroom, right, though small, serves adequately as study, doubles as guest room. Wall of windows and door to terraces are curtained in white print splashed with red and green leaves. Cotton carpet is mixture of red, green, and black. Furniture is pine or painted provincial.

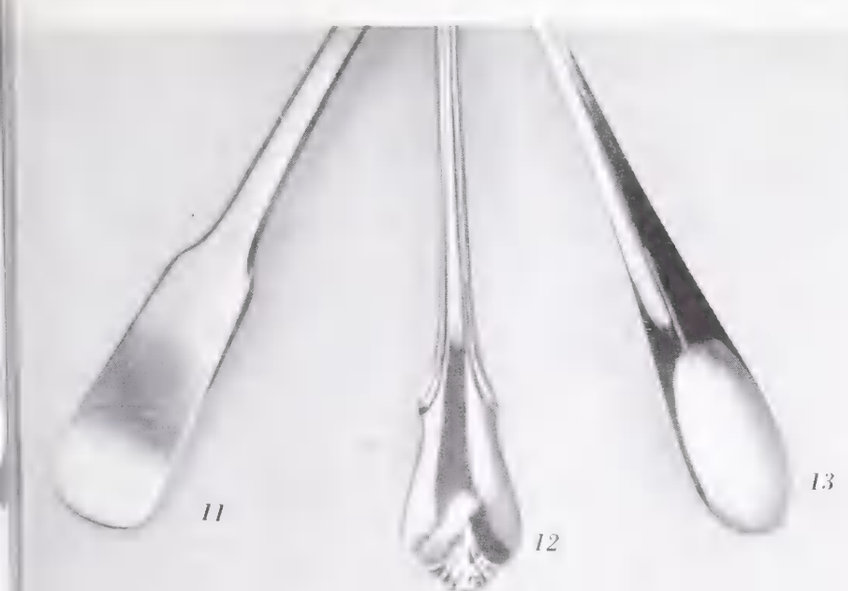
The American Style in Silver



American silverware, with a look all its own, exemplifies our native talent for simplification. It's significant that our oldest surviving patterns are invariably the simplest. And our newest designs, even the most ornate of them, are tempered with a kind of elegant common sense, which makes them practical to use and enjoy day after day in our informal, servantless homes.

The classic Paul Revere bowl symbolizes the typically American faculty for simplification. Today Lunt's reproduction (above) captures this same purity of design.

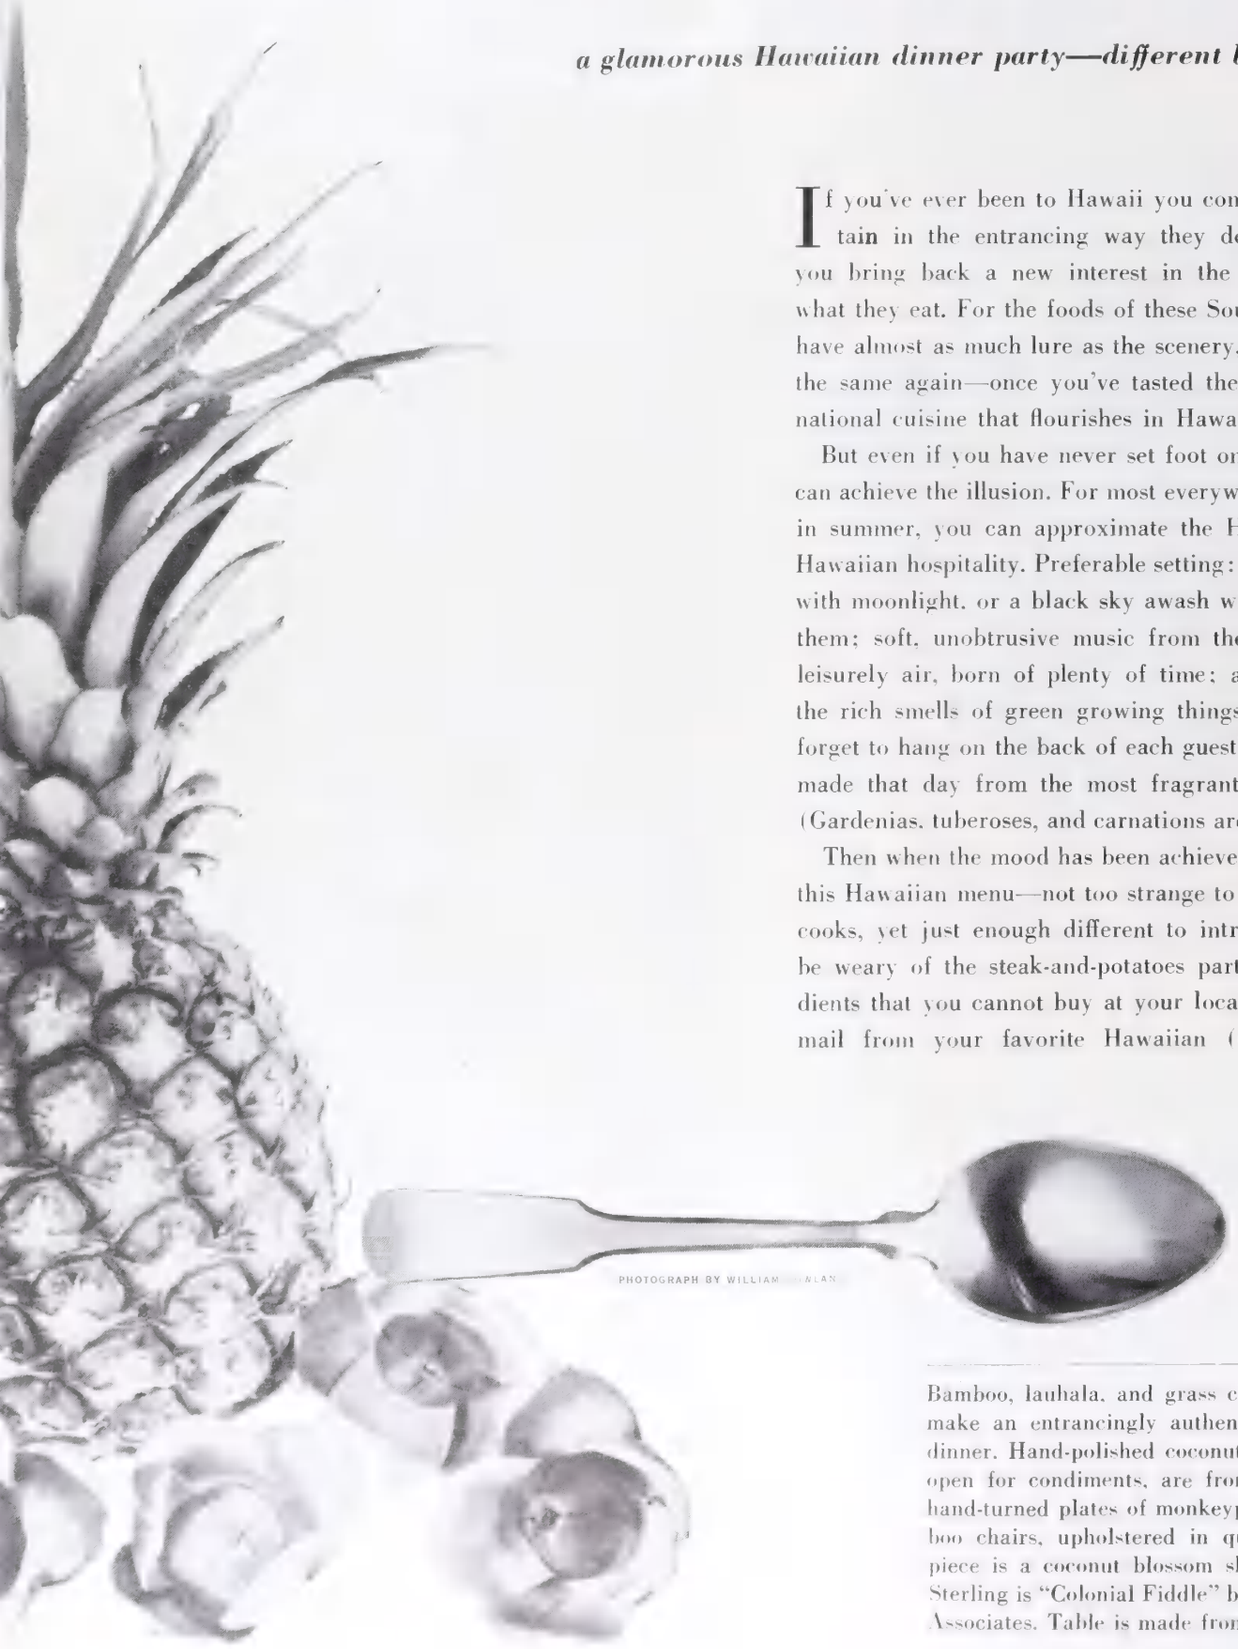
Give a different kind of Dinner Party



by Alice Spalding Bowen

A famous Honolulu hostess tells how to give a glamorous Hawaiian dinner party—different but not too different

If you've ever been to Hawaii you come back wanting to entertain in the entrancing way they do it in the Islands. And you bring back a new interest in the way they cook—and in what they eat. For the foods of these South Sea American islands have almost as much lure as the scenery, and you are never quite the same again—once you've tasted the cosmopolitan and international cuisine that flourishes in Hawaii.

But even if you have never set foot on an Hawaiian island you can achieve the illusion. For most everywhere in the United States, in summer, you can approximate the Hawaiian atmosphere and Hawaiian hospitality. Preferable setting: a warm night made white with moonlight, or a black sky awash with stars: flowers—lots of them; soft, unobtrusive music from the Islands—on records; a leisurely air, born of plenty of time; a fragrant breeze bearing the rich smells of green growing things. Most important: Don't forget to hang on the back of each guest's chair a fresh flower lei, made that day from the most fragrant blossoms you can find. (Gardenias, tuberoses, and carnations are all favorites in Hawaii.)

Then when the mood has been achieved, regale your guests with this Hawaiian menu—not too strange to be executed by Mainland cooks, yet just enough different to intrigue the palate that may be weary of the steak-and-potatoes party routine. All the ingredients that you cannot buy at your local stores can be bought by mail from your favorite Hawaiian (Continued on page 99)

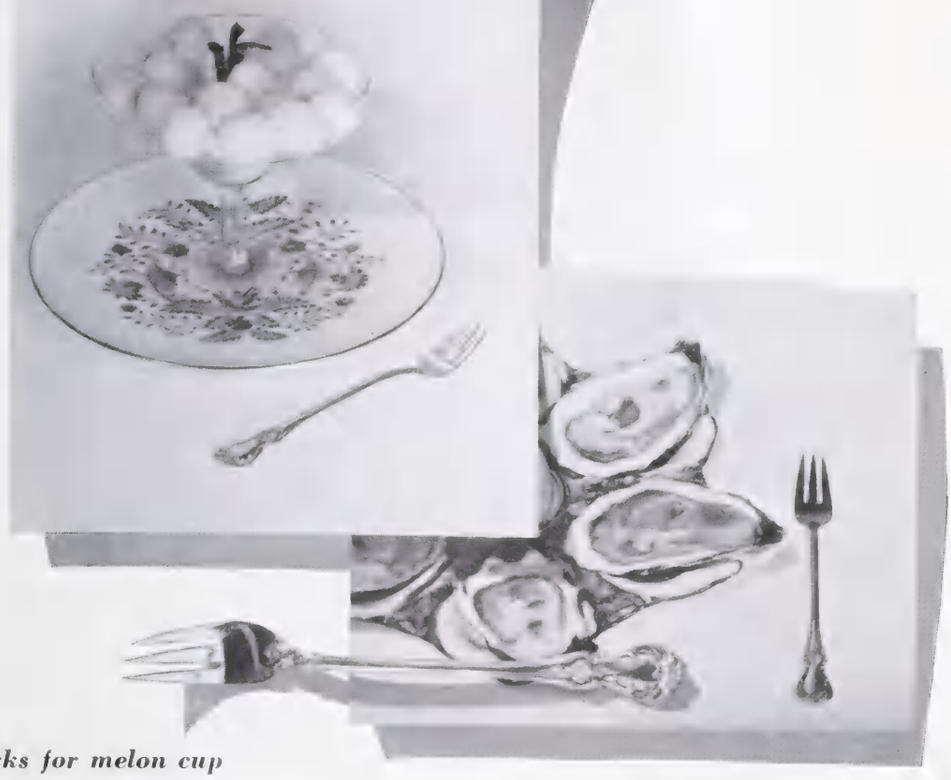
How Versatile can Silver be?

Once you recognize its hidden talents, you'll get more use and enjoyment from your silver



by Frances Heard

It's an almost universal American trait to use one object for more than one purpose. It's a game with us to learn how to make our possessions—apparel or furniture or appliances—work overtime. But frequently we forget to apply this kind of practical thinking to our silver. All too often we use our oyster forks just for oysters and bring out the wine cooler only on state occasions. It's time we recognized all the extra-curricular jobs our silver can perform. For this is the only way to get the most use and enjoyment out of it.

New chores for pie knives

Pie is their specialty, but they also come in handy when you're serving a dish like mushrooms on toast. You can also put them to work dispensing cakes and small pastries. Reed & Barton.

Oyster forks for melon cup

Other obvious uses for oyster forks are for seafood cocktails, broiled lobster, or crab. They also perform handily as pickle servers. "Old Master" forks, Towle Mfg. Co.

Dessert spoons for cereal or soup

These spoons can be pressed into service at almost any meal. Use them for cereal at breakfast, for cream soup at luncheon, or even as serving spoons for twosome dinners. They're the "King Richard" pattern by Towle Mfg. Co.

Sugar tongs cope with broccoli

They are precision instruments for picking up asparagus or broccoli, fried shrimps or fried oysters. Used with a spoon, they expertly manipulate the solids in creamed dishes like creamed mushrooms or eggs. They also come in handy as tongs for ice cubes. Reed & Barton.

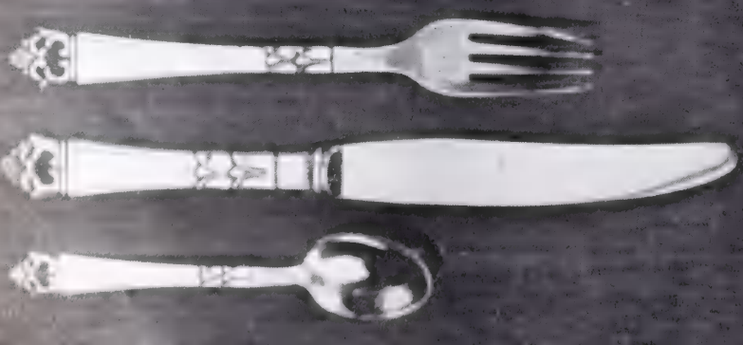
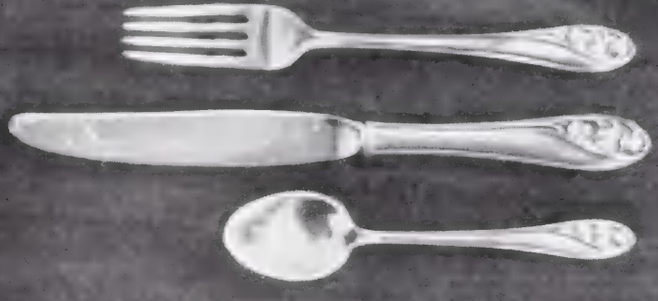
It's deep enough to accommodate corn on the cob, carrots, asparagus, broccoli, celery and olives. This serviceable tray is made by Wallace Silversmiths. The "Cathay" glass flower holder, Imperial Glass Corp.



It's far more important for china, silver, and glass to share the same design feeling than to match exactly. Form and pattern of Spode "Valencia" plate simply suggest Seneca's fluted goblet and Stieff's textured "Corsage" silver.

Match motifs, but do it with restraint. Seashell pattern of Wallace's new "Romance of the Sea" sterling, picked up in embroidered organdy by Marghab Linens, is enhanced by unadorned Wedgwood plate and Heisey glasses.

The very silhouette of a silver pattern may cue a china pattern. Tulip shape of Paul Wilken's "Danish Crown" flatware suggested Royal York China's tulip-blooming plate. To match its green leaves, Fostoria's "Colonial Dame" glass.



Forget "period authenticity." Concentrate on congenial design. Time-honored shell motif of Samuel Kirk's "King" sterling resembles mid-era leaves of Flintridge's "Twilight" china. Calyx-shape glass is Cambridge's "Georgian."

Matching motifs must match in scale and character, like the clear-cut valley lilies in Booths' china from Georg Jensen and Gorham's new "Lily of the Valley" sterling. Multi-facet glass goblet is Tiffin's "Karen."

How to Combine Patterns

Let there be a continuity of design between your silver and your other tableware. When things are appropriate to each other, they look their best. When design, quality, and color are compatible, you can't miss Dark mahogany gives a room warmth and dignity. Light mahogany is cheerful, more informal. Which atmosphere do you want to have?

by Kenneth Young

The joy of starting out with simple furniture is that it lets you develop your own ideas in whatever direction they may lead. If it comes in a choice of light or dark finishes like these pieces designed by John Gartman for the Drexel Furniture Company, your scope is greater still. Their simple lines leave you as free as air to be yourself.

Do you like a dark finish? Does it suggest warmth and solid comfort and repose? Then choose these designs in cordovan mahogany—and take off from there. You can be as formal as you like. But you are not compelled to dress up the room with stately brocades and solemn accessories in the classic manner. Even with the conventional color scheme of blue and gold, you can create a welcoming background that is easy and personal. (Continued on page 71)

A large storage piece, even in a dark finish, won't look like a dusky elephant if the accessories are in a similar bold scale. The pierced brass lamp, tall enough to shed light over a wide area, fills the decorative role far better than half-a-dozen dinky trinkets. If you like dark wood

You can set off its warm glow without being stiff and somber. Fabrics and accessories in the American Style have a quiet dignity, and a friendly air as well. Would you rather have a light finish? Has it always seemed to you more cheerful, more youthful? Then choose this furniture in bleached mahogany, and build around it the kind of room that gives a hint of informal country living—even in a city apartment. It doesn't have to look country bumpkin or provincial. But it needn't be cold and monastic either. You can start with the same blue for the walls and go to green—the fresh leaf-green of a country garden lush with wavy delphiniums. The paintings and the accessories can provide that tie with the past that gives the room a familiar, lived-in look.

Study these photographs and see how you can take the same room, the same wall color and the same designs in furniture, and dress them up, or down, according to your personal choice of finish, fabrics, and accessories.

What makes a week end wonderful?

A beach cottage like this one—planned to pare work to a minimum, with temper-saving conveniences for all

If a houseful of guests means a week end of lonely slaving to the hostess and shadowy feelings of guilt to the rest, those three precious days will not be carefree for anyone. But they could be. And you don't have to own a small hotel with a staff of servants to make the holiday live up to everyone's hopes. It's the planning of your house, not the size of it, that counts.

Here is a minimum cottage with only 775 square feet of floor space, but see how much living can be packed into it! It sleeps five people in comfort, gives them all the amenities, and at the same time lets the hostess be one of the party. Facilities are pared to save work. How to live at peace with the Gulf Coast Climate

by Buford L. Pickens
Director, School of Architecture
Tulane University

You can learn a lot about your own housing problems by studying the old houses of New Orleans and the surrounding countryside. For nowhere else in the U.S.A. did our ancestors build houses better suited to their particular climate than along the Gulf Coast.

They had a limited number of local materials to work with—cypress, brick and tile, oyster-shell plaster. And they had no fancy instruments for measuring sun, wind, humidity, and the like. But they did have taste, imagination, and common sense; and with them, they built houses which today everybody admires—but does not necessarily understand. For too many people copy the superficial forms and completely miss the basic design principles which gave these old houses distinction. These principles were quite simple.

The early French settlers knew that, to get the most out of the Gulf Coast climate, their houses and gardens had to be designed for it. They found that the North European houses, which were planned exclusively for protection against the cold, were not the answer.

You can't transplant Normandy Rural, Massachusetts Colonial, or even California "Ranch House" to the Deep South if you hope to enjoy the kind of open-door, relaxed living that is possible most of the year.

You need a different kind of house for the equable but humid summers and mild winters in the luxurious land of live oaks, magnolias, and Spanish moss.

In a strip of flat lowland about a hundred miles wide, along the Gulf of Mexico (from East Texas through Lower Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, and Upper Florida) you can live pleasantly all year round amid lush green trees and an ever-changing variety of blooming flowers and shrubs. And your architect

Creole climate—sweet but hot

If you live in the white area on the map above, you have the climate described in this story. To the west and northwest, you can expect less sunshine, colder and drier winters. To the east, you get more sunshine and—to the southeast—warmer winters. But, anywhere at all on this map, you have a genial climate with two big flaws—high heat and humidity on midsummer days. A climate-conscious house will smooth out even those flaws.

can, if you let him, plan your house and yard to tame the heat.

What is even more important, he can, by design, control that more devastating element—humidity—with its physical discomfort, mildew, and fungus growths. The remedies are sure and fairly simple, but to work well they should be basic and built-in, not timidly grafted on.

A careful look at the temperature behavior along the Gulf Coast shows that the architect has an easier problem here than he would have in the North. The warm waters of the Gulf of Mexico prevent temperatures from dropping very low. The coldest weather varies only from 25° to 45° F., lasts for less than a twentieth of the year, and occurs mostly at night. For somewhat less than a third of the year, the temperature stays in the cool bracket, between 45° and 65°. But for more than half the year it is nearly ideal, in the comfortable range 65° to 85°. Uncomfortable temperatures above 85° average about one-tenth of the year.

Considering the great amount of time the thermometer stays above 45°, central heating is almost a luxury, just as summer cooling would be in Maine. In fact, the northern emphasis on heat-making and heat-storing equipment is almost exactly reversed. And air-conditioning equipment for cooling, drying, and moving the air takes on the importance that radiators and furnaces have in the North. Furthermore, there is no need for the compact house structure so appropriate to the North. Many of these features to counteract the cold would not only be extravagant, along the Gulf they would actually interfere with comfort for at least two-thirds of the year.

The real hitch in Gulf Coast house design comes first, from the sweltering one-tenth of the year when temperatures rise above 85° and solar radiation is most intense. For it is then that the humidity is greatest and the air is muggy and oppressive. It is then that frequent rains and occasional cloudbursts come—when you can expect to have as much as five and a half inches of rainfall within a 24-hour period. Considering all these extremes, together with the low verdant landscape that doesn't provide much shade, you have a unique set of design conditions.

How can your house in this area control these conditions? What can you learn from old houses, tested through 150 years? And how can you use the present-day scientific knowledge of construction and materials?

Forget, for the moment, about any special style or building type, and consider only what your Gulf Coast house should do for you. Most of the year it should provide pleasant, open-vented shelter—shelter from the sun and rain, yet open to catch or make a breeze. The sun's heat is intense. So you need important arrangements for shade, using (Continued on next page)

Three time-tested devices for Climate Control:

1 The gallery

2 The elevated living floor

3 The umbrella roof

A century and a half ago, the Bayou country had already evolved a whole range of efficient architectural devices for coping with its peculiar climate. In addition to those above, there are the patio (page 77), the louver (page 78), and the floor-to-ceiling opening (page 79). You can see that these devices are still valid today.

Gulf Coast Climate

to their fullest the insulated roof, the louvered wall and screen, and heat-absorbing trees and plants. Whatever their arrangement, walls and floors must not store up daytime heat that would linger on into the night.

You must invite, even force, a flow of air throughout the house. There are many ways of doing this. Not only is this necessary for comfort but also to minimize conditions that cause bacteria and mould to grow in clothes, in books, and in the materials of the house, itself. Yet all these arrangements must be flexible enough so that ventilation can be easily shut off for a third of the year. Main living rooms should be well above the moisture and insects of the ground.

And finally, the scheme of the house should provide ample opportunity for you to step from inside to outer air, either on porch, terrace, or yard. For more than half the year your garden can be living space, and as such needs shade, privacy, ventilation, and especially drainage.

Dr. Paul A. Siple, the climatologist who mapped HOUSE BEAUTIFUL'S weather-architecture charts, suggests that "during the major (Continued on page 104)

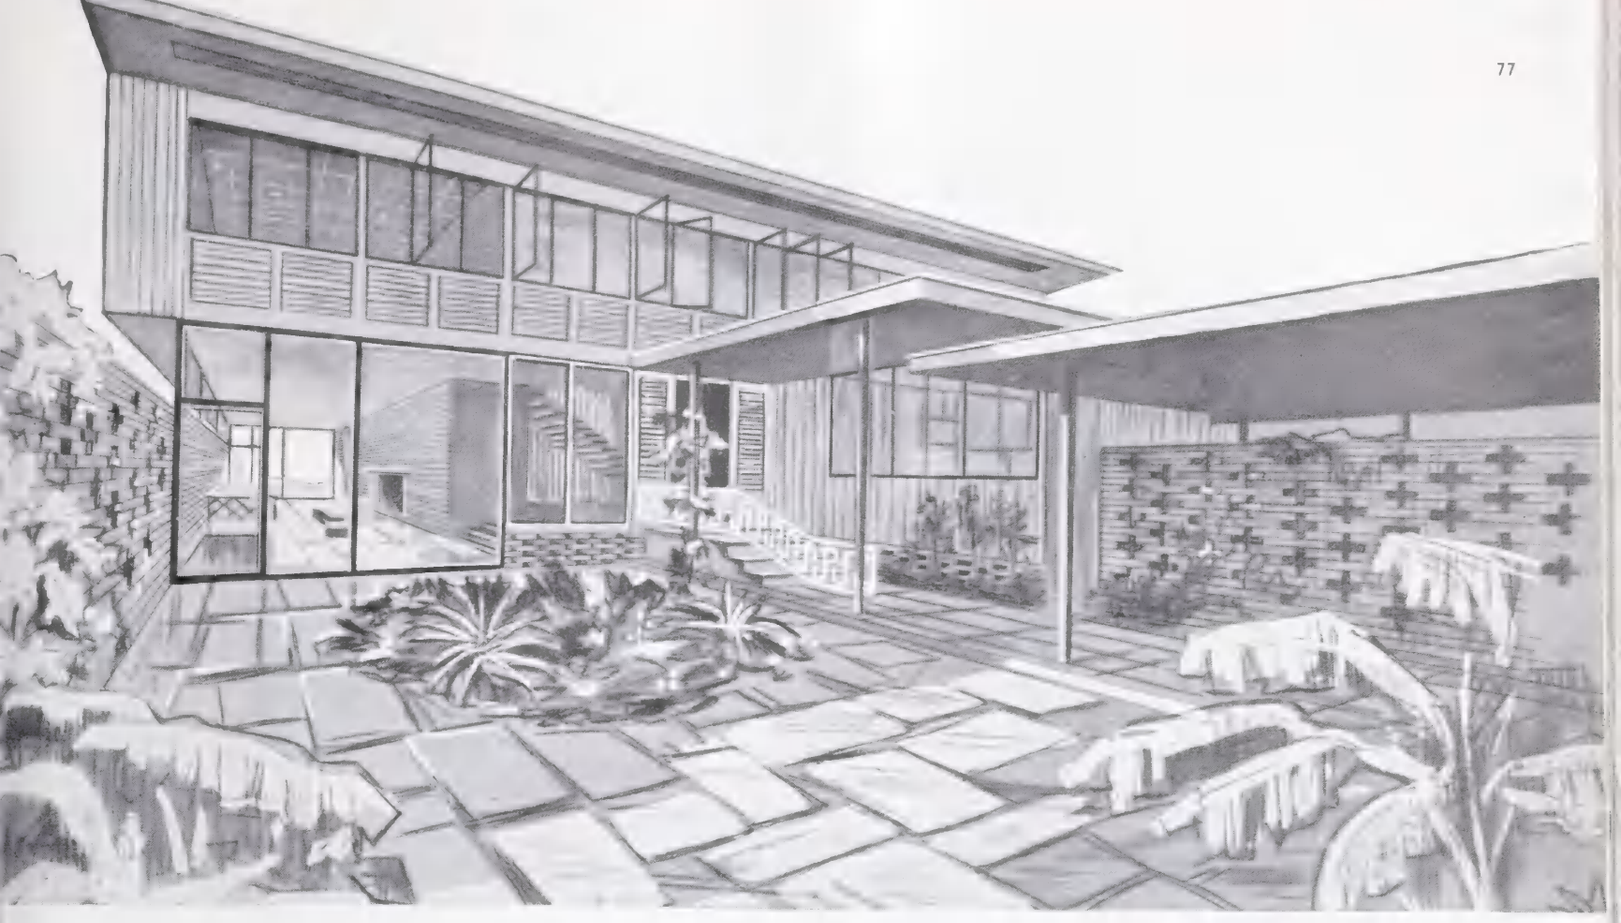
A house for Gulf Coast Living



If you feel that new ideas like Climate Control always lead to bizarre forms, then study this house. See how well it blends the best of past and present

Many people seem to think that, in a genial climate like New Orleans', a house is a simple thing to design. The inhabitants know better. Like the architects of this house, they know that their climate, like any other, has good and bad aspects. They know that a really satisfactory house must exploit the one and minimize the other. And this house is a good example of how to go about it. The architects have carefully planned and sited it for best exposure to weather, street, and services. They have placed it under a wide aluminum umbrella of a roof to protect it from subtropic sun and rain. They've equipped it with north and south walls so flexible that they can easily be converted from 100% closed to almost 100% open. They've worked out ingenious solutions to problems of privacy, ventilation, and sun control. They've specified materials and equipment that take the punishment of the hot, humid summers. Result: a handsome, friendly house.

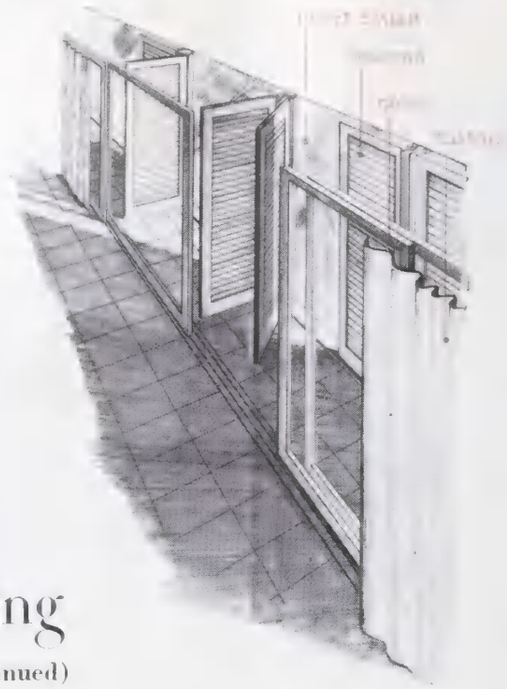
From the patio, you can see how this house is arranged. Carport and service yard, behind pierced brick wall, occupy northwest corner of lot. Covered entrance walk to front door (center) is part of flagged patio which, shaded in afternoon, flows into screened loggia (left). With its big fireplace, this loggia is fine for rainy days, cool nights. Winter sun pocket lies beyond it.



Second floor is airy and shaded in hot weather, sunny and snug in cold—and private the year round. When it's hot, flexible walls fold back to admit breeze; aluminum roof, insulation, and attic fans team up to fight sun heat. When it's cold, walls close up, sun comes in, winter air conditioner snaps on. Floor-to-ceiling louvers give you any degree of privacy you want.

First floor rests on a concrete platform, stilted 2½ ft. off ground for subfloor ventilation. It is placed so that paved carport and service yard open directly off street to north. This enables architects to face dining and living rooms and loggia toward south—direction of summer breeze and winter sun. For pictures of these handsome rooms, turn the page.

Gulf Coast Living

To do its job, the southern wall must be flexible; and to be flexible, its functions must be separated—so that you can use them in any combination. See how this wall allows you actually to filter the weather, taking those elements you want and excluding those you don't. This principle applies everywhere in varying degrees.

Cool to look at and cool to live in, the living room is pictured here as it might look on a warm March or October afternoon. In midsummer, no sun at all enters room. For colder weather, you'd close the glass doors and perhaps put rugs on the polished terrazzo floors.

Entire south wall above is a flexible system of floor-to-ceiling louvered shutters and sliding glass doors. Behind a continuous sheet of insect screen, this allows house to be 100% open, 100% closed, or anything in between. Width of balconies is calculated to exclude summer sun, blowing rain, but it admits most winter sun.

COLOR DRAWINGS BY GEORGE COOPER RUDOLPH

For all its balminess, there's a lot of Gulf Coast weather when you'd like to be outdoors but can't because of torrential rains, blistering sun, insects. And there are plenty of cool evenings, when a fire tips the scale between comfort and chill. For such times, this screened loggia is ideal. Note entrance gates beyond patio.

HOW YOU CAN GET CHARTS AND TECHNICAL DATA ON CLIMATE CONTROL

Through the cooperation of the American Institute of Architects, technical reports on HOUSE BEAUTIFUL'S Climate Control Project are being published for the benefit of architects, contractors, manufacturers and homeowners. These reports analyze precipitation, temperature, wind velocity and direction, humidity, sunshine, etc. They are published for each region studied in the Climate Control Project, and are available concurrently with appearance of the general regional story in HOUSE BEAUTIFUL. Reports are now available on the following regions: Mid-Ohio, Metropolitan New York and New Jersey, Southern Florida, Southwestern Desert, Missouri River Valley, Gulf Coast. Price: 50¢ each from Administrator, HOUSE BEAUTIFUL'S Climate Control Project, 572 Madison Ave., New York 22, N.Y.

Americans would rather be comfortable than correct if correctness means slavish conformance to set styles. Here, the owners kept their antiques, blithely mixed them with modern elements like square-cut built-in cabinets and sofa, off-center fireplace and the textured background surfaces, beloved of modern architects.

The American Style means
Freedom from Dogma

There's no reason why you can't mix the newest and best ideas that make your home more livable with good designs from the past

by Mary Roche

You can't dictate to Americans. You can't make them believe that antiques must be used in a quaint old Cape Cod cottage, and nowhere else. Or that a modern house has to be furnished in a strict modern formula down to the last free-form ash tray and fiddle-leaf rubber plant. Americans believe in progress. They like change. But unless the new thing seems unmistakably better than the old, they feel free to turn it down and keep on using what they have.

This freedom from style dictatorship shows up very plainly in the New England home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Leon. From their hillside site you can see thirty miles across the valley, so they wanted a house which would make the most of the superb view. They liked natural materials used in straightforward fashion. They liked good (Continued on next page)

Exterior of the Leon house is Weldtex, the vertically-ribbed fir plywood. It is applied to the frame like conventional clapboards and then painted a soft, weathered gray.

Fluorescent lights, recessed in ceiling, give upstairs hallway a soft luminous glow. Light is diffused by loose strips of frosted Plexiglas held in place by wood latticework.

lighting, and work-saving arrangements and appliances. They also liked their collection of early New England antiques.

See how their house, designed by Architects Edelbaum and Webster, meets all these preferences. Every room has a good share of the view: some have whole walls of window. Every window and glass door in the house has Thermopane double-glazing. All of the interior doors are modern flush doors of birch plywood, innocent of moldings or paneling. There is plywood paneling and plywood built-in furniture, all of it in a natural finish. And there is fluorescent lighting.

Against this modern background the Leons continue to use their antiques and enjoy them all the more because of the modern livability of their house.

All kitchen-cabinet panels are natural birch plywood, waxed and rubbed. Counter tops and splashbacks are Chinese-red Micarta, a highly durable plastic. Sink is plywood finished with stainless steel. Under sink is chute to basement for tin cans and bottles, also pull-out racks for dish towels which dry from warmth of garbage disposal motor.

A trellis-covered flagstone walk leads to the main entrance of the house. Masonry wall of study (see interior on page 81) is pleasant repetition of fieldstone chimney.

The entrance hall is always bright and cheerful, thanks to floor-to-ceiling window beside front door and lights above. Ledges are ideal for display of antique glass.

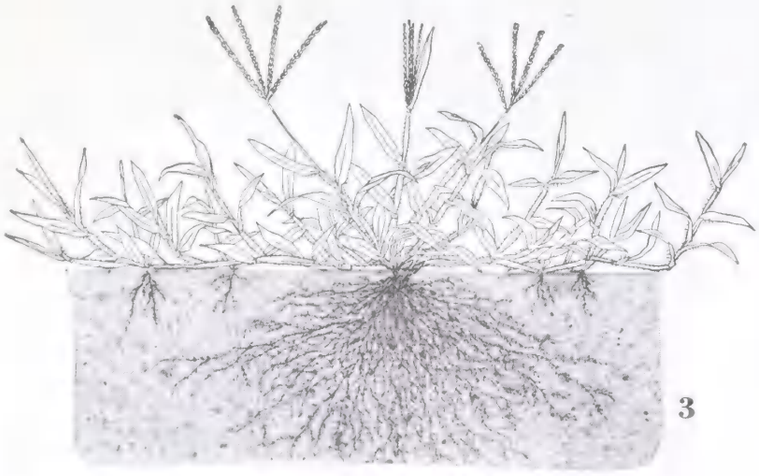
The newest way to lick Crabgrass

Two recently developed chemical killers enable you to effectively combat America's number one lawn pest. Here's the best recipe for lethal results



by Dr. Joseph E. Howland
House Beautiful's Garden Editor

Two new chemical crabgrass killers are for sale this summer. One is a special mercury granular material, sold as "Scutl," and applied dry like plant food. The other, potassium cyanate (NOT cyanIDE, the poison) is applied as a liquid spray. It is sold as "Weedone Crabgrass Killer" and "Crab-Not," and probably will be available under other trade names by midsummer.

Both chemicals kill crabgrass. Neither injures the lawn grasses permanently when used properly.

"Scutl" has been tested in most parts of the country for three years. It killed both the big hairy crabgrass and the small smooth crabgrass, even last summer, the worst crabgrass season in years. Both professional researchers and interested amateur gardeners have been in on the testing. But until this year the chemical was not available in stores. Now you can buy it as a granular, non-dusty material.

Apply "Scutl" in July and you can expect 98 to 100 per cent kill. Then you can reseed the bare spots, in August or September, the ideal time of the year to sow grass seed. "Scutl" won't hurt your lawngrass—even temporarily—and often peps it up by killing disease fungi that may be bothering it. Testers last year often reported a noticeably greener look to "Scutl"-treated lawns a few weeks after the application. (Continued on page 92)

STAGES IN DEVELOPMENT OF CRABGRASS

1 From late May to early June crabgrass attains this four-leaf stage. You can spot it by slightly yellow color and wide short leaf. 2 In June-July period the pest starts horizontal growth. Remember regular lawn grass grows vertically, has single stalk, single root, while crabgrass has multiple stalks from single root. 3 In late July and August uncontrolled crabgrass is at its worst. Horizontal stalks are rooting, plants have set seeds which will drop in September. The article above tells you how to lick crabgrass at these stages of development.

Traditional closed house forms (1-2) were all right for Boston or Philadelphia. But they wouldn't work on the Gulf Coast and the early French settlers soon found it out. Thus they evolved their own open form (3). Wide "umbrella" roof and continuous galleries screen whole house from sun and rain, elevated floors catch breezes.

part of the year when cross ventilation is so essential, the house construction might eliminate conventional walls. Instead of building a porch on a house, the whole house should virtually be a porch, and only the utility rooms, baths, and closets be enclosed. In winter, rooms need walls primarily to control drafts, not necessarily to serve as insulation. Hence, walls could be partitions or roll-away doors."

Indeed, why not?

Climate doesn't change much from century to century—at least not enough to notice since the Coast country was settled. So it is not surprising that Dr. Siple has described, in principle, a dwelling type close to that developed by the bon vivant French who came to Biloxi, Mobile, and New Orleans in the early 1700's. (See above.) Their tradition of elevated pavilions and shaded patios continued unbroken through numerous styles—the restrained Greek Revival, the florid Victorian. But they always retained the essential climatic features of canopied roof, raised living floor, porches, galleries, and wide windows to the floor.

Somehow, during the last 50 years, this real tradition, based on functioning forms, seems to have been lost. Gulf Coast people have become preoccupied with purely decorative features grafted onto imported building types. A common sight in the newer metropolitan sections of New Orleans or Mobile is a counterfeit Cape Cod cottage with touches of imitation cast-iron ornament.

Today we should know better. We should know how to use the principles provided by the rich sensible traditions of the region. Then, by using mid-twentieth century techniques, we would build more economically, more effectively and just as pleasantly in the style of our time.

What are the main functional elements of this tradition? How can they be related to today's house? There are five important ones we should keep in our contemporary practice:

The elevated living floor

After the French got acquainted with the climate here, they learned to build main living floors off the ground for reasons of comfort and health. (See page 75.) That way ventilation is more positive both above and below, and the elevation afforded a better view—whether of the city street, the garden, or the flat country landscape. Moreover they gained a distinct planning advantage in the neat separation of service and storage from living space. This planning principle has been overlooked in the last few years even by homeowners who could well afford whatever they chose. Today, a paved floor on the ground under the house would help prevent dampness and furnish space for carport, laundry, workshop, storage, and even dry-weather play and sitting area. To build a house on stilts may be an aesthetic tour de force in Connecticut, but on the Gulf Coast it is a practical necessity, prescribed by nature.

The umbrella roof

The old plantation house in the French period had an umbrella roof. (See page 75.) This was a great, peaked roof that sheltered the house walls like a wide-brimmed sombrero. It's heavy tile

PHOTOGRAPH BY H. O. WISEMAN

Screened porches are a must in this region of warm weather and multitudinous insects. And if the porch is elevated, as in this residence for the Morley Hudson's in Shreveport, La., it will get that much more breeze. Note pierced brick wall below. Lester C. Haas, Architect.

ypress shingles and huge, venti-ated attics were the best eight-enth-century method of insulating -effective, but too expensive today. provided protection against both in and rain and, in addition, col-ected water for the cisterns. We an still use the umbrella-roof prin-iple, but save on cubage by using variety of new scientific insula-on materials and light colored oofing surfaces that reflect solar eat back into the upper air. In-ead of having an enormous ex-nsive attic space between the ter waterproof surface and the side ceiling, we need only enough ickness to allow a wash of air drain off heat that gets through. But we still need wide, overhang-g eaves to keep the sun off the lls and window areas during the ttest hours of the summer day. ch wide overhangs are equally cessary to protect door and win-w openings during the rains. For is then that relative humidity is st oppressive, and ventilation is st necessary.

Perhaps the most distinctive fea-e of Gulf Coast residential ar-tecture before the Twentieth tury is the outdoor living porch. led a gallery if it extends all ng the house, and a loggia if it anked by enclosed rooms. These nents differ from the usual ch or veranda in other sections he country. They are not "stuck but are integrally formed by ecting both floor and ceiling—a room with the outside wall aced by an open railing. (See 75.) Their multipurpose role curately recorded by a French ger in 1807 describing the new try for the folks back home:

". . . the climate makes galleries necessary. All houses have them—some on all sides, others on two sides only, and rarely on only one side. These galleries are formed by the prolongation of the roof . . . supported by little wood columns with a pleasing effect: ordinarily the galleries are given a width of eight to nine feet. The width offers several advantages: (a) it prevents the sun's rays from striking the walls of the house, thus keeping them cooler; (b) it offers a good place to walk (on the shady side); (c) to eat; (d) to sit out in the evening with company, and often in the warm spells of the summer; (e) to sleep on."*

In 1950, galleries still have the same practical purposes and they would give a desirable visual relationship of new to old without seeming phony.

The patio

The traditional city house on the Gulf Coast gave special prominence to the patio or living terrace, not as a separated space for use only during short seasons, but in a closer way. (See page 77.) Usually the garden was united to the house and privacy was gained by walls, hedges, and screens. In the early days they knew how to use plants and flowers as an insulating green cover. Leaf-shedding trees and vines, spaced to permit ventilation, let the sun through in winter while screening it in summer. We can still learn a lot from the way they did it. Today, we can respect this tradition not by copying antique patios, but

The patio is still a good climate device. Its paved surfaces offer dry footing in a land of torrential rains. But unless it's properly shaded by trees and vines, as in this old courtyard in the French quarter, this same paving will soak up and re-radiate solar heat.

rather by accepting the principle of the paved garden as a legitimate room of the house.

One important addition to these old climate forms which frees our planning is the lowly insect screen. Insects are one of the main hazards to comfort and health in this area. With insect mesh now available in widths up to six feet, in non-corrosive metals and plastics, almost any outside area can be enclosed. (See page 87.)

Hot-air drains

The traditional house had ceilings 12 to 14 feet high. The extra space above your head drained the warmest air upward and out the transom. This was a good solution for cooling when interior space was not purchased at a dollar per cubic foot. Today, high building costs make it cheaper and more efficient for us to drain off the warmest air through naturally-vented openings and power fans.

Floor-to-ceiling openings

French windows, side-hinged in pairs and opening to the floor, came over with the earliest French settlers. But even later in the Nineteenth Century when the vertical sliding, double-hung or "guillotine" window of the Anglo-Americans came into use, the sill was set at the floor line along the galleries. It was so proportioned that the lower half, when raised, permitted one to walk easily through the opening. From these old houses we learn that air movement is encouraged, flue-fashion, when openings extend to either floor or ceiling or wall.

In other words, if you want to induce the air to move freely through a room, eliminate dead-air pockets between window sill and floor, top of window and ceiling, sides of window and wall. With modern sliding doors and windows, this is easy to accomplish. Dr. Siple's flexible screen-wall suggestion becomes an attainable goal even in a modest dwelling.

The louver

This device is as old as time itself, and yet forever new—the louvered blind, the shutter, the Louvers, old and new. Whether they're old, handmade, cypress ones (left), new glass ones (right), or plastic or aluminum, louvers are one of the sub-tropic's most important comfort tools. They offer you a highly flexible control of ventilation, sun, rain, and in addition afford precious privacy.

adition always contempo-y in its own time

Mid-twentieth century technol-has given us literally hundreds new building tools and ma-als—things which our climate-scious ancestors would have pted with enthusiasm and used with imagination. Many of these are without precedent and cannot be used in a "traditional manner"—they have to be handled in their own terms.

But the architectural principles outlined here still apply. Many of them will actually enable modern equipment to operate more efficiently. Consider air conditioning: If there is one region in the country where full summer conditioning is justified from a comfort standpoint, the Gulf Coast is it. It is already basic equipment in stores, offices, and factories. And more and more people are coming to regard it as essential in their homes. But climate-conscious use of galleries, louvers, and umbrella roofs, far from hindering your air conditioning system, will actually boost its efficiency.

The same thing is true with regard to almost any item that goes into a house. The conflict between yesterday's building ideas and today's is not as wide as some people tend to think. Sound principles are always modern.

Sun and Shade

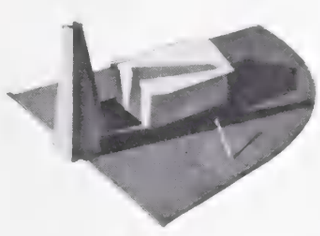
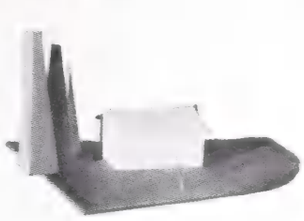
This picture shows why. It is aken at 4 P.M. on a summer after-oon. with several hours of the ottest sunshine still to come. And is house has a very generous verhang on the west side—much igger than makes any economic ense. Yet the 4 o'clock sun gets underneath the overhang and eats the west wall like blazes.

Against this low sun, your shield ust be something vertical and all—a wall of some sort that ands to the west of the house. his wall could consist of trees. It ould be a trellis with vines, or ines growing on the wall itself, or n arrangement of baffles. (See OUSE BEAUTIFUL, March, page 106 nd 107). It could be someone lse's house, for that matter. It ould be an outright wall, built or that purpose.

This picture shows a good way protect the west side of a house m hot summer sun. Use the ga-ge as a shade wall. You can see re is a lot of sense in the eme, now so popular, of having breezeway" between garage and se. But, of course, it makes se only if the garage stands west the house!



ow you can see how this ar-gement behaves in winter, just ore sunset. The winter afternoon such as it is, gets pretty good ss to the house.



Here the shade "wall" consists of trees. (Those derrick-like things.) Notice how this tree-wall is arranged—it runs at an angle to the house; the trees taper, from tall in front to shorter in the back. That is the way it sort of designs itself when you try it out on the Sun-and-Shade Machine.

In this picture, it is only 3 P.M. The hot part of the afternoon is just beginning, but trees 1 and 2 throw their shade squarely on the west wall. Of course these paper trees of ours are a bit lean at the top. Real trees would throw a fuller shade. But our derrick-like ones show more exactly where the shadows fall.

This photograph is taken at 5 P.M. on a summer afternoon. Tree #1 now shades the front lawn. The shadow of tree #3 is just beginning to climb up the northwest corner of the house. #2 and #3 between them will protect the west wall till sunset.

"But if I put trees there, don't I cut off my winter sun?"

can keep off the summer sun and still have all the winter sun there is! Notice that this winter sun does not depend on the trees shedding their leaves. It depends only on the exact location of the trees, and the path of the sun.

So, regardless of whether you live in an existing house or are building a new one, you need to remember these things about the meaning of the compass. For the four points of the compass are not all equally good. Here is a check list.

South is good. The south wall of a house gets more hours of sunshine on a winter day than on a summer day. And it gets hotter sunshine in winter, when the sun is lower, than it gets in summer! So, the south side evens out the difference between summer and winter—even without an overhanging roof. With an overhanging roof, it's still better.

North is bad. The north wall of a house gets no sun at all in winter. It does get many hours of sunshine in summer! (during the morning and evening hours). So, the north side exaggerates the difference between summer and winter.

East is pretty good. The east wall gets sun in the morning, when the day is cool. It has shade in the afternoon, when, summer or winter, the day has warmed up. So, the east side evens out the difference between morning and afternoon. But the east wall gets very much more sun in summer than in winter. It therefore exaggerates the difference between winter and summer. That's why an east exposure is only so-so.

West is worst. The west wall of a house gets sun only in the afternoon—none in the morning. But the afternoon is the warmest part of day anyway, summer or winter. The morning is the coolest time. The west wall therefore exaggerates the difference between the cool time of day and the warm time. On top of that, the west wall gets much more sun in summer than in winter, so it exaggerates also the difference between seasons.

The ideas pictured on pages 43 and 91 are the tools you can use to cope with your own particular version of these basic conditions.

wanted to place the dining room where it would not get sun in winter—since dinnertime is after sundown. But in summer, after Daylight Saving Time goes into effect, the sun does shine at dinnertime. The dining room ought to be in a spot that would get summer evening sun. Now where can we find that spot?

To figure all this out on paper would be quite a task—even for an engineer-astronomer-navigator. So why not make a model of the house, shine a lamp on it from the correct angle, and look at sun and shade that you get?

Carbonara reasoned: Moving the lamp around the model takes too much gadgetry. The job could be done still more simply. After all, the sun does not really move around the house. The sun stands still. The earth tilts and turns so that the sun shines on the house now from the east, now from the west, now from high up, now from down low. Why not rig up a platform that would tilt and turn the way the earth tilts and turns the real house?

Here it is. The odd shape of the platform is the odd shape of Carbonara's lot. The house mounted on it is not his, but just an average house. Carbonara built the "machine" himself in his basement workshop. You can do the same. It's simple; all you have to do is get the angles right. If you don't feel like tackling it, I can put you in touch with a craftsman who is building me one.

You simply put it on the table. You put a lamp at the other end of the table, at the same height as the machine. You tilt the house for the time of year, turn it for the time of day—and you see what's what.

And that's what more home builders need to know!

Those who like to experiment will also want to try potassium cyanate. It has been field-tested by relatively few researchers, and these were primarily in the New York-New Jersey area and active only for one year (1949). The kill of the Eastern type of crabgrass from spring or fall applications was so good (sometimes 98 to 100%) that potassium cyanate will be sold this year for home lawns. NOTE: Summer applications last year were worthless, presumably because the drought had stopped plant growth. Manufacturers warn that you should wait until active grass growth starts again if you haven't kept your lawn growing by regular waterings.

Potassium cyanate costs considerably less than "Scutl" and it is non-poisonous to humans. It dissolves readily in water, but since it must be applied as a spray, using potassium cyanate is more bother than merely spreading the dry "Scutl" granules. And as last summer's results indicated, sometimes the crabgrass can go merrily on its way, unaffected by the potassium cyanate.

But whichever chemical you decide to try, don't forget the other essentials for crabgrass control.

1. Get a dense sod by regular and generous feeding with a balanced plant food.

2. Never cut lower than 1½ inches. "Shaving" the lawn weakens the grass, and weak grass can't keep crabgrass crowded out.

3. Delay use of 2,4-D (for dandelions, plantain, etc.) until fall. (Never use 2,4-D in the spring in crabgrass country or you kill the weeds just in time to let crabgrass take over.)

What music shall I choose?

e who has a choice has trouble," says a Dutch proverb.

Not long ago, I received a letter om a reader who said, "I have re-ntly bought a record player. Now mebody will have to tell me what isic I should get, because musi-lly speaking I am a dope and I afraid I am going to buy the ong records. I have gone to the re to consult the man there, but doesn't seem to be very helpful. aybe he doesn't know either. ne sort of self-service system will e to be invented."

My correspondent is right, and experience can't be unique. It customary to dismiss these re-sts by saying that tastes differ, t no one has a right to choose another, and that if I were to ose for you, I would have to w a good deal more than I do ut your tastes, your education, your emotional make-up. Con-seurs are likely to look askance the top of their spectacles at guides or basic selections of ic.

onetheless, there is a need for n. Very much of a need. I think a great favor which the record panies could bestow upon them-es would be the development "packages" of music, that is, ted and definite basic libraries e-foot or five-inch shelves, if you like—which could be offered to people who have become interested in music but who do not know "what music I should get." This is a guiding service which people, unsure of their own tastes, would appreciate, and which would, in my opinion, become a commercial success.

The record companies might go further: They might develop small anthologies of musical selections to serve as samplers. Such samplers might do nothing more than whet the appetite without satisfying it. They would be welcome by people who are just on the verge of becoming interested, who are curious to find out whether they are capable of enjoying good music, but who as yet believe themselves incapable of swallowing a long opera or a weighty symphony as a whole. If they could get an album which would introduce them to Beethoven by setting before them one movement of one of his symphonies, one of his overtures, an excerpt from one of his string quartets, and perhaps one of the numbers from his only opera, Fidelio, wouldn't they love to have such an album?

Granted that such selection is stylistically culpable—one really ought not to break a symphony into pieces—one can defend it (I can defend it!) as a means to a good end, that of acquainting you with Beethoven's matchless mind.

Guiding and sampling are two processes which publishers of books have used to their profit. You personally might not like the business of having literature served on the smörgasbord principle. You might not care for such things as A Treasury of Fine Prose or An Anthology of the World's Best Loved Poetry or Gems from Shakespeare, but the fact is that most people do like them. They find it an easy, and perhaps a lazy, way of becoming acquainted with literature. The success of the Book-of-the-Month Club is, I think, partly due to convenience. You get books delivered to your home, but it is also due to the fact that its committee guides you toward books which may interest you. This committee is not inhibited by a fear that they cannot tell what your particular tastes are.

Record manufacturers, however, are inhibited, and so they say, "Here is our catalogue of fine music. You go and pick out what you want." How can you? Each catalogue contains thousands of numbers, comprising several hundred composers, the music being performed by many different artists. It is a maze. Rather, it is a chest of treasures and of tinsel in which it is difficult for you to pick out the treasures. There are books available which evaluate the various recordings, separating the good from the not so good. But these books, such as The Record Book by David Hall and A Guide to Recorded Music by Irving Kolodin, are too inclusive to be of much value to the beginner. They are more helpful to people who already know what's what in music.

I have come across a new book which is more helpful because it attempts to be truly selective. It is called Selective Record Guide. Its author is Moses Smith who, though a Bostonian and a Harvard graduate, seems to be a man of common sense and mindful of the needs of people who "like music but do not know anything about it." His guide proposes three steps: First, a basic list as a starter, a selection of fine recorded music which adds up to no more than a hundred dollars worth of records. Then, a second list which ranges more widely and which, when combined with List No. 1, makes "a moderate-size permanent selection of both the older and the modern works." Finally, a third list designed for the musical enthusiast. This list is arranged by kinds of music rather than by composers. Mr. Smith believes that once you have made the acquaintance of music in general, you may wish to specialize. If you have become particularly interested in piano music, the third list will suggest further piano selections. Same with opera, orchestral music, etc.

It is easy to disagree with some of Mr. Smith's choices. Anybody who selects lays himself open to accusations by all of us who have favorites. "Why don't you include more Scarlatti", we shout, "and why is Puccini so scantily represented?" Nevertheless, I am sure that his guide will prove helpful, and I admire the author for having done it. With his permission, I quote his List No. 1, those works he calls "basic."

More room in Bermuda

The Castle Harbour in Tucker's Town, Bermuda, which has lately reopened its sea-horse doors, sits high on a coral cliff in what seems to be the center of an endless, luminous aquamarine sea. At least, that's the remarkable view of the outside world you get when you're inside any one of its 300 rooms. Decorator Joseph Huston, who has completely refurbished the hotel, hasn't let any of this natural sea color go to waste. Since it gets into every room through the windows, he's made it part of the color scheme, sometimes repeating it in rugs and fabrics, or setting it off, the way nature does in Bermuda, with coral pink and lime yellow. Delightful rooms result. You've rarely seen a more pleasing color combination than a wall of this green-blue against rosy-brown woodwork of Bermuda cedar, or a handsomer rug than the two-tone aquamarine block carpeting on the first floor. Furniture and fabrics were specially made in England.

The staff is a hand-picked one, trained in the tradition of luxury service abroad, but even if the place looks elegant and operates elegantly, guests actually go their ways with the pleasant casualness that everyone acquires in Bermuda. You dress formally for dinner only if you choose to.

The hotel is as good as a little town by itself. Here are a few of the things you can do: swim in the pool or from the hotel's pink coral beach; golf at St. George's or at the Mid Ocean Club, one of the golf world's showplaces; fish, sail, play tennis, ride, bicycle, skeet shoot, go helmet diving in marine gardens; shop in the hotel's arcade where some of the best Bermuda stores have branch shops; try a rum swizzle in the Sucker Bar (you sit on exaggerated versions of old English settles ranged around the wall); dance in the rather posh night club, all citron-yellow and chalk-white, with the orchestra playing from a bird-cage pavilion. Double rooms with bath start at $15 per person per day, American plan.

Denver plus

Denver's Mountain Parks are a comparatively well-beaten path. But you haven't seen Denver unless you've seen her fabulous back yard, and you could travel many more miles elsewhere without seeing so much of scenery and interest. For here only 153 miles of well-conditioned mountain driving will take you up over 14,000 feet to the top of Mt. Evans, higher than any other highway in North America, down the six-mile descent into beautiful Virginia Canyon, beguilingly marked at the top, "Hill." This drive also takes you from the colorful past when Buffalo Bill rode the plains and rough miners foregathered in the mahogany and mirror bar of the old Teller House at Central City, to the best of present-day entertainment.

This summer's program at Central City's beautifully restored Opera House will include star-studded opera, July 1 through 29, and equally star-studded drama August 5 through 26. To mail-order tickets ahead, address the Central City Box Office, c/o Daniels & Fisher, Denver. Prices: opening night, for Madame Butterfly, July 1, for Don Pasquale, July 15: $4.50, $5.40, $7.50; Saturday nights, $3.80, $4.80, $5.70; week nights except Mondays, $3.25, $4.00, $5.40; matinees Saturdays, Sundays, and Tuesdays, $3.25, $3.80, $4.50.

At the Theater of the Red Rocks there will be concerts by the Denver Symphony Orchestra each Friday night, July 7 through August 11. Tickets, at only $1 to $1.50 depending on the soloist, will be on sale at the May Company, Denver, and you may want to do as Denver does, drive out in the afternoon with a picnic supper to enjoy to the utmost, and by daylight, the red-rock glory that is this outdoor theater's particular asset.

To read and keep

Richard Joseph, as seasoned a traveler as ever packed a portmanteau, has managed to cram into one little book about all the basic information anyone needs before setting out to see the 23 different countries covered in it. The book is Your Trip Abroad, published by Doubleday, at $4. First part of the book gives you a sensible slant on trip-planning in general, how to figure costs, and—something too few people are hep to—the great good services you can expect from your travel agent. It tells you how to cope with passports, packing, foreign money, tipping, and how to look as if you knew the ropes by land, sea, and air. In briefing each country, the writer ticks off a bit of its culture, history, and current outlook, then provides specific lists of what to do, where to stay, what to wear, where to eat, drink, or be merry, what to buy, what red tape if any to expect. He finishes off with a checklist of worth-while excursions, a bibliography, and the addresses of banks, consulates, and tourist offices which every American traveler should note in his address book.

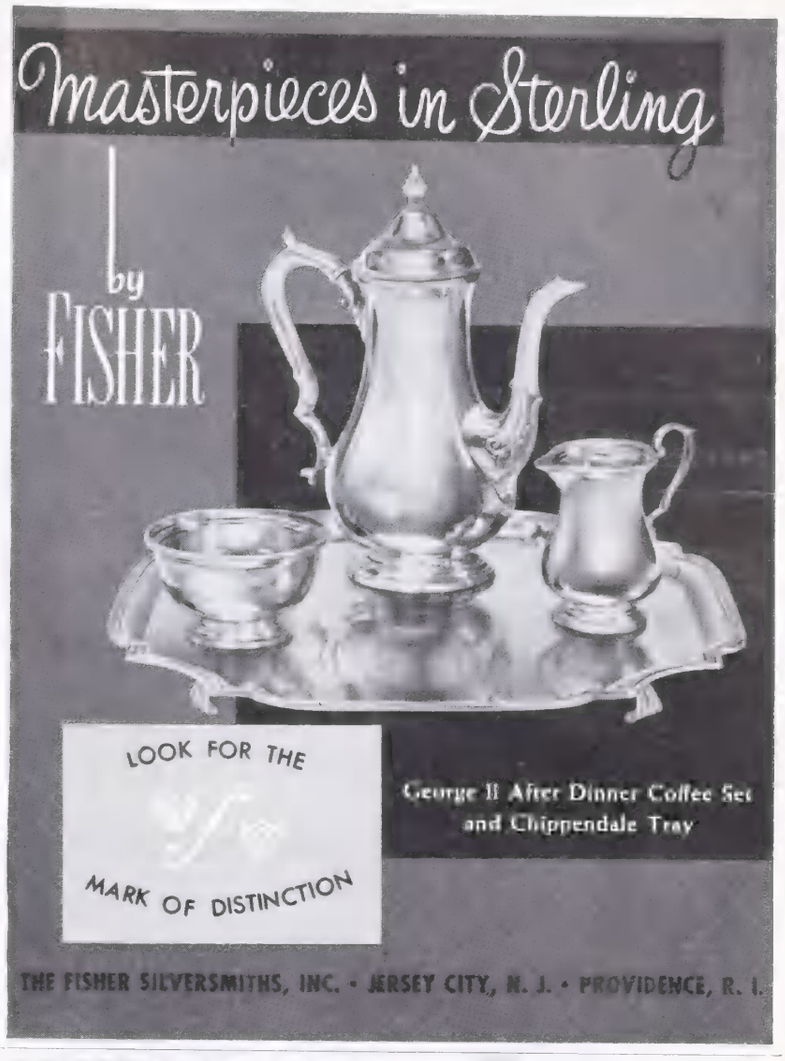
Since Washington will also be host to 275 national conventions during the Fair, advance reservations are even more of a must than usual.

The Coast

Those who speak of the Oregon Coast with bated breath will usually admit it was not merely the magnificence of the Coast itself that won them, but the many plusses to which U. S. 101, between Astoria and Crescent City, California, 400 miles south, give access. The Coast itself is sheer grandeur. But when fog muffles and chills the Coast, there are little lakes just inland, warm, cozy in verdant forest, where you can boat, swim, fish, sun, or just have a picnic at a table nested in rhododendron, huckleberry, and salal. And when your arms ache from swinging the car around so many curves, and your head spins from watching your way past the onrushing lumber trucks, you can take time out with profit almost anywhere. Explore the smooth, clean dunes south of Florence near Siuslaw Bay; go through the myrtlewood factory which turns out those lovely bowls; try your luck clamming on some moist, quiet beach; scramble some fantastic rock or other, or just loll around one of the quiet, modest hotels or motor courts which are characteristic of this region. These, in fact, are to the real enthusiast one of its chief charms. You'll find a listing of the better ones, together with pertinent town-to-town data for the whole 360 miles in a folder put out by and available from the Oregon Coast Association, Tillamook, Ore.

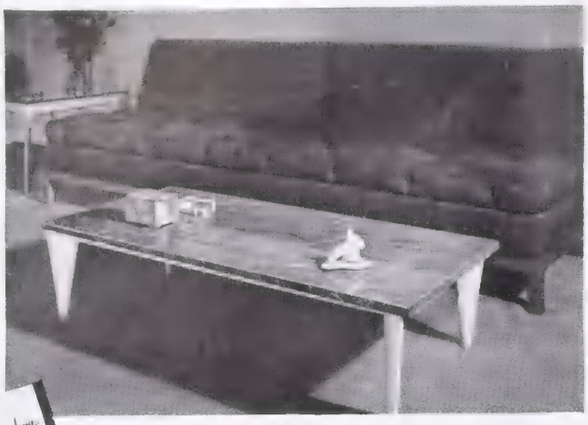
Just incidentally



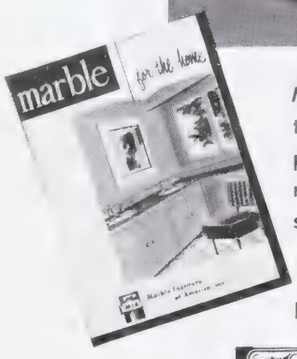
When you look up at the weathervane atop Boston's Faneuil Hall, don't ask, "But why a grasshopper?" Nobody knows. We do know this, however: Although the grasshopper weathervane was erected in 1742, and has been down for repair, replacement, regilding, and the like a number of times since, it was only in 1899, when it was treated to a new leg, a splice on the tongue, a patch on the body, and another coat of gilt that a tiny, secret vest pocket was discovered. In it was a folded note, obviously written by some waggish workman before the Revolution, as follows:

"Shem Drowne made it in 1742. To my brethren and fellow grasshoppers. Fell in ye year 1753, November 18, early in ye morning by a great earthquake by my Old Master above. Again like to have met with my Utter Ruin by fire, but Hopping timely from my Public Situation, came off with broken bones and much bruised. Cured and fixed . . . Old Master's Son, Thomas Drowne, June 28, 1768, and though I will promise to Discharge my office, yet I will vary as ye wind."

Cruises on your own



For those who own their own cruising craft, there is no richer area than the water highways of Ontario, Canada. These include the choicer, island-dotted reaches of the St. Lawrence, north-shore Great Lakes plusses like Georgian Bay, and at least two waterways, one from Port Severn on Georgian Bay via river, lake, and friendly town to Trenton and into Lake Ontario; and the Rideau Circle, which takes you by lake, river, and canal from Kingston at the eastern end of Lake Ontario to Ottawa and back to the St. Lawrence via Hawkesbury. From here you can investigate the St. Lawrence islands en route to Kingston again.



Since last summer, the Dominion Department of Transportation, with the co-operation of the Ontario Department of Travel and Publicity—address, Parliament Buildings, Toronto—has surveyed new areas. They've particularly stressed Georgian Bay north of Parry Sound and Lake Huron, and recharted the whole area, so that the Trent Waterway, for instance, is now covered by four charts at 25 cents each. As initial step toward planning your trip, write the travel department for their free booklet, "Cruising Ontario Waters." This outlines trips, gives dockside facilities, and indicates what charts to order to take you cruising precisely where you want to go.

Pantry Shelf News

by Julie Polshek

Gather 'round, chocolate hounds! I've news of a new chocolate sauce that's something to smack your lips over. In the language of teenagers, it's out of this world. Kettle Cove's Chocolate Sauce Elegante is as extra-special as its name implies; as different from run-of-the-mill sauces as dungarees are from a party formal. The velvety, super-rich concoction has a sparkle, a deep-throated flavor that's like no other chocolate you ever tasted. Only its richness deters one from consuming an entire jarful by spoonfuls. It comes by its home-made taste honestly for, like Kettle Cove's inimitable orange slices and fruit syrups, their luscious Chocolate Sauce Elegante is made in open kettles by home-kitchen methods, from superfine ingredients. Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge, Kettle Cove Industries' gracious guiding lights, hew close to the philosophy that there's no short cut to quality. How right they are!

I don't know when a Pantry Shelf News candidate caused such a furor around these parts, or won such glowing and unanimous praise. As one member of my tasting squad so aptly put it as she spooned into her chocolate sundae Elegante, "I wish I could eat it so slowly it would last all day."

Kettle Cove make four versions of Chocolate Sauce Elegante. For the sophisticated palate they offer two choices—one flavored with crème de menthe, another with Cointreau. For the tots and those grownups who prefer their sauce without alcoholic content, there's a choice of plain Chocolate Sauce Elegante or one flavored with mint. The liqueur-flavored sauces are something to shout about. Both the mellow, minty flavor of the crème de menthe and the rich orangey undertone of the Cointreau blend with the subtle flavoring bouquet in the chocolate to such perfection that it's hard to choose between them. Three 12 ounce jars of either cost $3.45; 3 jars of either the plain or mint flavored cost $2.25. (both plus postage) Charles & Co., 340 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

When I heard rumors of a new individual coffee bag that performed like a tea bag, I was more than a little skeptical about the claims made for it. The bag, 'twas said, contained honest-to-goodness ground coffee beans yielded a real brewed flavor. Both claims sounded much too good to be true. But I could be wrong, said I to myself. And I was. The Araban Steepolator coffee bag made good on both counts.

Each sealed bag makes one cup of delicious, full-flavored coffee. As with tea bags, you can make the brew weak or strong, depending on how long you let the bag steep in your cup. I'm told the secret of the brewed-coffee flavor they yield is the very special paper used for the bags that hold the ground coffee.

These Steepolator bags are heaven-sent for that solo cup at mid-morning or afternoon coffee and at mealtimes in households like my own where one drinks tea, the other coffee (and insists on the Mc-Coy). They're a boon, too, when you want to whip up a round of iced coffees. It's quick, easy, no boils kitchen clean-up down to washing the iced-coffee glasses. Sixty Araban Steepolator coffee bags cost $2.00 plus postage. From Jordan-Marsh Co., Boston, Mass.

Nothing hits the spot on a muggy summer day like a long, iced drink. Some like them hard; as many more find soft drinks more cooling. The old stand-bys will always be with us, but with drinks as with food, a change of pace keeps your repertoire sparkling. To broaden the soft-drink horizon, I've gathered up a group of syrup concentrates that are as unusual as they're delicious. Mixed with plain or carbonated water, they yield mighty tasty and refreshing whistle-wetters. A twist of lemon peel and/or a dash of Angostura or orange bitters add an extra fillip.

Let's start with the newest of the group—Australian Mynor passion-fruit nectar. The tangy concentrate tastes like a medley of apricot, canteloupe, and mango juices. The 1-pint-10-ounce bottle makes a gallon of fruity ade. There's a little recipe book with it that contains the formula for a quietly potent cocktail aptly called "Boomerang" and a delicious gelatin dessert. Also, like the other syrups I'll tell you about anon, passion-fruit nectar does itself proud as an ice-cream or dessert sauce. The nectar costs $1.50 a bottle.

Next on the roll call is Rougier Sirop d'Orgeat, a heavenly concentrated syrup made from bitter almonds and orange-flower water. Most people know it as a prime ingredient of the famous Army and Navy Cocktail. But, among the French especially, it rates high as a tall, soft drink, mixed with carbonated water. I'm all for having an extra bottle just for dessert uses. The ⅕-quart bottle supplies recipes for the Army and Navy Cocktail, New Orleans Silver Fizz, and the Anniversary Cocktail. It costs $1.45 a bottle.

The third candidate on the roster is Trader Vic Grenadine. It needs no introduction in the cocktail world or as a dessert and fruit sauce, but it's not as well known as it deserves to be for soft-drink making. Its raspberry-cherry-like flavor is tangy and refreshing. A ⅕-quart costs 95 cents.

The final member of the group is Crème de Cassis, a pungent blackberry-like concentrate from France. In this country it's best known as a dessert sauce, but in France it's a national favorite mixed with carbonated water in drink guise. It yields a delicious tall drink that tastes much like the well-known Vermouth cassis, and has a wee alcoholic content. A quart costs $2.35. All four syrups are available from Vendome Co., 415 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y. (Add postage to all prices.)

specialty shop. (Should you not know such a shop, HOUSE BEAUTIFUL has arranged with Harry Good's food specialty shop at 2252 Kalakaua Avenue, Honolulu, to ship any of these things to you by mail. Order three weeks ahead of the time you will need them for the party.)

The menu is not too difficult, as you can see:

Avocado Cocktail
Lobster Curry
Baked Bananas
Poi Puffs
Green Salad, tossed with fines herbes
Papaya with Lilikoi Sherbet
Kona Coffee

All ingredients starred* in the recipes may be successfully ordered by mail from Honolulu.

Avocado Cocktail

1 part chili sauce
½ part tomato juice
Lemon juice, onion juice, Worcestershire sauce

Freeze this mixture to a sherbet-like consistency. Cut ripe avocados in generous cubes. Put in cocktail glasses and pour over the frozen sauce.

Place the filled cocktail glasses on crushed ice in individual coconut bowls. The rosy frozen sauce, reminiscent of the glow of a Waikiki sunset, smothers the pear completely. With this first course, serve *Mora's "Hav-a-chip" Wafers, made in Hawaii. These crisp little wafers are nothing more than sheer transparencies of a corn-meal base, but like nothing you have on the Mainland.

Next comes the mysterious covered coconut bowls, darkly gleaming on their bamboo stands. Lifted covers reveal delicious hot lobster curry bedded on rice. Perhaps our Island grandmothers did adopt the dish from India, but their skillful Chinese chefs and our present-day Japanese cooks have improvised and improved and made curry an Island institution. Some authorities believe that curry improves with ripening and recommend that it be made the day before using.

Lobster Curry

Grate two coconuts and save one cup of the feathery white meat for the condiment tray. Heat 1 quart of rich milk to the scalding point and pour it at once over the grated coconut meat. Let stand for two or three hours. Then squeeze very dry through a cheesecloth and discard the exhausted meat.

Heat enough butter in a sauce pan to sauté to a golden brown two medium onions and two garlic cloves, both chopped, and one level tablespoon of grated ginger root.

Blend two tablespoons curry powder with four tablespoons flour and two tablespoons butter, and mix with sufficient heated cream to thicken.

Add the sautéed onions, garlic, and ginger. Simmer slowly one-half hour before adding it to the first mixture of milk and coconut. Then add the meat of two or three boiled lobsters cut in pieces and, lastly, salt and ajinomoto to taste. (Ajinomoto is monosodium glutamate to us Mainlanders and sells as "Accent", "Pekin Powder", "Mai Kai" or a variety of other names.) Heat through but do not cook.

With the curry and rice, serve the following condiments in coconut shells fitted into a tray which is a replica of the ancient Hawaiian "pig board" used at luaus ("feasts"): the grated coconut, chopped hard-cooked egg (the white and yellow arranged separately), chopped macadamia nuts, and mango chutney.

An almost invariable dish to accompany curry is

Baked Bananas

4 cooking bananas
¼ cup brown sugar
¼ cup rum
1½ tablespoons butter

Peel the bananas and fry whole in butter. When a delicate brown, place in a buttered pan, sprinkle with sugar and dot with butter. Pour the rum over the bananas and bake about 45 minutes in a moderate oven. Serve flaming.

Instead of bread, try delectable little poi puffs. Use Hawaiian ready-mixed *poi. Mix one pint jar with two cups of flour, four teaspoons of baking powder, and one teaspoon of butter. Add a little salt. Knead with damp hands until smooth and make into small balls. Place them on a greased pan. Make a slight depression on top of each ball for a bit of butter. Chill thoroughly and bake in hot oven for about 20 minutes or until brown and crisp.

Choose a light salad and nothing is better than a crisp, chilled, tenderly tossed bowl of lettuce, fines herbes. If, by good chance, your grocer has received a shipment of fresh heart of palm, a handful of slivers, white as ivory and brittle-crisp, may be added to the green treasures of the salad bowl. If not, use artichoke hearts instead.

Hawaiian specialty shops will send you golden solo papayas for your dessert. The hand-chosen fruit is packed half ripe and expressed across ocean and country in chilled compartments. Approximately six papayas, weighing a total of ten pounds and delivered to your door, cost $5.10 and will serve 12 persons.

Fresh Papaya with Lilikoi Sherbet

Deck a platter with green leaves. (I grow lime bushes within easy reach of the kitchen door but any shiny, waxy leaves, or grape leaves would do.) Arrange upon it halves of solo papayas—one-half for each person—filled with a scoop of lilikoi sherbet. *Lilikoi is the pungent, tart passion fruit commonly grown in Hawaii, the concentrated juice of which is successfully bottled there and sold commercially. Mynor brand passion-fruit nectar (see page 99) might be used.

Lilikoi Sherbet

1 cup lilikoi juice
2 teaspoons lemon juice
2 cups water
1½ cups sugar (more if desired)
Pinch of salt
2 teaspoons of Karo or other corn syrup
Whites of 2 eggs

Make a syrup by cooking sugar, water, Karo, and a pinch of salt together until the mixture spins a thread. When cool, add the lilikoi juice and 2 teaspoons of lemon juice. Place in a freezing tray and when half frozen add the beaten egg whites.

Finally and inevitably, over cups of fragrant *Kona coffee you and your guests will plan a real trip to Hawaii.

Week-end work-saving starts with the meal getting. In this little house the kitchen is really part of the living room so that no one has to cook or wash dishes in exile. There's adequate room and equipment for whipping up breakfast or luncheon—or perhaps a very simple dinner. For the Big Meals of the week end, Mr. and Mrs. Kevin C. Vanderlip, who own this cottage, take their guests to the club, since their property is part of the Portuguese Bend Club at Palos Verdes, California.

Even more flexible are the sleeping accommodations, so neatly planned that two is a pleasant company in this little house, but five is not a crowd. You may count the bedroom as one room for two, or two double rooms, or a dormitory for four. VINES

Climate Control Device for Summer Coolness

by Emery Howard

Vines are the best inexpensive way to keep your house cool in summer (pages 44 and 45). And you are not limited to a narrow choice of vines. All vines work as sun-stoppers. Some, naturally, are more effective insulators than others. Some grow fast—may cover several hundred square feet of wall in a single season. Some grow slowly. But unless you are in a big rush, you can just about make your choice of vine on its visual texture. Do you want it big and bold, or small and dainty; loose and open, or tight and compact? You can usually fix your soil to be light or heavy, wet or dry, rich or poor, as needed for best growth of the vine you choose. Ask the nurseryman about these needs when you order.

Six Secrets for success

1. Buy sturdy plants. Vines aren't good sellers—too few people know their value, so many nurseries don't bother with them—merely buy a few each year to meet any casual demand for them. Naturally, you aren't likely to get top-quality plants from a disinterested distributor. So buy from a nursery that spends as much care on vines as it does in the big-demand items like roses and lilacs. Look in the catalogs and magazine advertisements for references to the Climate Control values of the vines offered for sale.

2. Prepare the soil well. Your new vines must live for many years in the same spot you plant them in today. And vines often are extremely rampant growers, making heavy demands on the soil for food. So dig in peat generously—at least a two-inch layer, as much more as you can afford. Feed liberally—ideally a pint of a complete plant food should be mixed thoroughly into all the soil within a radius of two or three feet.

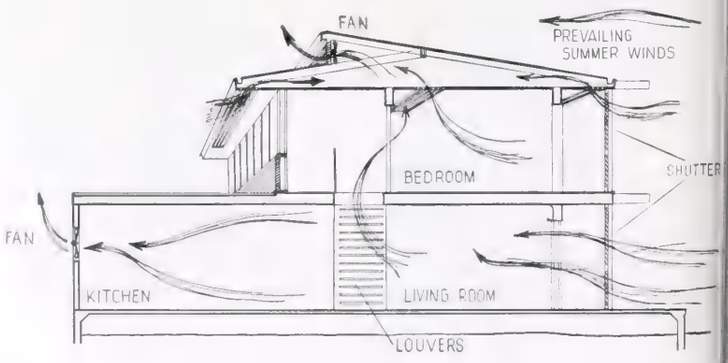
If you live in the Gulf Coast area, you can build a Climate Control house that will be as comfortable to live in as the one on pages 76 to 79. Whether you want a big house or a little house doesn't make any difference, just so you understand and use the same principles our architects did.

With 1950 construction techniques and materials, you can easily (1) keep the summer sun off the house, (2) lift it up into the air, and (3) open it up wide. Using these principles costs you nothing. Yet they assure hot-weather comfort for all but the very hottest one-tenth of the year. And that one-tenth will become much more bearable.

Complete summer air conditioning is the only thing that will give you optimum conditions during that one-tenth. And if complete shade-and-ventilation are impossible (as in most remodelings), summer air conditioning becomes as essential in this area as central heating is in Maine. The very minimum in this respect is one room-air-conditioner, used during the daytime in a room on the west side of your house—the time and place it's needed most.

Our house for Gulf Coast living demonstrates Climate Control principles to a remarkable degree: A double roof plus overhangs keeps the summer sun entirely off house and walls. In addition, the roof is surfaced to reflect sun heat. Aluminum roofing embossed to reduce glare, does this job over most of the house. Reynolds Metals Co., Louisville, Ky., was specified for the roofing, plus flashing and metal work. The service wing uses a sprinkler system by April Showers Co., Washington, D. C., which cools by evaporation as well as by reflection.



To allow complete under-floor ventilation, the house is raised two ft. above the ground (sketch below). All foundations and the first floor slab are of Trinity Portland Cement from the General Portland Cement Co. of Chicago.

Two feet above grade, masonry floor slab escapes termites, vermin, ground moisture. Screen of bricks laid thus does not interfere with ventilation.

Flooring Material. The slab is reinforced with Steeltex floor lath by Pittsburgh Steel Co., Pittsburgh. Polished terrazzo flooring as recommended by the National Terrazzo and Mosaic Association, Washington, D. C., makes a cool, durable, and easy-to-clean finish for ground-floor living areas. Asphalt tile by Congoleum-Nairn, Inc., Kearny, N. J., gives an inexpensive, yet durable, kitchen floor. Oak floors in second-floor bedrooms and gallery are by the E. L. Bruce Co., Memphis. Both bathrooms have ceramic tile floors and wainscot by the Mosaic Tile Co., Zanesville, Ohio.

Structural Specifications. A large part of intelligent design is merely smart shopping to reduce freight costs wherever possible. T

STOP DRIP

MEMBER OF THE WEDDING?

You can't afford to miss the sparkling parade of last-word home furnishings and accessories ideas and information in HOUSE BEAUTIFUL'S Guide for the Bride . . . whether you're the bride, the bridesmaid or the great-aunt from Poughkeepsie. It's on sale now, at 50¢ per copy, at leading newsstands and department stores. Stop for yours today . . . while the supply lasts.

this end, the structural frame is of southern yellow pine, from a member of the Southern Yellow Pine Association, New Orleans. Sills, "Wolmanized" by the American Lumber & Treating Co. of Chicago, become highly resistant to decay and termites. Plywood for inside wall surfacing is obtainable locally from the Ipik Plywood Co., Kenner, La. The United States Gypsum Co., Chicago, was specified for lath and plaster. Bricks are from a local member of the Brick Manufacturer's Association, New York City. The Eagle-Picher Co. of Cincinnati was specified for all paints and mineral-wool insulation against heat conduction. Interior doors are by United States Plywood Corp., New York City.

Shutters, Screens, Fans. Note at top of page 78 the principle of separate "walls" for separate jobs. It's easy to change from view to privacy, from totally-enclosed to wide open, from sunshine to shade—with never a worry about insects. (And if the only price of this control is extra doors to lock before you go out, it's a bargain. You'll never come home to a stuffy, uncomfortable house.) The louvered shutters that mean so much here are made by Kilpatrick Mfg. Co., Oklahoma City.

One big reason for the six-foot module underlying our design was so the entire south façade could easily be covered with Alcoa aluminum screen cloth. It comes in six-foot widths from Chase Brass & Copper Co., New York City, specified also for copper gutters and down spouts.

When it's steaming hot, and there's not a breath of natural breeze stirring, do just what a becalmed sailor would do: start up a propeller. All three fans of this house (above) are by Hunter Fan & Ventilating Co., Memphis, Tenn.

Windows, Heating Equipment. For approximately one-third of the year a Gulf Coast house needs some form of heating. The sun supplies most of this as needed. Open the louvered doors on the southern side to let winter sun pour in, close the big sliding glass doors to keep chilly air out. Glide Windows, Inc., Burbank, Calif., was specified for the slender aluminum frames of these doors. Aluminum casement windows elsewhere are by Timm Industries, Inc., Los Angeles. Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. of Pittsburgh was specified for all glazing. Weatherstripping and interlocking thresholds are by Monarch Metal Weather Strip Corp., St. Louis. At your call, artificial heat will be supplied automatically from a gas-fired winter air-conditioner by Bryant Heater Co., Cleveland.

Plumbing fixtures are by Crane Co., Chicago. The water heater, with its 60-gallon storage tank, is from Rudd Mfg. Co., Pittsburgh, vented through a Transite pipe by Johns-Manville Corp., New York City. Yale & Towne Mfg. Co. of Stamford, Conn., was specified for all hardware. Cast-iron fireplace equipment is by Donley Bros., Cleveland. Lighting fixtures throughout are from Kurt Versen, Englewood, N. J. Josam Manufacturing Company, Cleveland, makes the drain for the outdoor pool.

Kitchen Equipment. Frigidaire Div. of General Motors Corp., Dayton, Ohio, was specified for refrigerator, home freezer, clothes-washer, drier and ironer. Gas range is by Geo. D. Roper Corp., Rockford, Ill. A stainless-steel sink unit by Just Mfg. Co., Chicago, is set into counters by the Formica Co., Cincinnati. A dishwasher and Disposall by Hotpoint, Inc., Chicago, complete the equipment.

"Cleaning Is Much Easier, Now!"

"Constant window washing and wall scrubbing days are over. Now, an occasional going over with a damp cloth is all that is needed. My Vent-A-Hood collects all the staining cooking grease and steam vapors and blows them out of the house. Vent-A-Hood will keep YOUR kitchen sparkling, too."

The woman who chooses well

Church Pearl Seat
No. 840

You know her . . . the woman whose home reflects in every detail her unerring sense of quality and smart decoration. She never forgets the importance of the less obvious things.

In her bathroom or powder room, you'll find a Church Seat. Blending or contrasting with the smart color scheme . . . its gleaming beauty compliments her good taste . . . its quality confirms her good judgement. And the name "Church" stamps it beyond question as the best, the standard by which all others are judged.

Church Pearl Seats (like the one illustrated here) come in gleaming black, rich tints, soft pastels and white. Also in plain finish. At better plumbing stores everywhere.

You get complete disposal service when you own a Republic DUO-WAY DISPOSAL UNIT...

Rags, bones, wood, paper, garbage (wet or dry) all disappear like magic in a Republic DUO-WAY

Make things easier for yourself with the DUO-WAY, the most versatile of all "disposers." One touch of the push-button and this ingenious, gas-operated unit really does away with all burnable household wastes.

The big secret lies in its unique "Dry First —Then Burn" principle, utilizing two separate zones. One for drying. One for burning. With the DUO-WAY, no smoky, smelly, half-dry debris can become accidentally ignited. What a honey of a helper. So simple to use. The DUO-WAY is not only safe, sanitary—but smart looking as well. About once a month you get a cheap, fine fertilizer for the garden, from the contents of the Ash Drawer.

Do away the easy way . . . the modern way . . . the DUO-WAY!

3. Prune wisely. Cut the top back within three to six inches of the ound immediately after planting. epeat this at the end of the sea- n if growth was not husky and undant. Until the plant makes a od root growth, there isn't any nse in struggling to get leaf and oot growth.

4. Start training early—and keep it. You don't get good insulating ver by accident. So train your ant to produce the cover you ant where you want it. You can t heat-insulation in one-third the me it would take if left to chance. help the new shoots as they ap- ar. Space them on the wall. Tie em in the place you want them grow. It's well to remember one bit of all plants—shoots grow stest when they point straight up. end them down and growth is ticeably slower — practically ops when the shoot points direct- down at the ground.

Don't fail to cut off unwanted oots as soon as they appear to ve wasting plant strength need- elsewhere. Once you get ade- iate wall or trellis coverage, une as ruthlessly and regularly needed to prevent overcrowding, sure way to pests and disease ubles. Most people delay prun- g until winter, but this encour- es the plant to push out new oots as fast as possible. Summer uning—even merely off the top ee inches of each shoot, usually uses growth to stop for the year, ip to use after vines get as big needed for Climate Control.

5. Avoid pests and diseases. Vines for Climate Control usually are on or close to painted structures. You naturally hesitate to squirt sprays at them and dusts are just as risky. Start with pest-free plants (another reason for being extra fussy about the source of the vines you buy), and then keep your plants free of trouble so you won't have to spray or dust regularly. Feed and water your plants liberally for their good health—but never feed or water after midsummer for a severe winter may so weaken them that bugs and diseases will be rampant the next spring and summer. Always make routine check for pests every month or so (takes only a minute or two) so you can stamp out the trouble before more than a few leaves are affected.

6. If you want to paint a wall regularly, grow the vines on a hinged trellis so they can be tilted away from the wall at painting time. Paint and the way many painters treat vines aren't conducive to your interests in Climate Control.

So relax—vines will work for you day after day without attention. If you have struggled to pamper some exotic plant, you have a wonderful surprise in store for you when you grow vines for Climate Control. You'll embarrass them if you fuss over them. Follow the simple steps given here and you're bound to succeed. Then you'll enjoy this extra-summer cooling for your house and garden.

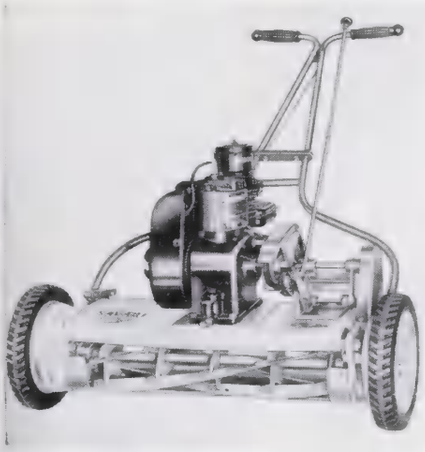
Don't wait for this;

Have you ever wished that lawn mowing could be a push-button affair?



Many inventors have tried to build such a robot mower. The Reo Company recently perfected a workable, radio-controlled version of the Reo "Trimalawn" (photograph below)—but it's strictly an engineer's plaything, not destined to be manufactured for sale because the cost of the radio equipment is prohibitive.

But you can buy from a wide choice of 1950 power mowers that do all the work. You merely follow along to guide them. On these and subsequent pages we show a cross ection of just what is available. Choose a reel-type mower if you ride yourself on the smoothness of your lawn. Look for a machine that has easy adjustments for cutting height—and be sure you can cut as high as 1½ inches, the desired height for bluegrass. Buy a rotary-type if your lawn is inclined to be irregular, or is meadow that you want to keep at lawn height. Some rotary mowers have attachments that scoop up leaves in autumn and grind them into a mulch.

Radio control (right) directs the mower above—your whole lawn mowed automatically as you sit in the shade and push the various radio buttons and levers. Wonderful to dream about, but too expensive right now except as a stunt.

If storage space is a problem for you, look for a mower whose handles fold or are quickly removable. Several mower manufacturers have developed ingenious space-savers for their 1950 models.

How to choose your piano

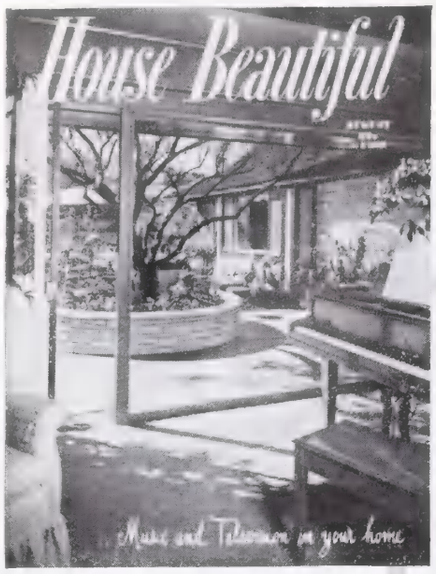
Watch your child's face as she listens, and you will know why music is like sunlight on the human soul, essential to your home.

Few can deny that a piano is the ideal instrument to encourage and enrich your family's enjoyment of music. It supplements all other means of appreciating music and adds physical grace and dignity to the home. The question is, which piano shall you buy? This is a major decision, for the purchase of a piano is for the average family a once-in-a-lifetime investment.

If there were only one word to describe what to look for, that word would be quality. The more perfect the quality of the engineering, the materials and the workmanship, the more dividends will your piano net you in pleasure and service. There are five basic points to consider carefully when you are determining piano quality:

Tone Regardless of whether or not you have had any musical training, the tone of the instrument should be pleasing to your ear. Good tone quality is pure and resonant, and rings out clearly whether you press the keys softly or strike them hard. Each note on the keyboard should have a consistently rich and pleasing quality.

"a piano adds grace and dignity to the home..."



Touch Touch translates the downward pressure of your finger on the key into the sound you hear. Every key should respond quickly to each variation of finger pressure. Moreover, every key should be back in position to play again the instant you lift your fingers. Touch is particularly important to beginners, for sensitivity of touch makes learning much easier.

Style Select a size and style of piano that will fit in with your living room. The case should be of authentic design, so that it will retain its beauty through the years, without becoming "dated." Examine the finish, and assure yourself that it protects the surface and enhances the beauty of the casework.

Durability The endurance of your piano will depend largely on the superior quality of its materials and craftsmanship. A piano should be made of the finest woods, seasoned for several years, both in the open air and indoors. Bear in mind that an instrument which is known for its fine quality has a high resale and turn-in value.

Reputation Reputation is important because it is always earned. Note the manufacturer's name on the fall-board. Is it an honorable and established one, a name you will be proud to have on display in your home? Does the instrument have a wide and enthusiastic acceptance among concert artists and other discriminating musicians? Remember that a guarantee is only as good as the organization behind it.

Which piano, you may ask, has all five quality features in the greatest degree? The answer is the Steinway. Its vast superiority of tone, action and durability has won it the acclaim of nearly every celebrated musician of today. In terms of value received, the Steinway, whether Grand or Vertical, is the most economical of all piano investments. For further assistance in the selection of your piano, write to STEINWAY & SONS, Steinway Hall, 109 West 57th Street, New York 19, N. Y. Telephone CIrcle 6-1100.

■ On our cover, the "music room" in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alan Ladd, Holmby Hills, California, which is in fact the living room itself. Where music is regular daily fare, a piano is no spotlighted, polished showpiece, but as much a part of the house as any other furnishings. Here it is colored to blend unobtrusively with the rest of the room, and placed so indoors and outdoors share its music. Textured rug in living room, Firth Carpet Co. This SELF-insulating window

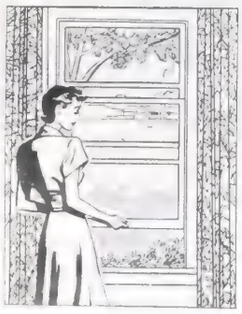
Window illustrated is made by Chicago & Riverdale Lumber Company, Chicago 27, Illinois.



Looks like an ordinary double-hung wood window, doesn't it? That's one of the good things about it—an insulating window that not only looks like, but works like regular sash.

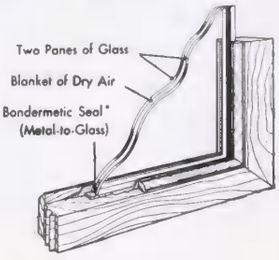
But instead of having single panes, it is glazed with *Thermopane insulating glass—a double-glass unit with dry air hermetically sealed between the panes. With this kind of window you can enjoy the extra comfort and fuel savings of double glazing without all the expense and bother of storm sash.

No ladder climbing to put up or take down storm windows. No storage problem. No cleaning problem. Your window insulation job is done, once-and-for-all, when your house is built!

So plan on this most modern kind of glazing, Thermopane double-glazing, for every window in your new house. You don't have to buy storm windows, and you save all the expense of fitting them, painting them, hanging them and maintaining them through the years.

Thermopane is made in more than 80 standard sizes, as well as special sizes, for use in all types of sash—double-hung, casement, picture windows and other styles—made of either wood or metal. Your L·O·F Distributor can furnish full information. Or write to Libbey·Owens·Ford. *®

Opens and Closes just like a regular window. Easy to operate. Screens can be full length so you can open your windows top and bottom for ventilation.



Cuts Window Washing in Half. Just two surfaces to wash—the indoor and outdoor—not four, as with storm sash. Hermetic seal keeps dirt from getting between panes.

MUSIC IN SCHOOLS

Every American child is entitled to some musical education in the elementary schools. Why aren't they getting it?

by Louis G. LaMair
President, American Music Conference

I am writing as a layman—as a disappointed parent—disappointed because my children, while in school, did not receive an education in music. I am speaking in behalf of over twenty-three million children in the elementary schools of our country. Most of them are denied the opportunity to receive a complete education in music on a par with other school subjects during regular school hours.

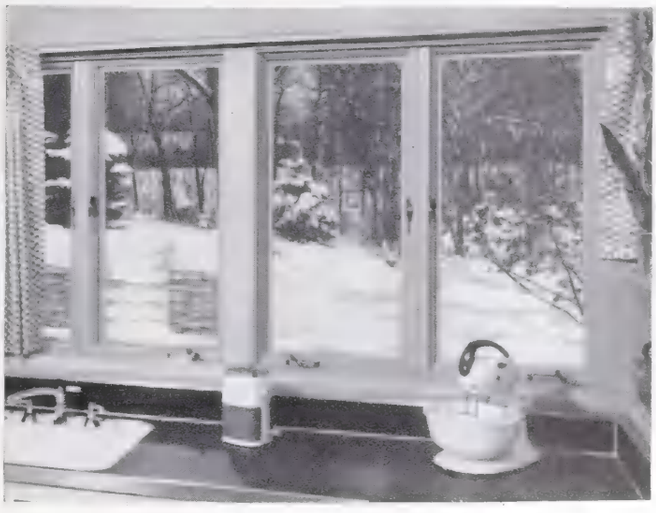
For over twenty-five years, educators have agreed that music should be a part of the basic education of all children in elementary school. But, we are still far short of that goal. The Music Educators National Conference has prepared "An Outline of a Program for Music Education" which, if universally adopted, would achieve that goal. Parents want their children to receive an education in music. The children enthusiastically embrace the opportunity to learn music in school. What are we waiting for?

For one thing, a change of attitude must occur in the minds of many influential persons, a change in their attitude toward music, and a change in their attitude toward education in music. Thinking that was typical of the Feudal Era must be abandoned. The history of music reveals that the Church was the patron of music until the Sixteenth Century. Then the aristocracy and nobility became the patrons of music. The American Revolution and the French Revolution in 1789 established the dignity of the common man and equality of opportunity for all, including the right of all children to receive an education.

A human being will derive as much benefit throughout his entire lifetime from a basic education in music as he will from any other subject taught in elementary school. Every child in every elementary school should receive a basic education in music.

Progress has been made, but today more than half of our children are not receiving any education in music. For the sake of our children we must not only be for education in music, we must strive to make it a reality.

The American Music Conference advocates a complete program of music education. This includes rote singing, rhythmic experiences, instruction in music through class piano, vocal and choral music, and bands and orchestras in the elementary grades followed by adequate opportunity for music instruction to be available to our seven million high-school students.



When this occurs, we shall truly have "Music for Everybody."

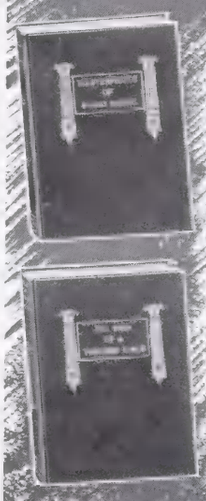
SIGN LANGUAGE. Two signs speak for themselves. One asks: "Why be disagreeable when with a little effort you could be a real stinker?" The other bemoans: "Everything I like is illegal, immoral, or fattening." Hang them over your bar. Bring 'em to your week-end host. Send the first one to a grouchy raccoon for his office. 16″ x 5¼″. $2.95 each ppd. The Bar Mart, 7 W. 45th St., New York 19.



WONDERFUL SHELLS that you'll bake scallops or crap meat au gratin in, and bring right to the table, are bean-pot brown on the outside, moss green on the inside. WHAT EVERY LOVER OF Antiques SHOULD KNOW

Now, You Can Tell Instantly: Who Made It, How Old It Is, What Period, Where Design Originated, If It Is Genuine, How to Restore It, etc.

HERE—in one big book—is everything you want to know about American antique furniture. HOW TO tell fakes, clever copies, and the "real thing;" identify "hall marks;" judge value. How to know which real antique will grow in value and which were poorly made; distinguish the different periods; restore, refinish and repair antiques; "spot" the little details that experts use to evaluate pieces.

1650 Gorgeous Illustrations—864 Big Pages

Feast your eyes on scores of chairs, breakfronts, tables, bedsteads, cupboards, chests, consoles, cabinets, lowboys, sideboards, sconces, mirrors, settees, highboys, desks, cellarets, sofas, etc. Here, indeed, is a lifetime treasury of the furniture you love—with clear text telling you who designed it, who made it, stories behind each piece, etc.

"The Standard Book of American Antique Furniture" by Edgar G. Miller, Jr., can save you hundreds of dollars when you buy antiques, help you decorate your home more authentically, and get more joy out of your hobby.

7-DAYS' FREE TRIAL!

Originally written as a guide for amateurs, this magnificent volume has become a standard reference for professionals. The 2-volume edition now sells for $27.50 (When the book was out of print, second hand copies sold for $100.00.) By ordering a large printing of a single-volume edition and eliminating a section on clocks, we are able to cut the price to less than a third of the 2-volume price. A SAVING OF $20.00! The book is printed from the original plates on fine, coated paper and handsomely bound in full buckram.

At this amazingly low price—we expect the edition to sell out very quickly. So, mail the coupon below for 7-DAY FREE EXAMINATION — while our supply lasts. Greystone Press, Dept. HB-8, 100 Sixth Ave., N.Y.C. 13.

Covers ALL Periods Including:

White, pink or blue $1.00 more.

SAFETY-BAR

Adds height to the crib side—prevents those dangerous falls that can result in permanent injury. Quickly attached with rubber-covered clamps to top and bottom of either side of any standard crib. Works up and down with the movable side. Adjusts to add additional height as the child grows taller. Of sturdy hardwood in non-toxic natural finish or white. (If crib is located with one side against wall only one Safety-Bar is needed.)

Cats Love to CLAW Furniture

Here's How to Stop Them

Cats are independent and seldom do as they are told, especially when it comes to keeping off furniture or sharpening their claws on the legs.

But you can keep your cat away from the furniture by using Kitty Chaperone. It is odorless to you, but cats just can't stand the smell. Absolutely harmless. Handy shaker package $1.

SEND NO MONEY: Order Kitty Chaperone C.O.D. $1 plus postage (or send $1 bill at our risk and we'll pay postage).

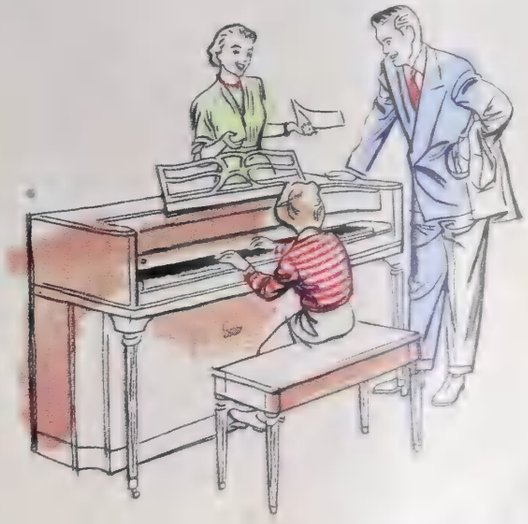
It's Worth MENTIONING

by Julie Polshek

Eureka, a clam opener! Shuck-'Em's welcome new brain-child is just as terrific as the oyster shucker they created last year. One stroke of the speedy stainless-steel knife divides the shells (any size or shape) and cuts the muscles loose. The clam emerges with nary a bruise or cut on its main body. The precious juice drains into the aluminum pan. Easy on the hands. $6.95. Pleasant Hills Industries, 700 Third, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Muggy room air feels degrees cooler in no time after you plug in this automatic Oasis Electric Air Drier. All the while, it protects room effects from the ravages of dampness. Move it here or there, year-round, to serve any confined living, work or storage area of up to 10,000 cu. ft. It extracts up to 4 gallons of moisture in 24 hours and drips it into a pail or through a hose. $148.95; casters $4. Lewis & Conger, N. Y. C.

This home-like twin of the Roll-A-Rack dispenser used in self-service stores solves can problems to a fare-thee-well, in the refrigerator or pantry. It creates order, saves space, brings each can into hand's reach. Top front is the filling station: a 2-story gravity-feed circuit marches the 10-can load to the dispensing station at lower front. It's chromed metal; 14½" x 5¾". $4.95. Wire Products, Box 724, Oswego, Oregon.



It's come at last—a table-top food chopper that performs on any flat surface. Enterprise's No-Clamp Chopper is a headliner from its firm base to its extra-big hopper mouth. It chops raw or cooked meat, vegetables, fruit, with the same skill that gives Enterprise commercial choppers renown. It's easy to clean, sturdy, light. $6.95. Strainer-purée attachment is a time-saving gem. $2.50. Hammacher Schlemmer, N. Y. C.

Your Child's Hidden Ability Responds to the Exquisite Acrosonic by Baldwin

Deep within almost every child is the yearning for expression in music. Those who know music the world over know how this yearning can be stimulated and developed with a truly fine instrument like the exquisite Acrosonic. Here is exciting tone and smooth response at its best . . . the direct result of the exclusive Acrosonic scale and famous "full-blow" action. Ask your dealer or write us for our booklet, "Planning Your Child's Future."

The '50 Ford Fordor Sedan. The "dress-up" car with all the quality features that make Ford the one fine car in the low-price field. Your choice of "hushed" 100 h.p. V-8 or 95 h.p. Six. Inside and outside styling that has earned Ford the Fashion Academy Gold Medal Award two years in a row.

The '50 Ford Convertible. Here's fun for all the family—rain or shine! The top goes up or down in seconds, automatically. Your choice of all-leather or fabric-and-leather upholstery. New non-sag front seat with foam-rubber cushioning.

250,000 families are two-Ford families

"I'll pick up the children, Sis, as soon as school is over."

"Bob and I can go straight to the Smith's. We'll meet you there."

"Nobody has to wait with two big Fords in the family."

Think of it! There's not one Ford but two in the garages of over 250,000 American families! Why? Because they've found that nothing else matches two-car convenience!

What's more, they've found that owning two Fords costs little more than one high-priced car! Fords are economical to buy, economical to run and there's less dollar depreciation at "trade-in" time!

Why not see your Ford Dealer today and "Test Drive" these two Ford running mates? You'll SEE, HEAR and FEEL the difference. And the car you now own may well provide the down payment on two new '50 Fords!

There's a Ford in your future
...with a future built in!

To people who see more than scenery when they travel, Maligne Lake near Jasper Park in the Canadian Rockies is an eye-filling demonstration in scale and proportion. The firmament dwarfs the mountains, mountains dwarf the glacier lake, the lake makes Lilliputians of men.

How to leave home and like it

by Louisa M. Comstock

Dates and rates are changeable. Prospective tourists should confirm this information with their travel agents, transportation companies, or hotels

Shrewd visitors to the Canadian Rockies take the time—and the clothes—to see Maligne Lake firsthand, instead of merely admiring its photographs in the light and lovely lobby of the Jasper Park Lodge. Maligne is not only the largest glacier-fed lake in the Canadian Rockies, but its vivid green water, reflecting the snow-clad peaks towering over it, constitutes to many the finest view in this whole view-rich area. It is only a scenic thirty miles from Jasper, over a combination car and launch route which may now be traveled round-trip daily. But a day is not enough for Maligne. Better are the two- or three-day trips, or the four-day jaunt returning by horseback over the Spectacular Sky Line Trail. Best of all is a week or more at the lake itself where you can hike, mountain climb, take several boat trips, and fish, fish, fish for speckled trout. So come prepared. You can arrange the trip either in advance or on the spot through any of the following, all addressed at Jasper, Alberta, Canada. Jasper Park Lodge, which operates 1-, 2-, and 3-day all-expense trips; Rainbow Tours, Ltd., which sets up the saddle trips; or Jasper Park Tours, Ltd., which does a sight-seeing trip only, daily. Representative costs: from $12, round-trip transportation only; round trip including meals, a boat trip, and overnight when required, 1 day, $20; 2 days, $29 for heated canvas houses, $31 for cabin accommodations; 3 days, $32 and $36; 4-day saddle trips, $105 and $109, with additional days at the lake from $10 with meals.

Not so pure— but very good

Storytelling musical records play an important part in introducing young children to music

by Richard Williams

What happened to Little Black Sambo? It seems that one fine day he was taking a walk through the jungle and on the way he met one animal after another. The animals joined him on his walk and each played a different instrument. The elephant played the big bass horn, the baboon the bassoon, the brown bear the saxophone, the little monkey the piccolo, etc. As Sambo continued his walk, the animals decided to play together; they formed themselves into an orchestra. That's how Sambo got to know the instruments which constitute an orchestra.

This recording—entitled "Little Black Sambo's Jungle Band" and written and narrated by Paul Wing, music by Norman Leyden—is typical of a new kind of album, the purpose of which is to stimulate an interest in music by telling the child a story which has something to do with music. These recordings, designed particularly for young children (aged two to nine), have been welcomed by parents, which is perhaps not important, and have also been welcomed by the kids, which is important. The device of music through story is a sound one. Children are more interested in storytelling than in abstract artful sounds. They are more at home with drama and action than with sweet harmony. It all depends, of course, on how it is done. In order to appeal to the child, the story must be a special one. It must have charm and humor, and must have its quota of imagination and fantasy. Above all, it must be exciting. A child can well become acquainted with music through such a story as fairy tale in which the hero or the villain is not a sleeping prince or a hungry giant, but a musical instrument. Admittedly, this tricking-out of music with adventure is not the pure way of presenting the noble art. What of it? If it achieves purpose—leading the child to music—it is unquestionably a good approach to a sometimes tedious process.

A special skill, a special understanding, is needed to tell a child's tale and tell it well. Notable work has been done by Paul Wing and by Alan W. Livingston. It is Mr. Livingston's belief that "these albums go further in creating interesting situations through which the child receives an incentive to learn than so-called 'accepted' compositions for children." After all, says Mr. Livingston, "at a very young age records can only serve to introduce him to music and not to educate a child musically." The music that does come with the stories produced by Wing, Livingston, and the others is simple, rhythmic, usually gay, and caparisoned with impressive sound effects. Children like noise, good and loud.

Mr. Livingston has his own recognizable style. Indeed, I should think that a knowledgeable youngster, hearing one of his new records might exclaim, "Mr. Livingston, I presume!" Among his records, I particularly like the Sparky series. In "Sparky's Magic Piano," Sparky, a young lad who has experienced some trouble with his piano lessons, dreams that he is the owner of a magic piano on which he can play anything. He astonishes one and all with his virtuosity; though he then experiences disillusionment, eventually his desire to practice and really learn the piano returns. A very moral tale! In "Sparky's Music Mix-up" our hero has decided that he is tired of the piano, that other fields seem greener, and that he now wants to play the violin. The violin also proves unsatisfactory, so he wants a clarinet, then a trumpet. On and on he goes, playing each instrument badly. But it all winds up happily, with Sparky glad to be back with his friend the piano. "Rusty in Orchestraville" tells the story of a young boy's visit to the land where all the instruments live. The conductor of the orchestra introduces him to these instruments and the instruments talk to him in strange voices (Sonovox). In this record, Mr. Livingston uses parts of Haydn's "Surprise" Symphony for the music. In another recording, "Gossamer Wump," he employs Ponchielli's famous "Dance of the Hours" to his own comic purpose.

Virtually all recording companies offer these music-story records. Among records that have achieved much popularity are "Tubby the Tuba," which is likely to become a classic and which has been made in several versions, one of them with Danny Kaye as the narrator; "Said the Piano to the Harpsichord," with a story by Douglas Moore, in which the piano and the harpsichord argue which is the better instrument and finally make their peace by playing a duet; "The Little Tune That Ran Away," a story by Vernon Bowen which is all about a tune that does not seem to belong anywhere, and feels homeless until a mother sings it as a lullaby; and "Pan the Piper," a new production by Paul Wing.

But of all storytelling musical records, the one that is the greatest favorite is a modern, sophisticated composition which was originally not destined exclusively for children, just as Robinson Crusoe and Gulliver's Travels were originally not children's books. You have guessed, of course, It's Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf." Six versions of this are now available. Of them all, I like best the one with Stokowski conducting and Basil Rathbone as narrator of Peter's colorful day.

Is your child's future worth a Wurlitzer Piano?

Your son and his "get-ahead" in life

Those early years in a child's life are the years that shape character. And a Wurlitzer Piano can help mold character as only musical training can do.

At the Wurlitzer keyboard, your children learn to use their minds as well as their fingers. They develop concentration, coordination, perseverance—confidence in themselves and their ability to do things. They gain poise, ease of manner—personality and ability that can make them popular companions among people everywhere.

Like a good education, a Wurlitzer Piano is an investment in your children's future—an investment that pays dividends all through life.

A Wurlitzer can add to future poise, popularity, success

THIS story is about your child, and his love of music.

There are excellent toys made today to teach children coordination, muscular control, judgment, and other requisites of mental and physical development.

How few parents realize, however, that the development of an appreciation of music must go through exactly the same stages! And it is an essential background for the acceptance of music lessons, when the time comes for them.

Records offer an excellent device for bringing music into the home. But the kind of music that is recorded for children must be in the idiom of a child's world . . . otherwise though you may thrust it at him twenty times a day he will reject it . . . because it's not fun.

Young children are interested in picture books. These pictures mean something because the child can see objects and associate them with his surroundings.

Most music at this point consists, to the child, of strange sounds coming out of a box. But link that music to the picture book and it takes on an entirely new significance!

There are "record" picture books, for example—Capitol "Record-Readers" —with colorful illustrations of Bugs Bunny, Woody Woodpecker and Bozo the Clown. The child, seeing the pictures, is immediately intrigued.

Then records, timed to the story books, are played . . . and those "strange noises" from the box immediately make sense; they are associated with something a child can see and understand.

And thus, for the first time, a child of two, or even younger, can be taught to enjoy good music.

Because it is his music. And it's fun!

Let the child participate

In a short time it is easy for the youngest child to enjoy the thrill of participation in stories and music. "When Bozo blows his whistle, turn the page!" the record-reader says. After a few clumsy attempts, the child achieves it, in time with the records.

The love of picture books will continue in a child for many years, but in a relatively short time it no longer becomes necessary to associate pictures with the music. For your child has learned to form his own pictures, in his own mind. You have taught him how!

Then it is time for the next step. From his first love of Bozo's Circus music, it is easy to move on to the story of Sparky's Magic Piano . . . the little boy who didn't want to take piano lessons, and all the fun he missed. Here is music of a more advanced sort . . . Chopin, Haydn and other noted composers. It is great music, but again it's linked to a story children enjoy.

And on you go to Rusty in Orchestraville, where the various instruments are introduced . . . and the Disney classics.

It isn't long before the music itself is significant and entertaining to the child mind. And from that point on, the selection broadens to include some of the world's truly great music.

But remember that your child, unless he is a prodigy, will not be forced into music appreciation, and later to learn an instrument. It is a step-by-step education . . . started early!

"Cheare up the countenance"

by Richard Williams

Robert Burton, English clergyman, who wrote that famous book, The Anatomy of Melancholy (1621), recommended music as a remedy for many ills. Music, he said, will "Cheare up the countenance, expell austerity, bring in hilarity, informe our manners, mitigate anger." Well, perhaps music does have curative properties. It is so used now in many industrial plants. But we are more interested in the pleasure that music brings: we are more interested in the fact that it does "cheare up the countenance." Music makes a happy home happier. It makes a lively home livelier. Most important, music can bind a family's home life together, because—perhaps more than the other arts—it appeals to all ages. The same music can be enjoyed by the very young and by the very old. A song or a symphony leaps over the barriers of age with the greatest of ease. It's an interest parents and children can have in common. The result of music enjoyment is a reunion of the family, all assembled with cheared up countenances.

Last year, HOUSE BEAUTIFUL published for the first time a special issue devoted to Music in the Home. This was so enthusiastically welcomed by our readers that they asked us to do it again. We are doing it again. And—we hope—we are doing it better. You will find here no talk about the esthetics of music. But you will find here a host of specific suggestions for the home life of music. These suggestions include a comprehensive nontechnical discussion of that curious new magician—Television!

These kids enjoy Music

Music ranks along with the three R's in Chicago's public schools where youngsters learn to play everything from triangles to tubas

Take one look at this picture and you'll see what I mean when I say "these kids enjoy music." They're in it heart, soul, and bowstrings. To them the melody "listens" good, but the fact they're playing it is what's really exciting. You see, at this age the greatest pleasure in music is the joy of accomplishment. That's why I believe every child should have the opportunity to take an active part in some form of music at an early age. It's just as important as math or athletics. For even this brief experience will enable them to find more pleasure in life as adults. (Continued on next page)

Beating time with sticks, blocks, and triangles gives the youngest children a basic sense of rhythm. This group in the kindergarten of Chicago's Cameron Elementary School eagerly awaits the downbeat of their leader—often one of their own class.

The school band may not rank with the local symphony, but it's just as important to the Clissold Elementary students who take their music as seriously as this baritone horn player. Instruments are made available by Chicago Public School system.

Class piano periods are extremely popular in the Cameron Elementary School. Oversized keyboards on long tables enable many boys and girls to "play" at the same time. Dr. Howe says this is one of the best ways to teach fundamentals of music.

Music instruction continues as part of the daily curriculum in high school where students play more complicated orchestral instruments. Here is a practice session with flute, clarinet, French horn, bassoon, and oboe, at Farragut High School.

by John Briggs

Mr. Briggs used to be a music critic on the New York Evening Post, but now has gone on to become the Editor of Etude Magazine, the stately publication that is read by music teachers. How to select a music teacher? He ought to know!

How to choose a music teacher

So you're thinking of music lessons for your youngster! Your first problem is to find a teacher. This calls for abiding patience, and a certain amount of tactful sleuthing.

Begin by asking yourself whether your youngster will aim at a professional career. Unless he is a child prodigy, the odds are that he won't. If he is a prodigy, you certainly want to get the finest teacher available. But the teacher who is best for a wonder-child may not be best for the average music students.

The best pianists are not necessarily the best teachers. (And to "pianists," add also "violinists," "cellists," "flutists," or what have you.) A great teacher need not fire his hearers with his playing of the "Appassionata," so long as he fires the imagination of his students.

Teaching and playing concerts, in fact, have little in common. They are separate careers. The possession of tact, for (Continued on page 100)

All this for a Song

Don't confine your singing to the shower. You don't have to be a trained vocalist to enjoy the uninhibited pleasure of group singing either at home or in public

by Sigmund Spaeth

Through his last book, A History of Popular Music in America, Sig Spaeth has become the official historian of song, ranging from "You Will Have To Banana" to the hit tunes of South Pacific.

It is acknowledged by psychologists that the elimination of human self-consciousness finds its commonest expression in an outburst of song. This is particularly true of the male sex, whose removal of inhibitions, through artificial stimulants or otherwise, has the effect of complete vocal freedom, in song and story.

There are two possible explanations of the traditional school of bathroom vocalism. One is that the sense of uninterrupted privacy encourages uninhibited self-expression of a naturally musical type. The other (and equally tenable) theory credits the plumbing and tiling of a well-appointed bathroom, particularly the intimate surroundings of a shower, with an artificial resonance that makes any voice sound much bigger and better than it really is. (There is even an old story about a family that never learned to sing because there was no lock on the bathroom door.)

Let it be assumed that practically all human beings can sing a little, for at least their own pleasure, and that they unquestionably do better when supported by other voices and relieved of the embarrassment of performing for an audience. If every member of a group realizes that nobody is listening to him or her in particular—everybody taking part on the same level of unrehearsed enthusiasm—"community singing" becomes one of the simplest and most satisfying of all pleasures.

In its deliberately and carefully organized form, singing in a group presents no problems. People gather at certain public places at certain times, under definite leadership, properly equipped with the necessary materials and predisposed to take an active part in the vocal activities. Such gatherings (now less common than in the past) have often resulted in the (Continued on page 101)

PARTIES that make you famous

How to plan A MUSICAL MENU

The finishing touch for a glamorous dinner party is the music. An experienced party-giver tells you how she plans it

I am up on cloud nine, for we are having a party! The barbecue fire is lighted. Ada and Nellie have been briefed on "operations kitchen." Everything is under control, and I know we are going to have fun.

As I am running that comb through my hair and putting on a new face, I hear Bob singing lustily in the shower. I suddenly realize that I have not planned the music for the evening.

"Bob, what music would you like to have tonight?" I ask.

He pops his head out and drippingly asks, "What did you say, dear?" So I repeat, "What music shall we have tonight?"

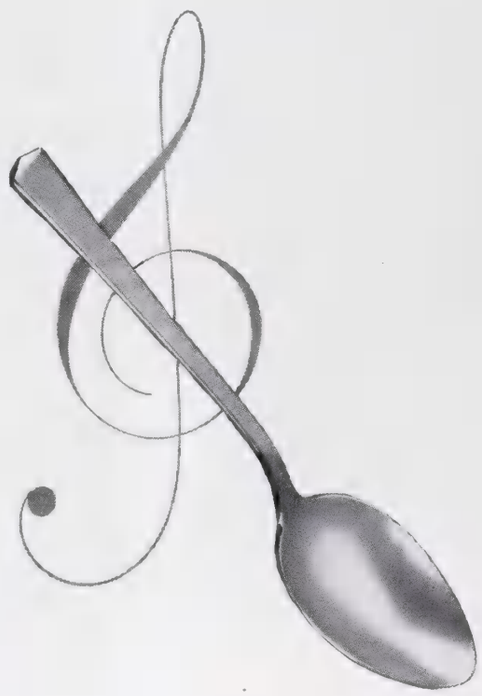
"Well, what are we having for dinner?" he counters.

"Oh, nothing that will make any difference in the music."

"Well, then, whom are we having—the Jet Set, the Slow Cozies, or the Intelligentsia?"

I pause momentarily to reflect over the guest list. "Some of each group are coming."

This sort of throws Bob and he mumbles resignedly, "Have anything you want, dear," and he returns to his vocalizing in the shower.



Two centuries ago, Yuan Mei, popular writer of modern Chinese literature said, "There is a difference between dining and eating. Dining is an art."

I belong to the school which thinks music greatly enhances that art. Certainly music is a great help in slowing down the tempo of our meals. And isn't it true that most of us have fallen into the sad habit of rushing through dinner, either to let the servants go home or so that we can dash off for the movies or canasta?

In artful dining, music sets a graceful, leisurely mood. But it also contributes importantly to that feeling of well-being which every hostess wishes to create for her guests. This is a feeling compounded of many things, all of which have to do with pleasing the senses.

Symbolically, all the senses are saluted in the traditional toast to one's health. I do not know in which country the following likely legend originated, but I suspect it was France, for the French people have a great appreciation of food and drink and how it is served.

When the wine is poured you see the beautiful color. (That is why I think all wine glasses should be clear.) Then you smell the bouquet, then taste the delicious flavor—and all the senses but hearing are pleased. Then someone dreamed up the click- (Continued on page 98)

This grand piano looks right at home even in a long narrow room because the owner had the good sense to decorate on a "grand" scale. Instead of surrounding the instrument with small insignificant furnishings, he gave it a bold magnificent background—a Japanese Kamakura screen. This produces two important visual effects. The piano becomes an architectural part of the room and its dimensions are minimized by the proportions and sheer beauty of the screen itself.

See how the companion screen on opposite wall provides a much-needed counterbalance. Lack of clutter and wall to wall carpeting augment spacious appearance. Note, too, how the lamps and driftwood at the far end of the room are appropriately scaled to the rest of the furnishings. Home of Jack Lawrence. Walter Myden, decorator.

If you want your piano to be the center of interest, put some provocative attention-getter over it. See how this unusual wood carving of musical instruments attracts the eye to the piano wall in the home of the Robert Schasseurs. Mary T. Luscher, Herbert Fouts, decorators.

You don't have to own one large picture or object that's equivalent in scale to your piano. You can mass a collection of small pictures to form an important background as decorator John C. Frear has done for Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Newhouse. Note overscaled table placed in curve.

Decorating on a "grand" scale

by Sara Little

Your grand piano looks best when you match its proportions with furnishings of equal importance

Don't worry about the size of a grand piano. It's not how big it is but how big it looks in your living room. And that all depends on the scale of your furnishings. Surround your piano with little uninteresting accessories—low lamps, a few scattered pictures—and their smallness accentuates the size of the instrument. It looks hopelessly out of place. But give it a setting where accessories are big in size and visual importance—like the Japanese screen on the opposite page—and the piano looks as though it were made for the room. And that's the secret. Make your decoration as "grand" as the piano, and size is no longer a problem.

Little piano—take a bow!

The new spinets are made to be seen as well as to be heard, and they'll fit into the smallest of living rooms

A spinet piano can surprise you by fitting into a space that might otherwise be wasted. This one is placed between two doors, takes up no more room than a bookcase. A handsome side chair instead of a bench doubles as extra seating space when you entertain. Raymond L. Toucher, decorator.

Placed in its own mirrored alcove, this spinet is brought into the limelight as an important part of this room's decorative scheme. Note illuminated ceiling, the cabinets (under bookshelves) for storing music. Photographed in home of Dr. and Mrs. Nathan Pensky. Mary T. Luscher, decorator.

The growing style-consciousness of the American housewife is responsible for the engineering of the small pianos now known as spinets, consoles, and verticals. She decreed that a piano in her living room must please her discerning eye as well as her musical ear. She issued her decree by rejecting the upright which, for nearly half a century, was the favorite home piano of the nation because of space and price factors.

The upright offended her sense of modern symmetry and proportion. It crawled up the wall to a height of nearly five feet in some instances, with an expanse of superstructure that no amount of carving, paneling, or fancy veneering could atone for. The big upright, bearing a close resemblance to a folding bed with a toothy grin, passed out of the picture following the hair sofa, the patent rocker, and the base burner. The only people who regretted its departure were those in the lumber business.

Ninety per cent of the purchasers of pianos for the home this year will select one of the new small instruments. If they are wise, Good small pianos are available in wide varieties of woods, finishes, and designs. The good old stand-by woods are American walnut and mahogany, available in the standard color shades or as bleached blondes. Pianos may also be had in limed oak, maple, and avodire, all natural blondes. Ebonized finishes are growing in popularity. They are rich and lustrous, carry much dignity, and some people like to place them with blonde furniture for contrast.

The piano is usually the most conspicuous piece in the living room, lasts a long time, and most purchasers lean to conservative designs and woods. Pianos are not occasional pieces.

Instruments that are easy to play

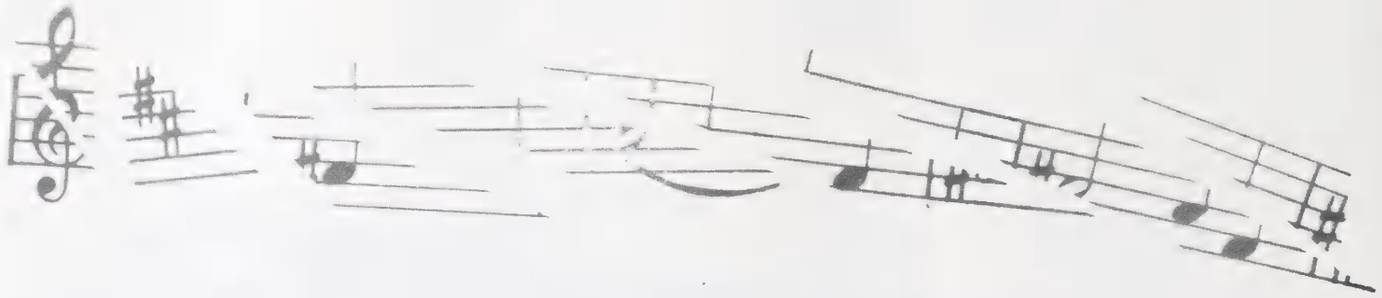
by Robert Bagar

Co-author of Concert Companion and Music Critic of the New York World-Telegram and The Sun guides you to instruments which you can master without too much trouble—and which will yet give you musical satisfaction.

Are you a musical Milquetoast who has always wanted to play and never had the courage to attempt it?

Here's the way to get started—on the simpler instruments

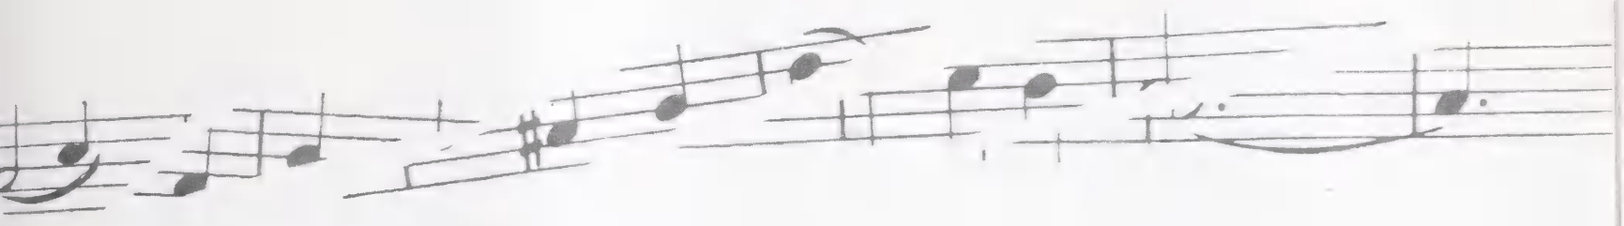
Right now, in numberless homes throughout the United States, there are children taking lessons in piano or violin, two instruments which may be regarded as the basic ones in music education. How many of these youngsters will continue studying is hard to say, but you can wager that the percentage will be infinitely small. So we'll just skip them, like that; they're on their way to the better life.



But what of the thousands who, for whatever reasons, give up their lessons? Will they not, in later years, regret that? And will not many of them, handcuffed by inertia, suffer pangs of remorse because they did not take up some humbler instrument—the guitar, the accordion, through which to get an added kick out of life, a personal gratification by the mere fact of being able to make music? Maybe you know lots of people like that. Maybe you're one of them yourself. Well, what are you going to do about it? Stay that way?

Ladies: Is there one among you who can fashion for her own vocal flights deft accompaniments on, say, the ukulele, play a tune softly on the zither, or, perhaps, keep you spellbound with neat improvisations on a small home organ? And does she not, at the close of her performance, walk off on the arms of half the men in the place? And are you not just the least bit envious of her ability—at making music, that is?

Gentlemen: Do you not stew in your own vinegar observing the smug superiority of a certain fellow in your circle whose simple talents on the ocarina, for example, are ever a source of delight to the ladies?



There is in store for you, too, a great deal of pleasure over and above the mere sense of achievement, if achievement isn't enough for you.

At this point, it wouldn't be amiss to remark that there is no instrument really easy to play. (Continued on page 115)

So you think your child is unmusical? Don't jump to conclusions. Every child will respond to music if you give her the right kind of help

Count that day lost in which some parent does not approach some musician somewhere in this wide land to whisper jubilantly or miserably. "My child is a musical genius. what shall I do?" or "My child can't carry a tune. what shall I do?" Over the years I have been asked both questions innumerable times by letter, telephone, and personal interview. The invariable answer, though it must be phrased more tactfully, is, "I don't believe it."

I don't believe it because the chances are millions to one against any child being either a genius or totally unmusical. I know that these parents see and hear their children day in and day out. while I may never clap eyes or ears on them. I still don't believe it. Parents—I'm one of them—are likely to shuttle between too much and too little hope in their offspring. and in music the fluctuations may be wilder because the experience of the average mother and father may be limited.

So you think your child is a genius? Wait and see. Let him in on your private thoughts. Don't thrust him into the public limelight. If he turns out to be a Beethoven. Gershwin. Heifetz. or Toscanini. congratulations! If he doesn't—which is more likely—neither you nor he will be disappointed.

If you think your child is hopelessly unmusical. buck up. because it probably is not true. But. you (Continued on page 104)

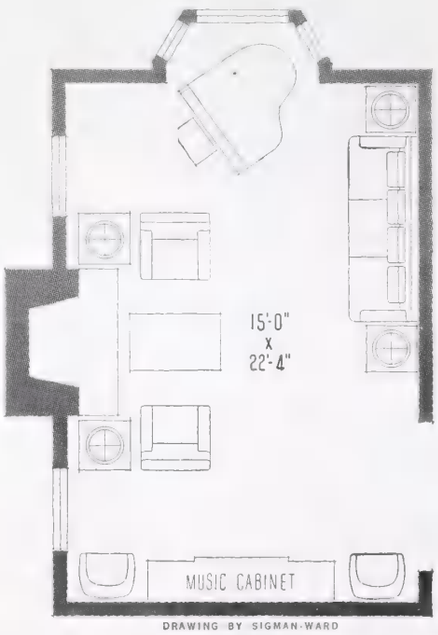
A living room SET TO MUSIC

If you can't afford a special room for piano, radio, phonograph, and television, you can put them in the living room. See how quietly they fit into this one without dominating it



PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER

A piano casually placed in the window bay is the only thing that spells music in this quiet living room, yet every detail is carefully calculated to provide a setting as pleasant for listening as it is comfortable for everyday living. See how the piano's bulk is minimized by the generous and flattering background of soft gold draperies.

You could spend a quiet evening by the fireside without ever suspecting that this room was equipped for several kinds of audible entertainment. The leather-covered breakfront houses radio-phonograph, television set, and record storage. Big-scale accessories, and pattern on the walls only, gives room character, keeps it from being distracting.

The breakfront itself is custom-made but it is designed to hold a standard radio-phonograph in the lower center section, a television set above. Plan of room below shows ample seating is provided for either television or piano recitals. Home of Mr. and Mrs. Norwood Smith, decorated by Paul Granard.

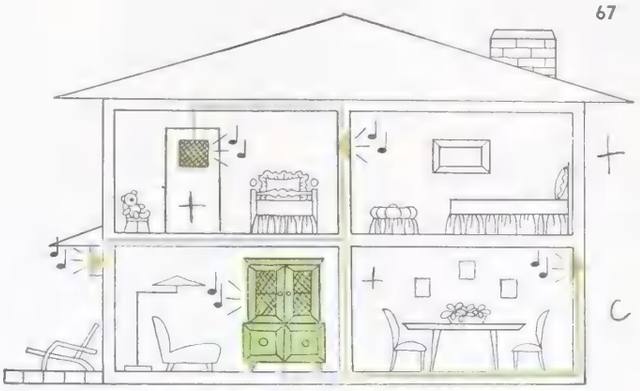
Wire your house for sound

To get the finest reproduction of radio and record music, buy high-fidelity custom components and build them into the structure of your house

by Lloyd Shearer



If you're building a new house and music means anything to you at all, you'll want a built-in sound system. Plan it at the same time you plan for the other factors that contribute to your well-being, like heating and lighting. It's much cheaper that way. Whether or not you build a music system into an existing house depends on how much good music is worth to you in dollars and cents, and how adaptable your structure is to such an installation. In some houses, the "works" can be accommodated in existing spaces. In others, it may not be worth excessive construction costs. That's for you to decide. (Continued on page 130)

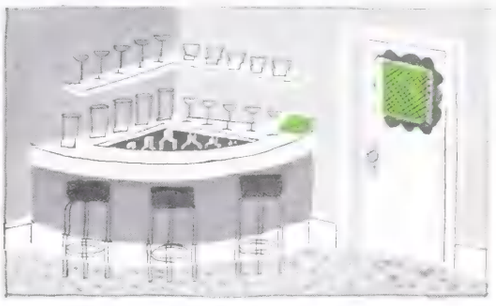
Sound system built into breakfront in existing house (opposite and above, left) contains amplifier, AM-FM tuner, record-player, TV chassis, speaker. Music from master unit is piped to speakers throughout the house, like the one in wall of master bedroom, above. Each has individual controls. Planning the system as integral part of house in the first place can give you even better results—at minimum cost.



You can enjoy music all over the house. Here 4 extra speakers are hooked up to set in the living room.

DECORATION BY JEROME SNYDER

Are we so taken with the classical works of the old masters that we can't appreciate the good music of our own popular composers?

by Deems Taylor

Fraulein Alice, the step-daughter of Johann Strauss, the famous "Waltz King," had an autograph fan on which she collected the signatures of the distinguished musicians who visited her step-father's home. One evening she asked Brahms to sign. The great man took the fan, jotted down the opening bars of the "Beautiful Blue Danube" waltz, and added, Leider nicht von Johannes Brahms ("Unfortunately not by Johannes Brahms").

To some self-styled American music-lovers that anecdote will probably sound faintly scandalous. How could a great composer so far forget his lofty station as to express admiration of a mere composer of waltzes and operettas? I can tell you how: Brahms was a good enough musician to recognize good music when he heard it, regardless of its label—something of which some of us seem, leider, not to be capable.

Musically speaking, we tend to be a pretty snobbish lot, accepting or rejecting a piece of music according to whose name is attached to it, and obsessed by a nervous dread of being nice to the wrong people. This timidity can be explained by our lack of musical background as compared with Europe. We are three centuries behind. At a time when the Duke of Weimar and the Prince of Anhalt-Coethen were fighting over the services of Kapellmeister Johann Sebastian Bach, we were fighting Indians. One must wait until the last quarter of the Nineteenth Century before finding anything approaching a widespread interest in serious music in this country.

But an explanation is not necessarily an excuse. We're getting to be big boys and girls. Any country that maintains, as we do now, two hundred symphony orchestras and twenty thousand high-school and college orchestras is surely out of its musical swaddling clothes. But our musical snobbery persists. We divide music into two classes: "classical" and "popular." "Classical" music, so far as I can determine, is music of any pretensions by a living European composer, and any music by a European composer who died before 1895. "Popular" music is any music that doesn't fit into the "classical" category, particularly music by an American composer whose pretensions are less than symphonic and which is listened to for entertainment.

In recent years American composers have written music of symphonic proportions that can hold its own with the European product. There is not a great deal of it as yet. Nevertheless, serious (Continued on page 103)

What you should know

WHEN SHOULD YOU BUY TELEVISION?

The best time to buy a television set is the morning after your oldest child has seen his first television show. Experts consider this a timely and shrewd surrender to the inevitable, for the selling techniques of the very young are rough, relentless, and reliable when it comes to television.

But even if you have no tyrannical little ones to speed up your purchase, we still recommend right now as the time to buy, once you've decided that television is for you. If you've been hesitating, it is doubtless because you've heard it rumored that you'll soon be able to get a better set for less money, that the imminent perfection of color television will put all present sets out of date, that an impending something called UHF will radically change TV reception. But let's see how these rumors break down under scrutiny. For example:

Will prices go down and television sets improve? If television follows the pattern of every other product of our mass production economy, some day you will assuredly get better television sets at lower prices. But this is scarcely a valid reason for depriving yourself of television in the meantime.

No one can guarantee that prices of receivers won't go down in the next year. For this pioneer industry is constantly learning how to mass-produce television parts and mass-assemble them into sets at less cost—and hence at lower price to you. In the near future, these costs are expected to be got down almost as far as they can go. When this happens, prices should become stabilized for a while, then perhaps go up a bit.

As for improvements, certainly there will be improvements year after year—unless the industry goes to sleep on its feet, and there's no danger of that—but no revolutionary changes are anticipated which would make you rue your purchase.

You can wait to see how all these things are going to turn out before you buy, but you and yours will be missing a lot of television pleasure while you wait. Most television owners tell us that they wouldn't move so cautiously as to forego a year of such fun as Arthur Godfrey, Howdy Doody, Kukla, Fran, and Ollie, the Goldbergs, and Ed Wynn, or such good theater as Studio One, Robert Montgomery's show, and Cameo Theater, to say nothing of such provocative programs as Meet the Press and The Author Meets the Critics, and on-the-scene (Continued on page 117)

WHAT SHOULD YOU BUY?

You can buy any one of about 700 television models, made by over 100 manufacturers. This won't necessarily clarify the problem of what you should buy, but it's an encouraging indication that you stand a pretty good chance of finding a set somewhere which precisely meets your needs. And don't think that television isn't a highly personal affair, depending for its effectiveness on such variables as your taste, the location of your house, the kind of room you put it in.

Obviously, we cannot tell you offhand exactly the type or size of set you should have. But we can start you off shopping on the right foot by listing what we believe are the chief points to consider.

Your final choice will probably depend upon:

What you are willing to spend for television.

Your judgment of the set's technical quality.

The screen size you think you ought to have.

The kind of room in which you'll install your set.

Whether you want an instrument for television alone, or television in combination with radio or phonograph, or in combination with both.

We urge you to be thinking about things like this (we discuss them further on) rather than worrying about what you don't know about electronics. It's a good idea to know a few of the technicalities when you buy television, but you still don't have to be an electronics engineer to make a successful purchase. In general, your safest assurance of good technical performance comes when you patronize a reliable dealer and buy the product of a manufacturer with a familiar name. Many of the big manufacturers are companies who established their names and reputations years ago in the radio industry and know their electronics from way back. Many newer firms are making first-rate sets and first-rate names for themselves. Firms like these stand behind their goods, willing and eager to repair or replace their occasional failures, because they plan to stay in business for a long time to come.

Unhappily there are also wildcatters in the television industry, tricksters in for a quick killing. They are part of this young industry's growing pains and won't last long. But meantime they are tempting the unwary with attractively priced, aristocratically named sets which look like bargains, but (Continued on page 118)

Study the careful arrangement of this room to see how to keep the television set from taking over the living room when reading, conversation, and televiewing share the same quarters

Put television in its proper place

A TV set shouldn't hog the living room, yet it must be placed where its screen's "viewing arc" may be seen from most seats. Both these chairs need only a slight turn to see the show. Cabinet (see it closed opposite) is placed so radio and phonograph are on the less visible side.

This conversational grouping is at right angles to the TV screen, needs rearranging only when a TV show is on. Then the chair at the right should be turned to face the screen. Casters make this an easy operation. The large center hassock provides extra seats at correct viewing height.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY NOWELL WARD AND ASSOCIATES

A television set, even a generous-sized combination, needn't overpower the entire room. By placing this large cabinet off-center on the wall, its size is underplayed. At the same time it's located where it gives the best service and is seen by most viewers. A table lamp provides enough light for reading TV programs, but doesn't cast a glare on the screen.

The most ample seating accommodation is properly placed directly opposite the TV wall. Sofa holds three viewers, while the entire room seats an audience of nine comfortably. Lightweight armchair can be pulled around to face the screen, but the tables never need to be moved. Lamps are turned off to cut glare. Decoration by Wachsman Associates, Chicago.

Television addicts frown on people who walk in front of a set. See how well an arrangement near a corner avoids this unwanted traffic. Move chairs around the viewing arc to hem in the TV area.

When the Bensingers renovated their cellar, they turned the coal room into this delightful setting for cocktails. It faces the TV corner (above) but is far enough away so as not to interfere.

If you want to salvage the wasted space in your cellar for a gay informal room like this, make a point of practicality. Choose fabrics which can take a beating, colors which stay fresh. Walls here are sturdy, earthy brick and plaster. Basement windows were replaced with bottle glass. For a touch of good-natured zaniness the mural shows episodes in the saga of the owners. THE CHARM OF

The serious music that television brings into your home usually "looks" very good or very bad. Here are scenes from a thoroughly satisfying broadcast of Verdi's* La Traviata

A group was gathered around my television set last winter to hear and see a world-renowned violinist perform. The voice of the announcer told us that the artist's plane had landed him in New York only a couple of hours earlier, that the accompanist was not with him, and that the program would have to be changed.

The worst happened. As the fiddler launched into the unaccompanied Bach Chaconne, we looked at each other with mild amazement. Never had we heard an artist of repute play so pitiably. Out of deference to his reputation and the unfortunate circumstances under which he had to appear, I turned off the sound and kept only the image. The effect was startling. All the skill and experience of a master violinist were clearly there before us in the sweeping bow, the confident grasping of chords, the calm assurance as the familiar piece went on from variation to variation. Only when I tentatively switched the volume knob to the right could we believe that this was not a good performance. Actually, it sounded better when we did not hear it.

Fascinated by this experience, I tried the same thing later in the evening with a crooner. This time the result was really funny. I have always been mildly irritated by the palpably forced sentimental gestures and facial expressions of the average crooner "putting over" a ballad with a poor apology for a voice. But to see those pleading parallel arms pumping away, those fluttering eyes, that lugubrious teeth-baring without benefit of any voice at all is a richly comic experience. Does television cause Eyestrain?

The answer is emphatically NO. Watching television—for children or grownups—is no more harmful than reading, movies, or driving a car. Here a doctor gives you ten rules for the best viewing conditions

by Dr. Milton Berliner

Author of Biomicroscopy of the Eye, Dr. Berliner is Consultant Ophthalmologist of New York Eye and Ear Infirmary and a member of the faculty of Cornell Medical College.

Anxious parents come to the office of eye doctors throughout the country wanting to know if they should allow their children to watch television. They want to know if it is dangerous to eyesight. They want to know how long they may safely watch programs without eyestrain and under what conditions. They follow a common pattern. Every new invention has caused the timid to fear a danger in what is really a forward step.

The answer is that television is no more harmful to the eyes than are movies, reading, sewing, or driving a car. The same rules and precautions that are recommended for the prevention of eyestrain and fatigue generally are applicable to anyone who is watching television.

Broadly, the problem can best be understood by consideration of the two factors involved: first, the eyes of the observer and, second, the modern television screen itself.

To look at television does not produce defects or diseases of the eye. However, like reading, it can, under improper conditions, induce eye fatigue. Yet, even in cases of chronic fatigue we have no positive scientific data to prove that eyestrain produces permanent damage to eyesight. Usually, the mind will tire sooner than the eye. This is one safety valve or mechanism like pain which nature provides to protect vital organs.

Eye fatigue from any cause may result in a series of uncomfortable symptoms—headaches, pain within the eyes, inability to hold a clear focus. When it is severe it can bring about tearing, twitching, redness, and sties of the eyelids. In actual practice we find (Continued on page 112)

For comfortable, casual television enjoyment, you should be able to transform a room quickly and easily into a miniature theater—and just as easily put it back to normal. Mobile furniture, like these fireside lounge chairs with the rubber-tired casters, does a smooth about-face in this music-reading-playroom by decorator William Pahlmann. Edward D. Stone was the architect.

How to enjoy television

To reap the rich rewards of television, you t see and hear it on a consistently ell-behaved, dependable set. Here's how to get it

There's practically nothing, from hassocks to housecoats, which hasn't been specially designed to help you luxuriate in the new-found pleasures of television. But all the cozy swivel chairs and/or lounging pajamas in the world won't make television enjoyable to you if your receiver doesn't operate the way it's supposed to. And it is just as well to face the fact now that the finest receiver you can buy may behave like a prima donna unless it is painstakingly installed and properly handled by young and old alike from that day forward.

Accordingly, there are three simple, solid, and dependable rules which can make your life with a television set a rewarding experience. They take precedence over other and fancier rules. They are:

1. Get an expert installation.
2. Have access to a good and understanding serviceman.
3. Read and treasure that little book which goes with your set. The manufacturer planned it for you in your language, to be your TV handbook.

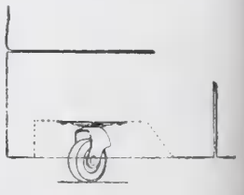
When you buy your set, you may also buy a "warranty." This is the industry's name for a contract which guarantees repair and replacement of parts, and it is generally a soothing reassurance to have in case your new set appears in any way unstable. The most frequently used warranty is one which guarantees the picture tube for three months and the rest of the set for a year. This seems to be a fair arrangement, for if the tube (the most expensive part of the set) should be defective, its defects will show up in less than three months of use. And if the rest of the set behaves well for a year, it will probably last a long time with only occasional minor adjustments. The contract may be made between you and the manufacturer, or between you and the retailer.



A competent television installation may cost you up to $100—probably a good deal less, in rare instances a little more, depending on where you live and the stations you want to get.

Workable, unobtrusive TV arrangement here was plotted by decorator Raymond Toucher. The set was built in as part of a book wall, giving television a pleasant casualness. When not in use, it's concealed behind curtained grilles. All that's needed for viewing is to reverse the two light armchairs and open the bookcase.

This custom-installation wisely put the TV set in a corner—a most desirable location if you can manage it, because here there is no room traffic to get between view and viewers. The circular sectional sofa not only gives all seats a good view, but in effect partitions the TV area from the rest of the living room.

You will do well not to quibble over the cost, though, for television enjoyment begins with the installation. And it is a problem for the experts. A talented amateur may plug in the most complex radio unit and make it do a job. But it usually takes a talented professional to install a television set if you want to get anything but hash.

Take the pro's word for what you need by way of installation. The first word he will probably utter is "antenna." And your reaction will undoubtedly be, "Oh, no, not that!" because you'll be thinking of what you've seen on other people's roofs. But keep your head about this.

You will certainly have to have an antenna, which is actually the trap which captures the electro-magnetic waves of the television picture and funnels them into your receiver. And in the main, the higher your antenna, the better your reception and the more stations you will receive. If your home is in a hollow, it will need a higher antenna than if it were on an elevation. Nevertheless, it is possible in some installations, that you may not need that complicated piece of geometry on your roof.

For there are, in general, three kinds of antennas. The newest type is actually built into the TV set itself. This does away with the necessity for an exposed antenna inside your room or on the roof of the house. Mind you, the manufacturers of sets with built-in antennas do not claim that they will function perfectly everywhere. They say that built-ins will work in about 80 per cent of the homes which are within fairly close range of television stations. You may be one of the lucky ones.

There is also such a thing as an "inside antenna." This does not mean a built-in antenna, but one which may be set up inside the house. It may be hidden in a lamp base, a table leg, or placed under the carpet or behind a picture. Or it may be fastened outside a window with a lead-in to your television set. Some experts say these inside antennas work better if you don't try to disguise them. You can set them on a table or on the television set itself, so that you can easily shift their position in order to get the channel you want.

The objection to them is that their naked Y-shape looks stark and unfamiliar in the living room. But after all, we learned to tolerate the morning-glory horn, the steam radiator, and other peculiar shapes which science forced on us along with its benefits, so we'll probably accept the inside antenna, too, once it has ceased to be a stranger. We'd better, for it can make the difference between television and no television in places where built-in antennas won't work and roof antennas are vetoed by landlords or other immovable obstacles.

But a custom-built roof antenna may be your best bet, after all. It certainly will be if you live in a "fringe area"—that is, anywhere from 30 to 60 miles from the TV stations you'd like to get—or if you live closer than this but in a steel building, or hemmed in by (Continued on page 121)

How another designer keeps TV seating mobile

Decorator William Pahlmann concentrated on the mobility of the seating pieces when he designed this television-living room in the New York apartment of Thyra Samter Winslow. Encased in a custom-designed cabinet, the TV set is always casually visual to those seated on the facing love seats. But a masterfully engineered threesome of hanging cabinets not only solved the record-album storage problem but provided trim, out-of-the-way parking space for three lightweight stools, easily moved about whenever extra television seating is required.

I couldn't garden without zinnias

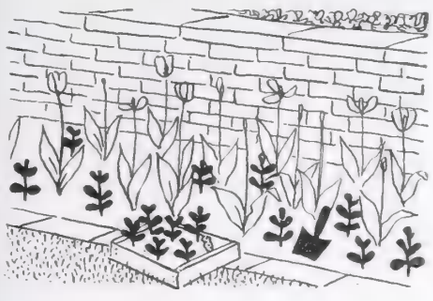
House Beautiful's Garden Editor

That's true. Zinnias always come to my rescue when I have a garden problem. When I need a certain color, I turn to zinnias. They come in all shades of the rainbow—not just the burnt orange and gaudy red most people associate with them. Or, if I need an edging plant that stays less than 12 inches high, I grow zinnias. If I need a husky plant that gets a yard high, zinnias fill the bill.

I can have small flowers or large flowers. I can have small leaves or large leaves. If flower textures are my problem I can choose delicate silky petals or coarse, tweedy petals. And I can count on getting flowers, lots of them, from July until frost. The more flowers I cut for use indoors (they are long-lasting cut flowers), the more the plants bloom.

Seems that such wonder-plants should be expensive and hard to grow. But they're not. You start them from a packet of seeds each year. Seedlings grow fast in sunny, warm weather. You can expect the first blooms in ten weeks. That's about all there is to it.

Troubles are rare. When crowded, zinnias sometimes get mildew-like white "powder" on their leaves. But when plants are properly spaced, they get enough air circulation around them to keep them healthy. A wise rule: Space plants a distance equal to their expected ultimate height. They bloom most freely this way too.



You seldom see any insects. Sometimes a few stray bugs move in when eating elsewhere gets slim, but an occasional whoosh with any all-purpose garden dust quickly kills the intruders. Zinnias have big, thin leaves, held away from each other. So insects have no place to hide when you apply the lethal bug dust.

Drought tolerance is among the best. The big leaves make you think zinnias would suffer—and the leaves do look limp on the hottest days, but the plants can stick it out. You'll get a lot more growth and far more flowers if you do water, of course. But you can go away for a two-week vacation, confident your zinnias will survive until you return and revive them for a full display of fall color. If you want them to fend for themselves longer, mulch the soil with peat or vermiculite before you go away.

Hints from my garden notebook: 1. Get the right size. Zinnias are rapid, vigorous growers. You just can't hope to keep them down, so plant the right size in the beginning.

2. Buy good seed. Insist on the best strains. Zinnias are prolific seed producers, and no (Continued on page 137)

SKETCHES BY JOHN BRIMER

Set zinnia seedlings among your tulips in late May. By late June, when the tulip leaves turn yellow and are ready to be cut off, your zinnias will be big enough to quickly fill the space with color.

Fill between past-bloom perennials with zinnia seedlings for summer and fall bloom. Out-of-bloom perennials must be kept rather dry, a soil condition which won't handicap zinnias. They bloom freely.

Zinnias offer a considerable height range to choose from: linearis—10 inches; cupid, lilliput, and mexicana—12 to 15 inches; navajo and cut-and-come-again—18 inches; plus the many 24- to 36-inch kinds.

A garden pool keeps you Cool

In the sweltering days still to come the evaporation from an inexpensive pool will make you more comfortable by cooling the air in your garden

HOUSE BEAUTIFUL'S
CLIMATE
PROJECT

Don't be too quick to write off a garden pool as an expensive plaything for gadgety gardeners. It's not expensive. It's not just useless ornamentation. Actually, a pool is a practical Climate Control device that cools the air in your garden by evaporation. So think of it in terms of summer comfort.

Building a pool is not a major operation. You can do it easily in a day's time. Depth of water is unimportant—two inches is enough. You don't have to go below ground at all. So there's no winter frost problem. Take your choice of materials. Concrete is easy to work, but wood, metal, brick, or stone serve equally well.

If you add a fountain or waterfall, your garden pool does a more subtle job than cooling the air. Falling water is a sound conditioner. It can mask out unpleasant sounds that originate outside your yard. You achieve this by regulating the amount of water and the distance it falls, so that the sound is slightly more audible than the noise of traffic or near-by industry. You get privacy from noise, which means your garden is more restful and relaxing. So don't put off enjoying a garden pool in your yard.

This brick and concrete pool, again deep enough for waterlilies, is stylish enough to border any terrace. Its cooling efficiency is further stepped up by a fountain—a copper box that squirts water from its under side. Note the tailor-made planting areas around the pool.

is it a lost art in gardening

Have we forgotten to include fragrance in modern gardens? I think many of us have. Today most of us garden for the eye alone. We worry too much about getting the biggest, brightest, most double flowers. Or we get so involved in trying for dramatic lines and a sophistication in ground pattern we don't think about how our garden will smell. We overlook the ways grandmother used to bring fragrance to her garden. She grew some flowers just because "they make it smell like a garden." She understood the necessity of fragrance for fullest enjoyment of a garden, both immediate and in memory—"fragrance we remember, color soon fades from memory."

Grandmother had a showy garden (even gaudy by our standards), but she didn't hesitate to grow a patch of nicotiana, not showy at all but wonderfully scented. Her honeysuckle vine sometimes got out of hand and looked messy in its tangle. Her Sweetshrub wasn't bold and handsome, and her lilacs weren't the smartly styled versions we enjoy today. Her apple tree did litter the lawn below during the "June drop" and again at harvest. But what of it? These plants were for fragrance—not for show. Her garden always smelled good—always smelled like a garden.

She also realized that floral fragrance was not enough. She knew how to take advantage of leaf odors in her garden designing. She may have gone astray, design-wise, in building "knot gardens" for her spicy-leaved herbs, but she was on the right track in wanting the leaf odors. Modern gardens seldom include herbs unless the cook is a gourmet or the bar enjoys a reputation for home-grown mint. Yet sweet-smelling herbs are a sure way to make a garden a more enjoyable, luxurious place to relax.

So why let your concern be so all-out for the showy visual effects? Why not include (Continued on page 137)

Try the Hawaiian way of cooling a heat wave

When the temperature's up, follow these seven thirst-quenching formulas from the famous Royal Hawaiian Hotel of Waikiki Beach. They're favorites of people who live in year-round warm weather

Honolulu Punch

1 jigger light rum
½ jigger pineapple juice
½ jigger lemon juice
1 teaspoon sugar
½ slice pineapple

To these ingredients add a 10-oz. glass of shaved ice and mix all in an electric blender. Serve in 14-oz. chimney or zombie glass with straws.

Sweet Leilani

1 jigger light rum
½ jigger Cointreau
½ jigger lemon juice
½ jigger apple jack brandy
White of egg

Mix all ingredients, except egg white. Shake well together with shaved ice. Strain and pour into a glass, topping with egg white whipped to a stiff froth and flavored with a dash of Cointreau. Add a sprig of mint powdered with sugar.

Singapore Sling

1 jigger gin
1 dash grenadine syrup
1 jigger lemon juice
Cherry Heering liqueur

One at a time, pour all ingredients but cherry brandy into a 10-oz. glass full of shaved ice. Stir slightly. Float Cherry Heering on top, pouring very slowly over a spoon.

Royal Hawaiian Cocktail

⅓ jigger lemon juice
1 jigger pineapple juice
1 jigger gin
1 teaspoon orgeat syrup

Shake well with shaved ice, and strain into cold champagne glass.

Daiquiri

1 jigger Bacardi rum (light)
Juice of ½ lime
1 teaspoon bar sugar

Shake well with finely shaved ice. Strain into cold cocktail glasses.

Frozen Daiquiri

Juice of ½ lime
1 teaspoon bar sugar
1 jigger Bacardi rum (light)

Shake vigorously with lots of finely shaved ice. Pour mixture onto a mound of shaved ice in a champagne glass. Serve with straws.

Planter's Punch

1 jigger Lemon Hart 86 or Myers's rum (dark)
½ jigger lemon juice
1 dash Angostura bitters
1 teaspoon grenadine syrup

One at a time, pour ingredients into a 10-oz. glass full of shaved ice, and stir mixture slightly.

HOUSE BEAUTIFUL'S CLIMATE CONTROL PROJECT

There's a Gold Mine under your house

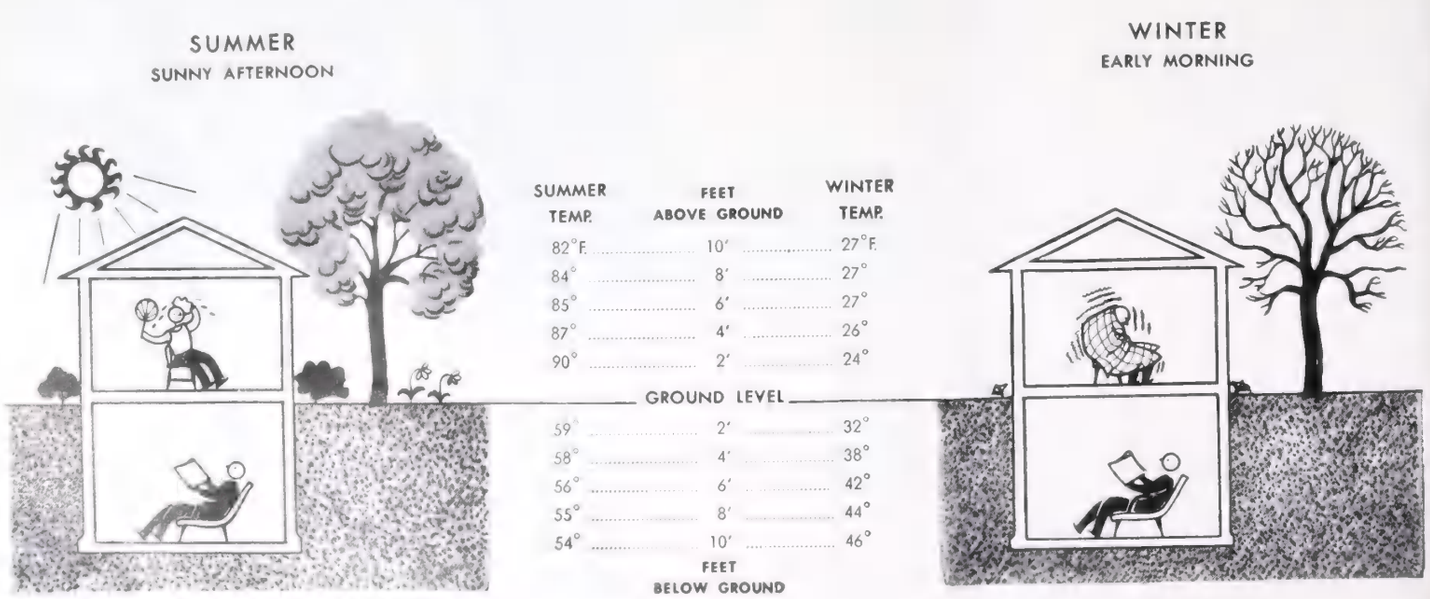
In two-thirds of the United States an undeveloped treasure lies in the ground under our houses. Harnessed, it can increase your comfort in winter and summer

Our tendency to consider the basement a thing of the past should be re-examined in the light of new information gathered in House Beautiful's Climate Control Project. These surprising new facts show that some of us should redesign our basements to create a new kind of room. The Editors.

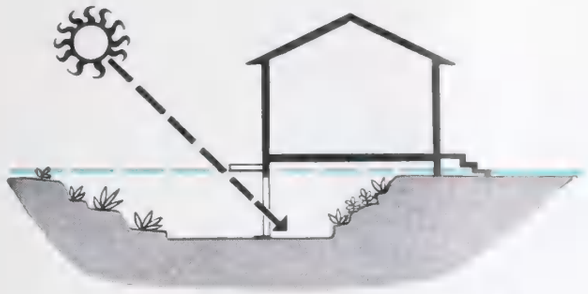
by Wolfgang Langewiesche

So you think a basement is old-fashioned? Well, yes. If all you have in mind is a place to put your furnace and a place to store assorted junk. Those jobs can be done better nowadays, some place else than in a dark, damp hole in the ground.

But that space under your house can be a gold mine of comfort. It can keep you cool in summer, warm in winter. Here is why.



A few feet under the ground there is no summer and no winter. Fifteen feet down, the temperature is practically the same the year 'round. Even six feet down, the seasons have lost most of their force. We ought to use that fact. We could make our earth soften the punishment we get from our sky.

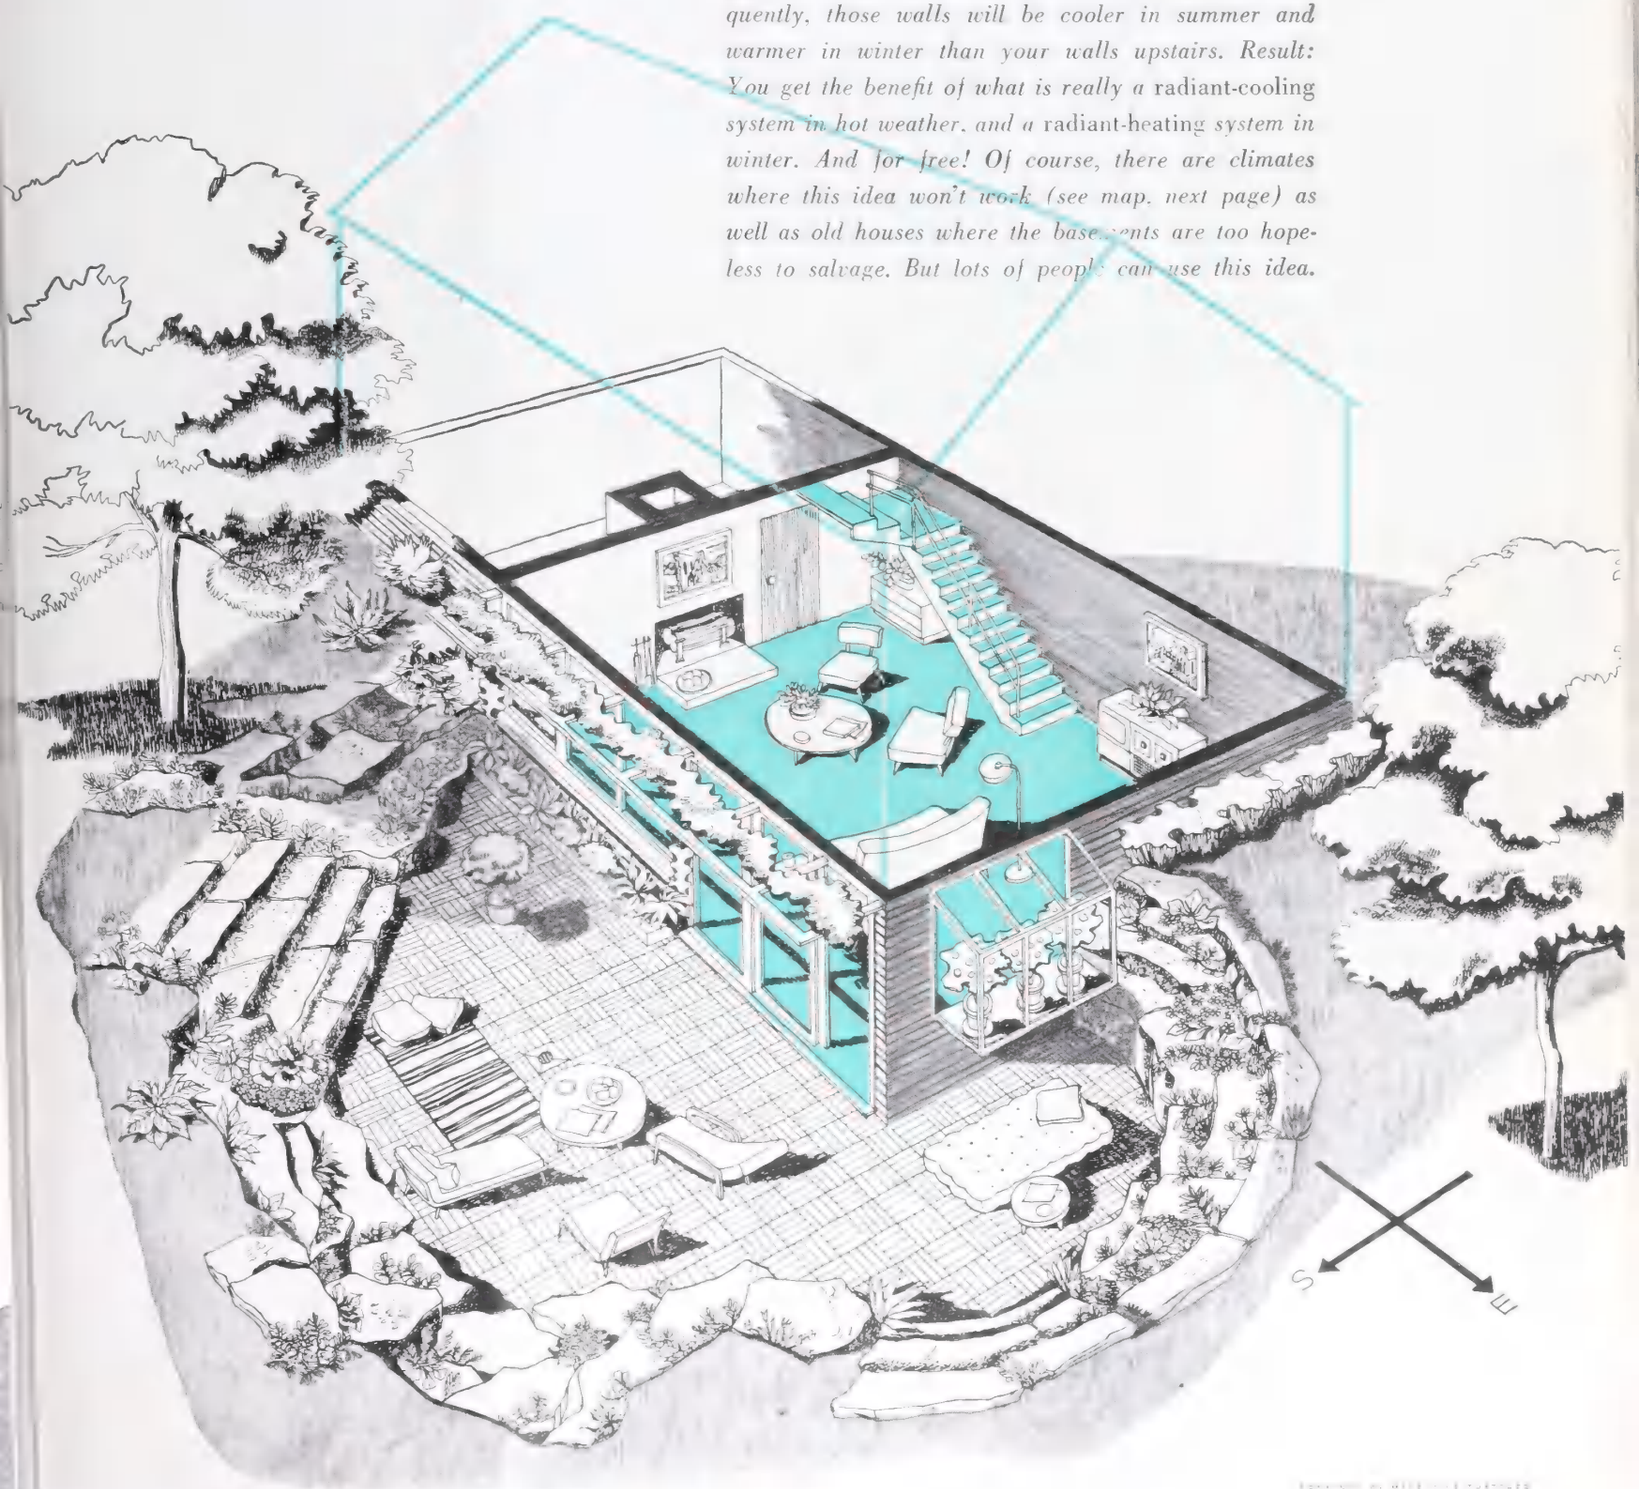


This punishment is pretty fierce in most regions of the U. S. Our summers are hot—hotter than those of the tropics. Our winters are cold—in some states colder than the famous Russian winter. In many parts of the U.S., you simply cannot design a house that is completely right both for summer and for winter!

But all the time, only a few feet below you, there is no summer and no winter. Your dog knows that. When the heat waves start squeezing, you want to pack up and go 600 miles north. He simply digs himself six inches down into your flower bed.

It may be that the American house needs, not less basement, but more basement—more sophisticated basement. It may be that we ought to sink some of (Continued on page 94)

SEE HOW UNDERGROUND TEMPERATURES SMOOTH OUT CLIMATIC EXTREMES



Underground rooms can have plenty of sun and still be primarily underground to benefit from the corrective effect of ground temperatures. Use the same solar-heating principles that you would use upstairs—illustrated above.

How to turn a basement into a comfortable, sunken living room

To be livable, a basement must obviously have sun and cheerfulness. This can be achieved without too much redesigning. It's very easy if your house is on sloping land. All you do is replace one masonry wall with glass. If your lot is flat, make an excavation outside your basement—to use as a sunken terrace and rock garden—thus creating a pleasant outlook for the sunken living room. Even with one wall out of the ground, you still have three walls surrounded by earth. Consequently, those walls will be cooler in summer and warmer in winter than your walls upstairs. Result: You get the benefit of what is really a radiant-cooling system in hot weather, and a radiant-heating system in winter. And for free! Of course, there are climates where this idea won't work (see map, next page) as well as old houses where the basements are too hopeless to salvage. But lots of people can use this idea.

Find where you live on this map to learn whether this article applies to you

This map is based on scientific interpretation of regional ground temperatures made by Dr. Paul Siple, House Beautiful's chief climatologist, whose idea it was that ground temperatures could be used to soften the sharp edges of seasonal extremes.

It shows where the underground can be harnessed to keep you cool in summer and warm in winter

Area of greatest advantage. The southwestern end of this zone has less summer benefit because it is drier. Also, yearly temperature extremes are not so great. Northern portions of this zone, with cool summers, would need to use sun's heat to take summertime chill off a sunken living room, but wintertime benefits would be very positive.

This area has both summer and winter advantages. But due to high relative humidities, a sunken room in this zone would require some mechanical air-drying to prevent condensation on walls, floors, etc. It is in this zone that complete, or partial, air conditioning would be most economical, and within the range of most people.

Area where underground living offers minor advantages—for the following reasons: because climate above ground is pleasant and without great extremes, or because the underground temperatures are not different enough to correct the above-ground climate, or because of the complications of extreme humidities.

our living quarters into the ground. So says Dr. Paul A. Siple, HOUSE BEAUTIFUL's chief expert on climatology.

It sounds kind of radical. But Siple is not just another Ph.D. with an idea. He is Geographer for the Army. He specializes in the housing and clothing of men in all sorts of climates—jungles, deserts, arctic. So, as you read this, you are indirectly listening to the world's number-one expert on how to keep the cold out, beat the heat, and keep your powder dry.

"I don't care," you say. "Live underground? Horrors! Who wants to live in a dungeon? I want sunshine and big windows and a view. Besides, basements always have that musty smell. Basements are damp. Some are outright wet. It makes no sense."

Well, Siple can answer you, point by point. It will pay you to listen to him. He might give you an entirely new perspective on your future house, or how to get more use out of your present one.

First of all, he says, let's not call it a "basement." A "basement" is dirty and dark. It is a hangover from the days when furnaces were dirty. Think of it as a sunken living room, a sunken bedroom. Such a room need not be a dungeon. It can be attractive. You can have light—even direct sunlight. You can even have a view! And you can keep those advantageous underground temperatures: cool in summer and warm in winter. On page 93, we show you one of the many possible designs for a sunken living room that's cheerful.

Now about that smell. Siple says: "Forget it." A basement smells musty only if it is damp and because it is damp. What happens is this: When a wall or a floor is damp and the weather is warm at the same time, small organisms start growing—spores and molds, similar to the mold that grows on bread. These give off that smell. Well, you wouldn't want to live in a room with damp walls even if it did not smell! So you are really dealing not with two problems—smell and dampness—but only with one: dampness.

One thermostat wasn't enough!

THE original builders of this lovely home spared no expense on the furnishings and equipment. But it seemed impossible to heat comfortably. When the living and dining rooms were just right, the recreation room was too cold. The bedrooms never got enough heat. When the temperature setting was raised to make the rest of the house comfortable, the living room was too hot. Honeywell Control engineers were consulted—found the answer.

To provide real comfort, a home of this type should have four heating zones, each controlled by a thermostat—one in the Living Room area, one in the Dining-Service area, one in the Sleeping Rooms area and one in the Recreation area. When this is done at the time of building the cost is nominal. And the small extra expense will be repaid many times in greater comfort and in fuel economy.

Before you build, consult your architect, heating contractor or engineer about the proper location of controls and control areas. An interesting booklet, "10 Ways to Heat Your New Home," tells more about the advantages of Zone Heating Control. Send for a copy today.

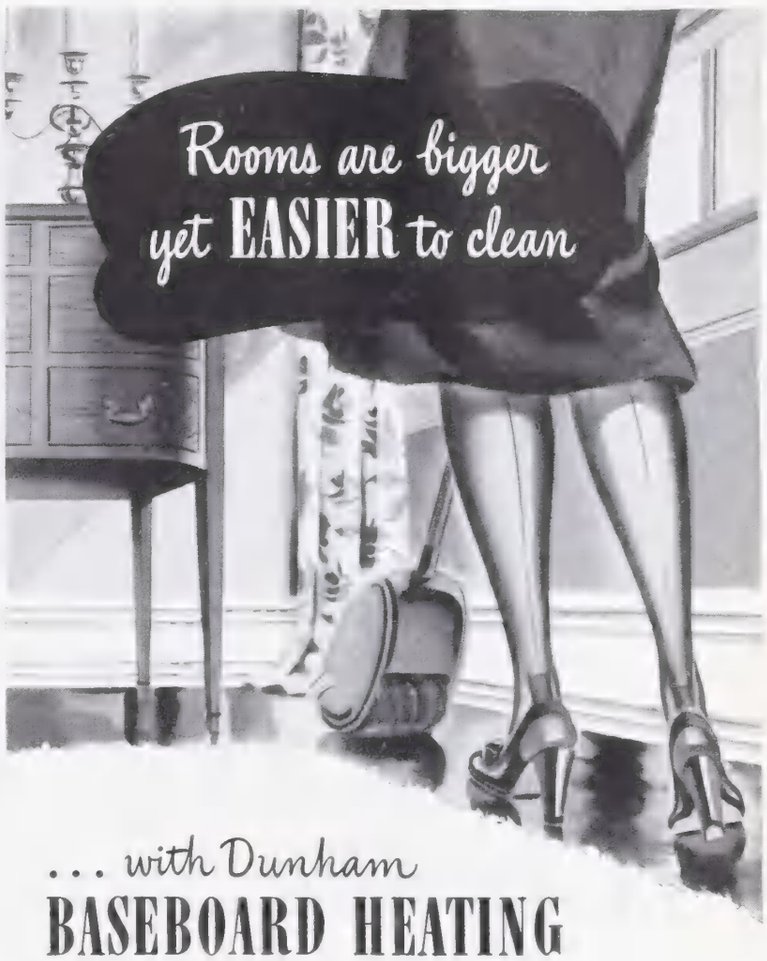
unny when you know the words of he ballad you are not hearing.

Such experiences almost make one believe those who say that it s better to hear music on the adio than to see the performers ither in a concert hall, in the pera house, or on television. I till don't believe it. You will no-ice that those who argue for hear-ng-without-seeing are the very nes who will talk throughout nost of the best radio or phono-raph performances. It isn't that hey have no respect or liking for he music that they are so insulting. t is simply that it is difficult to oncentrate on music when your yes have nothing relevant to vatch. To the unprofessionally rained ear, music does not pre-ent enough challenge; the alert ind finds it difficult to concen-rate completely, and the eye en-ourages it to wander. That is why is better to hear (and see) a reat artist from the remotest seat f a concert hall with poor acous-ics than it is to hear him on the est phonograph or radio.

But the fact remains that music-naking is usually not very photo-enic. Television directors have ibored hard and earnestly (though ot very imaginatively). So far ey have not much to show for eir labors.

Take a recent Firestone program. One orchestral number was the Coronation March" from Meyer-eer's Le Prophète. It was intro-uced with a shot of Howard Bar-w, the conductor, seen through a ut-out of a coronet. (Coronet—oronation . . . Get it?) Then there as a close-up of the trumpets as ey played the opening fanfare. hen a shot of the first fiddles play-g the principal theme, back again the trumpets, then the trom-nes, then, for variety, a single ddler, then the timpani, and ery once in a while a close-up Mr. Barlow. Mr. Barlow beats ne very competently and looks ery inch a conductor, but it is a tle disconcerting to see him ough you can't hear it) earnest-saying what looks like Bahm-hm-bahm-bahm as he beats one-o-three-four.

I don't know what the answer is. t somehow all that musical talent ght to be made to look better. rhaps one should eliminate the se-ups of the players sweating I view the conductor only from back, where you see him in the cert hall. There would be less variety, but it wouldn't be quite so silly.



Following the "Coronation March" came Miss Eleanor Steber singing Noel Coward's "I'll See You Again" from the deck of a ship. Now, Miss Steber is certainly one of the very handsomest of working sopranos—but to let us see her working, close-up, the lower quivering jaw as she produced the long, vibrating notes, and to admit her conventional grand-operatic gestures into a small living room was (let us be charitable) a mistake.

Yet, oddly enough, it is in the operatic television programs that the most satisfactory progress has been made. I say "oddly" because your hearing-not-seeing school of music lovers picks on opera as its favorite bête noire. Even though opera is designed to be seen as well as heard, many otherwise fine and estimable people think exactly the opposite. "Those operatic gestures," they say, "those fat sopranos and tiny tenors! How they spoil the illusion! No, give me just the music any day."

I wish all those people could have seen (and heard) CBS's excellent presentation of La Traviata last March. Here the singing actors (Elaine Malbin, Brooks McCormack, and Lawrence Tibbett) all looked their parts beautifully and —even more important—had been coached by Herbert Graf to act not for the vast spaces of the Met, but for the intimate dimensions of an average drawing room. Thus, Violetta's party became a heady little get-together, while her farewell to Alfredo in the second act was irresistibly moving. The entire fine performance was produced by Henry Souvaine, who also produces the radio broadcasts from the Met Saturday afternoons and who knows his way around opera.

CBS had learned a great deal since the month before when their first operatic venture was a Carmen done in French. However fetching Gladys Swarthout looked, you couldn't get very excited by her arguments with Don José (Robert Rounseville) when you saw only their faces in close-ups not ten feet away, using a language that most listeners could understand only fractionally. Opera suddenly takes on the intense dramatic dimension it was always intended to have when you get every nuance of the language as well as the music. I think opera on television should be given in English.

NBC, in its program of operas, has known this all along, and it has carried on a whole series of experiments, ranging from a disastrously misdirected performance of Johann Strauss's The Bat to some highly promising jobs with Madama Butterfly and The Tales of Hoffman, and the charming presentation of Kurt Weill's short folk opera Down in the Valley. I have seen only what has been done on the East coast, but on the West coast it was a series of 49 consecutive weekly operatic broadcasts over the independent Los Angeles station KFI-TV that won Vladimir Rosing the 1949 award "for the outstanding musical program of local origination" given by the Southern California Association for Better Radio and Television. Forty-nine consecutive performances—and good enough to win an award! The East has something to catch up to.

Clearly, opera is the best vehicle for music on television. It is the only form of serious music originally designed to be seen as well as heard. Not that most of the standard operas are well-designed for so intimate a medium as television. Can you imagine the grand triumphal scene from Aïda on a ten-inch screen? If the short, intimate type of opera that television must use can become as successful as it gives every evidence of being, we must develop the composers and directors for it. There are a number of highly skilled men now making a living writing special scores for single radio programs. Why not turn them to writing scores for television operas? It may becom a new and peculiarly America form of art.

As for the non-storytelling typ of music, at the moment, I can se no way of making it both visuall enthralling and tasteful. Whe Toscanini conducts, his beautifu and expressive face alone is enoug to carry the visual appeal of th program, but there is no othe conductor with that equipmen And if the boys should try to giv us visual "interpretations" of th music, can you imagine what woul happen? An emaciated figure rol ing on his bed to accompany Rich ard Strauss's "Death and Tran figuration" (with the gates heaven opening amid vitascope clouds for the transfiguration); a gaunt hand emerging from white sleeve to symbolize fat knocking at the door during Bee thoven's Fifth. Spare us that!

However, it is not beyond th realm of possibility that shortly really imaginative television direc tor will be able to show us ho to make a concert visually, as we as orally, interesting. Is it possibl that abstract designs and form can be used?

At present, I think the pleasu of seeing music via television li in two directions. First, making th presentation of straight orchestr music simpler than it now is; th is, letting the home audience s it as the concert-hall audience do without wandering in and o among the valves of the trombon and glancing impudently up t conductor's nostrils. And, secon developing the techniques and t literature of intimate opera so th it will become a highly individu and wonderful art form itself.

ing of the wine glasses so that you "hear the wine," and all the senses are pleased—the eyes with the beauty of the color, the nose with the delicious bouquet, the ear with the click of the glasses, and the tongue with the taste of the contents.

As you can guess, I'm a great believer in creating a glamorous mood at every stage of a party. When our guests arrive, Bob and I greet them with unfeigned enthusiasm, for we both truly love to have guests in our house. The living room looks glamorous and gay with candles burning indoors, our terrace lighting on, and barbecue fire blazing—even if too cool to be outdoors. The gu can see the fish and chicken be readied for the grill. All of this lights the guests through the e Shortly there will be the ar of the barbecuing, and that whet the guests' appetites. E Duchin is playing Cole Porter records, of course), and the n for the evening is beginning t velop.

A musical background gr enhances a party's atmosp The reason that Bob asked, " food are you serving tonight hat certain foods have musical oul mates. It may sound corny to ay that rumbas and tangos enance Spanish food, that with talian food you should have Italan music, and that tropical, Hawaian music is right for a curry inner, but it really does mean a ot, for it puts the guests in the ood of the moment. And, don't orget it, a mood is an elusive thing, ompounded of many small and ebulous factors.

t is interesting that certain age groups like different music hen they are dining. For instance, you are having the Jet Set—the oung, gay ones—they prefer a uch faster tempo for their musical ackground. A group in their late irties or early forties are still oung enough to "remember when" nd music that recalls their courtng days in the 1920's brings back certain nostalgia that puts them a mellow mood. If the guests re in their sixties, something soft nd dreamy is usually successful.

Our parties, unless there is a pecial dish requiring special usic, usually sound off to Eddie uchin's piano. I have several of s albums, although I also have bums with Jan August, Jack ina, and Frankie Carle at the iano. They make for good variety, they all have their own particar style.

During the dinner hour I like to ve string music rather than brass, nd I enjoy David Rose. I have veral of his albums, but alterate him with "Music for Dreamg" with Paul Weston. Strauss altzes are always a joy, and you n't miss with Fred Waring and ostelanetz records (with "Star ust" included).

As the tempo of the evening ineases, so the music should inease. With coffee let Carmen avallaro, Guy Lombardo, or Mark arnow and their orchestras entrtain you.

After coffee, the mood of the ests should be established and u should let them take over. If ur guests wish to sit cozily ound the fire and chat, then soft lodious music is in order, with continuation of the dinner music some of George Gershwin.

But if you have the Jet Set, re spicy music such as rumbas by Henry King, Jose Cortez, and of course Xavier Cugat are good, interlarded with a few records of Louis Armstrong.

Not long ago one of our guests rushed up and said, "Oh Ginny, do play something madly gay!" I was rather flabbergasted for none of our music is "madly gay." But I managed to please her with an album of Fats Waller Favorites.

The more formal the dinner the more formal the music should be. Well do I remember the dear dead days when we had string music behind the potted palms at every large function. Of course older people—those over fifty—(What am I saying? Fifty is rearing its ugly head and I feel as if fifty were very young.) remember that era well, with its Chopin waltzes or Massenet's Elegie or the medley from Gounod's Faust. Debussy's "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun" or "Nuages" are soft and delightful. Ray Turner playing Chopin is a variation that could be used with this type of evening.

Above all, do not play music that demands the full attention of your guests. Stravinsky's "Firebird," for instance, is far too powerful music to have as entertainment for dinner. Wagner, Beethoven, or Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony" or the "New World Symphony" are not for dinner. Neither is anything with a definite beat, such as in Ravel's "Bolero," because music does penetrate your consciousness at intervals and you might feel that you have been listening to that one item for ages, and it is rather disturbing. Music that is uneven in its tone picture, such as music with long passages of pianissimo which suddenly burst into loud crescendos, is disturbing to conversation, for it is very difficult to regulate tone control with such a wide variation of sound.

Your record library is chosen, as it should be, for the enjoyment of you and your family. If your tastes are catholic, there will surely be some things your guests will also enjoy. Our three children love South Pacific, and if we have that album on during dinner they are as quiet as mice. I personally do not like it during dinner, for I think the music is too vivid to have with dinner. But it just shows you how ages differ about musical fare! And watching them listen makes it worth while for me.

If music has not entered your life as a "must" with dinner, start in today, for you are missing an important dimension in artful dining.

example, has almost no bearing on one's success as a concert pianist. If he is second rate it won't help him; if he is good he won't need it. If he is to get results as a teacher, however, he will have to draw on his reserves of tact and patience at every lesson.

The material of the teacher's art is persuasion. He must have a sound working knowledge of child psychology. He must know when to coax, and when to be firm.

And, though he may strive for perfection, a good teacher must also have a tolerant attitude toward Beethoven and Mozart as mutilated by small untrained fingers. Naturally, he wants his youngsters to make rapid progress in music, but his first task is to give his pupils a zest for musical study. How your child plays music is, relatively, less important than how he feels about music.

To take the measure of a piano teacher, the first thing you should do is hear his pupils perform. Wangle an invitation to his June recital. If you hesitate to form an opinion yourself about their playing, take a musical friend along.

Supplement this by discreet inquiry among parents of the teacher's pupils. Find out whether the teacher spends a whole year drilling each student on a single brilliant showpiece for public performance, or whether he aims at all-around musicianship. Such profitable by-ways as sight-reading, ear training, and at least a smattering of harmony and counterpoint don't produce quick results, but they make for lasting musical enjoyment.

If you know someone in the music department of your local high school or college, he may be able to give you good advice about available teachers. Another source of information is the Music Teachers National Association (founded in 1876 by Theodore Presser). For names of members near you, write to the president of M.T.N.A., Dr. Roy Underwood, Michigan State College, East Lansing, Michigan.

Find out if your prospective teacher is a specialist. My eight-year-old son studies with a teacher who instructs only young children. Some teachers specialize in adult beginners. Some teachers appear to have better luck with boys, others with girls.

Don't let your thinking be influenced one way or the other by price. Remember that the teache who charges $5 a lesson is no necessarily twice as good as th one who charges $2.50.

As a final check-up, try to ar range to sit in on a lesson. Ap praise the teacher's personalit and methods. Decide whether you child would find him sympathetic Once you've decided on a teacher stick to your choice. Don't sho around for another teacher unti you've given the first a thorough trial. And don't make the chang on your own initiative. Let th child alone and see how the lesson go. It's a mistake to oversell th child on the teacher, and no les a mistake to undermine the child' confidence in him.

After lessons have begun, le the teacher work in his own way Music teaching methods have changed greatly in recent years Progressive educators spend con siderable time keeping up with modern methods. If your child isn't given the same course o study you had, that doesn't mea he is being incorrectly taught Just the contrary, perhaps!

There is no one infallibly righ way of teaching. Every child an individual problem. Don't judg his progress by that of little Mar Jones next door who started lesson at the same time and is alread playing "pieces." Little Mary ma be naturally endowed with goo fingers, doing easily what yo child must work to master. Yo teacher, having taught many young sters, is likely to be a better jud than you of how fast your chi should be brought along. Do worry if your child, after thr months' study, can't play the sc of B Major, with a key-signatu of five sharps or, for that matt any scales at all.

The teacher expects you to co-erate with him in the matter practicing. To strengthen weak, co-ordinated fingers, a cert amount of hard work is unav able. Teachers and students h sought ways to short-cut this j of music study since the first St Age maestro taught pupils to h arpeggios on a reed pipe. It c be done. We don't get someth for nothing. Singers must voca violinists must practice Kre études, pianists must work at t scales and arpeggios. And price paid in hours at the board is little enough in re for a lifetime of pleasure in m ractice problem alone. He needs nd expects your help after the ovelty of music lessons has worn ff and practice becomes routine or your child. The old-fashioned ethod of coercion is happily exnct. Its net result was to make hildren loathe everything conected with music. However, perasion of some sort is needed.

It's your problem, and there are o rules to guide you. Rewards, ncentives, cajolery, a set hour for ractice each day—there are dozens f possibilities. Talk them over ith your teacher, then try them ll until you find one that works.

A prewar survey showed that, of very hundred beginners, ninety dropped their music studies before the end of the third year. But think how many of your friends, when the subject of music comes up, say wistfully: "I took music lessons as a kid, but gave it up. Today, I'd give anything to be able to play."

Your child can't be expected to visualize this sort of future chagrin. Practice at the moment is something that interferes with a ball game or going to the movies. The crucial first three years are allimportant. Lively, imaginative teaching is a help, but even the most inspired teacher can't do it all. A little support at home is needed also.

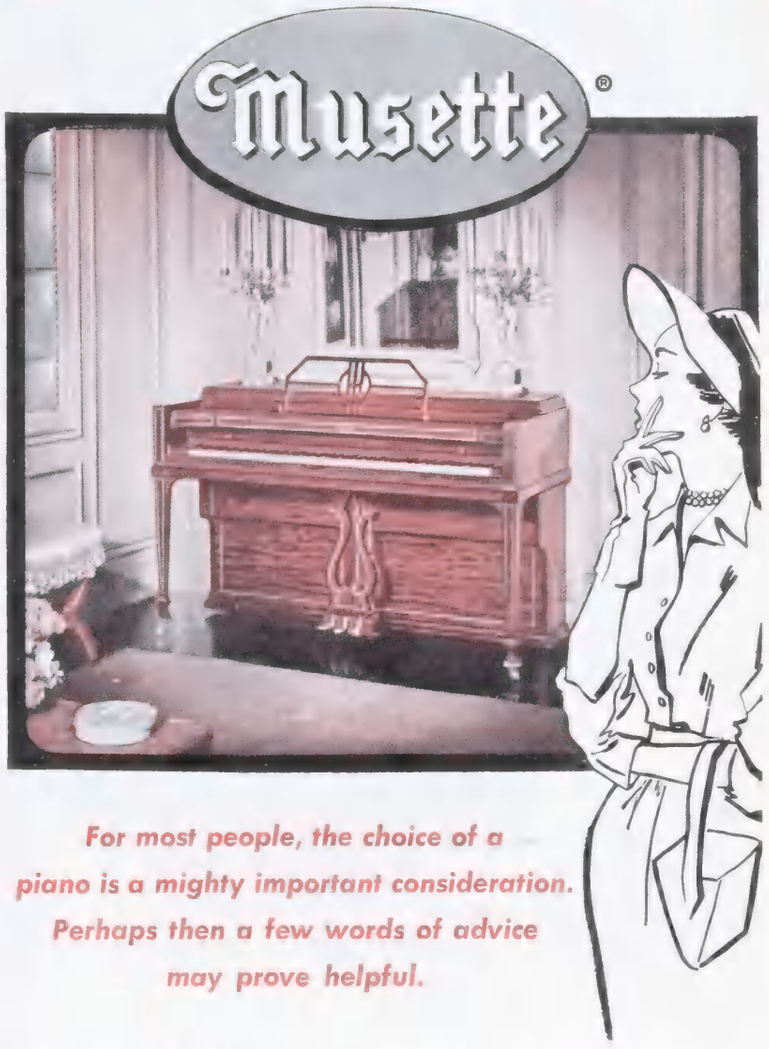
But we are here concerned rather ith the informal, presumably ontaneous vocal efforts of comaratively small, unorganized roups in private homes, at arties of various kinds, or even ithin the family circle, supplemented perhaps by a few close iends. On such occasions the rst song may be like the first ive out of the bottle. The rest ill come more and more easily.

A tactful hostess will probably ave the piano invitingly open, ssibly with an attractive songook on the music rack. She will ncourage someone to start a little background music" at the keyoard and keep a watchful eye ut for the first enthusiasts to ther around the magnet of elody and harmony. If she knows advance what songs are particuly popular with certain members the group, a mere suggestion y be enough to get them started. ry little coaxing should be necesry, and it is definitely a mistake issue orders and insist that eryone suddenly stop whatever going on, to concentrate on orized singing.

olo number or two may have the effect of getting the others the right mood for participa- (even in self-defense), but this ot always advisable, as it may te an atmosphere of exhibition- which is not conducive to unre- ined co-operation. No matter carefully planned, the general ing must appear spontaneous, no suggestion of a "perform-" to which anyone is expected isten. So long as the participants themselves enjoy it, nothing more should be asked. Artistic effect is of no importance whatever.



It is always a help to have someone at the piano who knows a lot of songs, as well as the most comfortable keys in which they can be sung. The best accompanists for group singing are those who can play "by ear," although the mere note-reader should not be disdained, even if it takes a bit longer to find the right page. When a piano is not available, a guitar or ukulele or accordion will provide an adequate accompaniment, and when there is no musical instrument at all, there can still be a capella (unaccompanied) singing, preferably with a leader to give the proper pitch (approximately) and perhaps beat time to keep the singers together.

There are almost always a few voices capable of harmonizing by ear: and even one or two tenors, alto, or bass parts will add enormously to the effect of an untrained ensemble. Men who sing in barbershop quartets or choruses soon find that they can instinctively create harmonies which are pleasing, perhaps occasionally spectacular in their originality. It is quite unnecessary to study definite parts, except for a contemplated public performance. For informal gatherings there can be complete satisfaction in unison effects, if no harmony singers are present.

The matter of words may present something of a problem. Your real vocal enthusiast is willing to settle for "la-la's" or indiscriminate vowel sounds when unfamiliar with the text of a song. But more inhibited

How to choose your piano!

For most people, the choice of a piano is a mighty important consideration. Perhaps then a few words of advice may prove helpful.

A fine piano is both a triumph of engineering and a masterpiece of craftsmanship. You don't need to be an expert to choose a piano that sounds as beautiful as it looks.

There is no better way than to depend on a reliable name and the word of your responsible Music Dealer. For many years, the "Musette" has been the choice of musicians, and music lovers who want a fine instrument at a reasonable price. Your Musette dealer will be delighted to advise you.

MUSETTE OFFERS THESE OUTSTANDING FEATURES:

- DECORATOR STYLING: Graceful and authentic design.
- PRACTIANO PEDAL: Reduces tonal volume by half.
- UNITIZED CONSTRUCTION: Back, pin-block and plate—permanently locked together—assure extra strength and rigidity.
- RESOTONIC BRIDGE Greater amplification and clarity of tone.
- ACCRA-CROWN SOUNDING BOARD A permanently crowned sounding board for precision accuracy.

For greater enjoyment keep your piano tuned.

souls prefer to have some idea of what they are singing, beyond the mere melody line. For overcoming such difficulties, there is a mass of printed material available at a small cost.

Most of the publishers of popular music distribute song sheets containing the words of their best-known hits, plus a number of the old favorites that are free from copyright. A hundred sheets of this type can be bought for $1 to $1.50, and occasionally they are supplied free of charge for the sake of advertising. Folios and pamphlets containing the words and music of perhaps several dozen familiar songs are also available at a modest price.

Among the larger collections of singable material, the "Twice 55" series published by C. C. Birchard & Co. of Boston are as practical as any. In a few paper-bound volumes they cover most of the established literature of universal song, excepting current coyprights. Such Broadway publishers as Robbins, E. B. Marks, and Mills Music, Inc. offer low-priced collections covering a vast number of old and new songs. There are special booklets of patriotic material, Christmas carols, hymns, folk songs, etc.

For large parties and organized "community sings" a good substitute for word-sheets may be found in song-slides, which throw the words (and sometimes the music as well) upon a screen from a stereopticon machine. Such slides are particularly practical on occasion when family movies are shown, as the equipment can easily include the necessary lantern, without much extra expense, and the operation is a simple matter. Music publishers formerly supplied song-slides for most of their hits, and it is still possible to secure a fairly large assortment of popular lyrics through such an agency as the Educational Music Bureau in Chicago.

Even without the help of words or music, there are innumerable songs that most people know by heart. For spontaneous harmony, there is nothing more effective than the old-fashioned rounds, which should first be sung in unison and then with the voices overlapping in three or four parts, the singers conducted in groups by a leader. "Three Blind Mice" is probably the safest bet for a start. (Its three basic notes can also be taught to any child at the piano, with an adult supplying the additional parts.) "Row, Row, Row Your Boat," "Frère Jacques" (Are You Sleeping?), and "Scotland's Burning" are sufficiently familiar rounds and can be picked up quickly by any group of amateur singers. A good leader can make quite a show-piece out of "Alouette," "Old Macdonald Had a Farm," or "Schnitzelbank," using his companions for the "burden" or echoes, as in actual folk music.

One of the best songs for starting a mixed company harmoniously is "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," which practically everybody knows in some fashion. Another self-starter is "The More We Get Together," sung to the old tune of "Ach, du lieber Augustin." Several of the Foster songs, with such later hits as "Smiles," "Down by the Old Mill Stream," "I Want a Girl" ("just like the girl that married dear old Dad"), "My Bonnie," "Sweet Adeline," and "The Long Long Trail" can be counted upon to generate immediate vocal enthusiasm at almost any time. The little chorus best known as "Happy Birthday to You" (originally "Good Morning to All") can be adapted to any occasion or holiday sharing its universal popularity with "Good Night, Ladies" ("Merrily We Roll Along"), "Auld Lang Syne," and "He's a Jolly Good Fellow" (or "We Won't Go Home until Morning," originally the French "Malbrouck").

It may be significant that many of the best-loved songs of America have the word "home" in their titles. Foster's "Old Folks at Home" and "My Old Kentucky Home" head the list, with "Home on the Range" and "Home, Sweet Home" not far behind. (The last named is not often actually sung but has been played countless times to remind people that the party is over.)

A mere catalog of such material for home singing would be practically endless. In fact, whenever a group really gets going around the family piano, the chief problem is how to make them stop.

There may be some rather beautiful sounds. It would be foolish to insist that anyone listen as long as the singers themselves are enjoying it.

The important thing is that a group of people, perhaps of widely different tastes and temperaments, have suddenly found a common ground for self-expression, a ongeniality which requires no nalysis. They are instinctively ware of a friendly spirit of toler- nce and co-operation, free from ne critical reservations that might ttend a professional performance nd relieved of the self-conscious- ess that so often creates the in- ividual "show-off." They are find- ng real satisfaction in the simple xpression of a common enthusi- asm, unhampered by aesthetic standards or ideals, unencumbered by elaborate, expensive equipment, independent of scientifically self-sufficient instruments, completely removed from the professional attitude of performers or listeners. They are enjoying themselves in the most natural and honest and pleasant way imaginable—and all for a song!

usic by Americans is gradually nding a place on the programs our symphony orchestras. Some it is even being heard in Europe. n the other hand, one school of merican music, our light music et's drop the "popular" tag), is eard around the world, is re- pected and admired as good mu- c in the very countries that pro- uced the classic masters.

But not here. No matter how gratiating its melodies, no mat- r how exhilarating its charm and tality, we lump together all our ght music under the title of jazz, ovel it into a bin labelled trash, nd settle back happily to wallow the maudlin meanderings of, t's say Massenet's Elegie, which, eing by a European master, is viously "classical."

Parenthetically, let me explain hy I refer to "light" music rather an "popular." The latter term as come to be applied to the so- lled "pop" tunes that are ground t for the records and juke boxes assembly-line methods, enjoy o or three months of popularity, d then vanish. Most of them are finitely trash, and I wouldn't eam of defending them. What I defending are the airs written, a rule, for our musical comedies l which, of their kind, are defi- ely first-rate music.

Specifically, I would like to dis- s four of them—Victor Herbert, le Porter, Richard Rodgers, and ome Kern. This is an arbitrary ice, for I could, if I had room, lude several others—Irving Ber- for example, or Sigmund Rom- g, or the enormously gifted Vin- t Youmans. I do not include rge Gershwin simply because, ough such works as the Rhap- in Blue, the Concerto in F, An American in Paris, George reluctant admission to the s of "classical" composers.

ne reproach that is frequently led at the American composer ight music is his musical il- literacy, that he cannot even write down his music, but has to whistle it to an arranger. Just for the record, let us scan the musical background of the four men I am discussing. Concerning Herbert there is, of course, no argument. A superbly trained all-round musician, a cello virtuoso, and a master of orchestration, he needs no apologies from anyone. Cole Porter spent two years at the Harvard School of Music and two more studying advanced harmony and counterpoint at Vincent d'Indy's Schola Cantorum in Paris. Rodgers left Columbia University to spend two years at the Institute of Musical Art in New York, now the Juilliard School of Music. Kern studied the piano under Alexander Lambert, Paolo Gallico, and Albert von Doenhoff, then spent two years in England and Germany studying composition. So we may assume that our four pass the literacy test.

I have thought that one reason why we turn up our noses at our light music might be that its melodies are not developed, which is merely another way of saying that they are not symphonic material. The themes of the first movement of the classic symphony are seldom complete tunes. As a rule, they are phrases, pieces of melodies that can be transformed and made to appear in various guises. In the jargon of the theater, the average musical "number" consists of: Principal Strain—Release—Reprise. And that, bless your heart, is the A-B-A song form in which thousands of the classics are written. So, so far as form is concerned, our light music comes of respectable married parents.

In Germany there is a kind of music that is referred to as "Brodarbeit"—literally, "bread-work." We call it "pot-boilers." Beethoven turned them out at a great rate. Have you ever heard his twelve "Contra-dances"? They are a set of extraordinarily commonplace waltzes, not one of which I would take in exchange for Rodgers's "Falling in Love with Love." Have you ever heard his "Bagatelles"? Yes, you have heard one of them, entitled "Für Elise." It's a nice enough little piece, I guess; but even Jose Iturbi, playing it, cannot convince me that it has the musical worth of Kern's "The Way You Look Tonight."

I don't know what beginning pianists get, today, as their first "piece." I remember what I got: "The Happy Farmer," by Robert Schumann. This was followed by a snappy little number by Rubenstein called "Melody in F." If I hear any takers, I would be delighted to turn both of them in, in exchange for, say, "Begin the Beguine."

Then there is Sibelius's "Valse Triste." You take that and I'll take "Younger than Springtime," from South Pacific. In my opinion, the overture to Herbert's Mlle. Modiste is just as good music as anything Offenbach ever wrote, and the ballet music from the same operetta doesn't suffer by comparison with anything in Delibes's Sylvia. I believe that "Old Man River" is much better music than the "Barcarolle" from Tales of Hoffmann, that Porter's "So in Love Am I," Kern's "I've Told Every Little Star," and Rodgers's Carousel waltz stand up well against Dvorak's "Humoresque" and "La Donna é Mobile."

Please don't misunderstand me. I am not suggesting that you swallow all our light music whole. Some of it is just as bad as some symphonies. Kern's "You Are Love," for example, is charming, whereas I think that his "The Last Time I Saw Paris" is commonplace and over-sentimental. Also, please do not think that I am picking on certain supremely unimportant works by the masters merely to win an argument. The so-called "classical" pieces that I have cited are, heaven knows, unimportant. But they are, nevertheless, good music. I cheerfully admit that most of the American light music I have cited is equally unimportant. But I do insist that it is good music. I think it is time we stopped looking at the name on the title page and listened to a given piece of music as music, judging its worth according to its intrinsic merits or defects, without regard to who signed it, whether he be Joe Doakes, Josef von Dochs, Giuseppe Docs, or Joseph d'Eauxe.

will protest. Mary simply cannot carry a tune; she can't tell whether it goes up or down; she's always off pitch; or, horror of horrors, she sings everything on the same note, which means she's a monotone. Isn't that proof positive that she's beyond help?

It is not! It can be said flatly and categorically that the only hopelessly unmusical children are those with organic deficiencies in the ear or brain. If Mary has no such flaw—and she probably hasn't—she will respond to music, even learn to carry a tune, provided you don't give up hope and provided you go about it in the right way.

Observe a baby in his play pen, preoccupied with his toys. Put a record on the phonograph, something with a lively march or dance rhythm. Generally the baby will react to the music. His whole body may move—or his shoulders, or just his head. Make no mistake about it, he is responsive to rhythm very early in his life, and rhythm is basic in music.

As the child grows old enoug to move around under his ow power, watch him when he hea music with spirited, clean-cu rhythms coming from phonograp radio, or piano. He may pause execute an awkward, bottom-hea dance, or he may run about wildl As he gets older, music may i duce him to bang on a drum, ri a bell, toot a whistle, or pound the furniture. The noises he mak may not be in keeping with t rhythm. He may ruin your b end table and give Dad a headac But junior is telling you he l music in him. While it may necessary to get fragile obje out of his way, including Da tender eardrums, he should be couraged to give expression to responses music calls up in him

The trouble may begin whe child is old enough to be tau You try to teach him a song simple, nursery tune, if you With the best will in the w he seems to be trying to fo you at the piano or the recor

e phonograph, but he can't even proximate the tune. You are tient; you play and sing it again d again; you encourage him to eat it. He cannot get the hang it. You may fuss over him, mpt him, prod him, worry him d yourself. You may think you e doing a good job of concealing m him that you are troubled, t he will sense your uneasiness d its cause.

Psychological hazards may be set . Children have defenses against ng prodded. If music is the rea- why they're bothered, they may ist it. The resistance may not out in the open. In fact, it may even look like resistance. The ld may give every appearance co-operation, but every effort ms to be futile. You despair and nclude that he is basically and urably unmusical.

child's trouble with music may not have anything to do with sic at all. Difficulty with a tune y stem from other sources that a chologist would be in a better ition to analyze—jealousy of a v sibling, conflicts between par- s, any one of the many subtle ngs that disturb children more n we know.

The one guiding principle to r in mind is that no child is in- ently unmusical; nor, for that tter, is any adult. I know a tal- ed singer who at five was the pair of her mother because she ldn't carry a tune. With the lt it is a matter of applica- n and will power; with the child approach must be natural and ual.

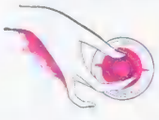
f Mary can't carry the tune of ndon Bridge," don't make an e of it. Expose her to music in home, but don't make her feel for her benefit. Have music yourself. If you play the piano ome other instrument, play it nsibly for your own amusement. n on the phonograph or radio. noose music with clear, incisive hms, lively pace, and simple odies. Nursery tunes, gay folk s, and marches are ideal. A us movement from a Mozart ade or symphony will do fine. sturdy, four-square momentum Bach piece may be all right, And don't look down your nose zz; a fox-trot with a clean, t beat should be mighty ef- e.

music is a normal sound d the home. Mary may derive ure from it without giving sign. She may try to sing when she likes a tune. If her is way off base, pay no atten- Don't try to correct her. Don't make her self-conscious. Let her experiment at her own pace. Find occasion to praise even a poor try. Patience will have its reward. Mary will get closer to the tune, and one fine day she'll sing it almost correctly. Even if she does not manage it perfectly, it is not fatal. She is coming along.

As she grows older, she may dance or act out a role when she hears a piece that appeals to her. Her school, if it is up to date, will encourage her interest and develop her self-confidence by giving her music as a background to rhythm play and by group lessons in singing and playing simple instruments, with no child written off as incompetent or unmusical.

Though you may be eager to give Mary musical experiences outside the home and the school, don't take her to children's concerts or operas unless she thinks the junket will be a lark. If she objects, don't force her. If she goes once and says she doesn't like it, wait until she asks to be taken the next time.

Your strongest aid in helping Mary should be a good record collection. There are hundreds of records for children of all ages. If she shows an interest in them, make her feel they are her special property. If she doesn't, play them anyhow on the pretext that they are for your entertainment—and a good many may well be. Let her hear in this way music that seems to be for adults—symphonies, sonatas, songs, operas by masters of past and present. Don't expect Mary to sit still as if she were at a concert. Even if she seems to be busy with her own play, she is absorbing more than you suspect.



Finally, what about music lessons for Mary who can't carry a tune? Don't hesitate to let her have them if she wants them, but don't insist if she doesn't. Too many parents start their children at the piano or violin too soon! A reasonable age is eight, when the child can read. If Mary refuses music lessons, be patient. Her peers will soon be busy with them, and Mary, wishing to be in the swim, may ask for them herself.

Should Mary grow into adolescence without being able to carry a tune, remember that this is still no proof of irremediable unmusicality. She probably responds to music inside, even if she cannot reproduce it accurately. Watch her on the dance floor when she is old enough to wear her first evening frock and attend her first prom. Mary, quite contrary, moves with the grace of an angel. Mary unmusical? I should say not.

FRENCH SONGS

*Fauré—Soir

Ravel—Le Martin-Pecheur ("The Kingfisher")
(Ravel tells so beautifully the story of the little Kingfisher which alights on a boy's fishing rod, thinking it a twig. The stillness of the wild little bird, sensing something strange in its plight, is mirrored in music.)

Debussy—De Grève
(This song, set to a poem of Baudelaire, tells of the calm after the storm. The wonderful thing about it is the sound of the bell-buoy, the same eerie sound with each ring, but sounding differently with each mood. Debussy calls the buoys "les flottants églises"—floating churches.)

Du Parc—Extase

Debussy—Auprès de Cette Grotte Sombre
(Again, the stillness which so few composers can so perfectly suggest. One sees clearly, at hearing this song, the unearthly quiet of the underground cave, with the pool so still that even Narcissus could see his image and delight in its perfection.)

Reynaldo Hahn—L'Heure Exquise

Reynaldo Hahn—Offrande
(Two of the finest examples of French songs.)

Debussy—Trois Chansons de Bilitis
(They have the quality of dreams.)

Offenbach—La Perichole
(While French in character, La Perichole captures the true Viennese flavor, akin to the French "joie de vivre.")

Debussy—Fêtes Galantes
(This setting of Verlaine's poems is the quintessence of Debussy's sensitivity to fantasy and moods.)

Old Welsh Song—Mifanwy
(Will you allow me one selection, not in the French catalogue, for nostalgic reasons? This is the song I recorded at the old Edison plant in New Jersey in 1911—my very first.)

BACH RECORDINGS
Chosen by Fritz Reiner

Take It Easy, Lady!

Take advantage of new labor-saving equipment and improvements in old, and you won't be a slave to housework

by Charlotte Eaton Conway

Bottle openers turn up in the most unexpected places! But this one you find in the same place every time. It's permanently built in to the refrigerator, looking at you as you open the door. International Harvester have added this convenience to their new models. The one shown has full-width freezer locker holding 50 lbs. of frozen food, extra-big meat-storage drawer, two vegetable crispers, shelf room for tall bottles and bulky foods, pantry bin for unrefrigerated foods, and a full-length door. Automatic interior light.

No clean-up fuss or fury with the new Hotpoint "ready-plumbed" electric dishwasher sink! Dishwasher opens at front, leaving lots of top work surface. New Wonderflo faucet has only one lever, which you raise or lower to get more or less water, move from side to side for hotter or colder. Two covered compartments in backsplasher are handy for soap bars, cleaning pads. Motor and pump empty dishwasher water into sink, making special plumbing connections unnecessary, even in remodeling jobs. Of course sink is equipped with food waste Disposall.

Leonard Bernstein—Music from Fancy Free

Aaron Copland—El Salon Mexico

(Although Copland has written a great amount of serious music, I have chosen El Salon Mexico because it has captured the true spirit of Mexico.)

George Gershwin — Rhapsody in Blue

(Monumental among Americana!)

Edward MacDowell — Piano Concerto No. 2 in D Minor, Op. 23

(An outstanding work in all the piano concerti literature by a comparatively early American composer who was influenced by European traditions.)

Walter Piston—Suite from The Incredible Flutist

(This ballet was written for me and first performed at the Boston Pops in 1939. Here we have a Harvard professor "tripping the light fantastic.")

Richard Rodgers—Selections from South Pacific

William Schuman—American Festival Overture

(A cracker-jack overture!)

John Philip Sousa — Stars and Stripes Forever

(The March King's best—a difficult decision as so many of his other marches are tops.)

VIOLIN MUSIC

*Bruch—Scottish Fantasy

(It is impossible to say, "This is my one and only favorite." Let's say that the Bruch Scottish Fantasy is one of my favorites. It is easy, charming music, based on the Scottish folk songs and created by a man who knew how to write for the violin.)

(May I pick a dozen, rather than nine? Even a dozen does not represent all my choices, but they seem to me the desirable minimum.)

Brahms—Violin Concerto

Tchaikovsky—Violin Concerto

(The great classics of violin music.)

Sibelius—Violin Concerto

Elgar—Violin Concerto

William Walton—Violin Concerto

(These concerti are fine representatives of English music.)

Gruenberg—Violin Concerto

(To me, this is the best of the American violin concerti. It uses American idioms, is based on jazz and the Arkansas style of fiddling.)

Prokofieff—Violin Concerto, No. 1 or 2

Mendelssohn—Violin Concerto

Bach—Violin Concerto in A Minor or E Major

Vieuxtemps—Violin Concerto, No. 4 or 5

(These are virtuoso pieces. They show what a fiddle can do; yet they are melodic.)

Any Beethoven sonata for violin

3 WAYS BEST

ELIMINATION OF GARBAGE is only one advantage of food waste disposers. You'll find even greater convenience in being able to keep your kitchen clean as you go, disposing of food wastes as quickly as they occur.

You'll be wanting a food waste disposer soon. Make it a Youngstown Disposer, 3 ways best:

1 TAKES FOOD WASTE CONTINUOUSLY!

No "stop-and-go" feeding. Just turn on cold water, flip switch, and scrape food waste into drain. You can keep your kitchen clean as you go!

2 SELF-REVERSING ACTION DOUBLES SHREDDER LIFE!

Self-reversing motor changes direction each time switch is turned on. Super-hard, chrome-plated steel shredders stay sharp and bright.

3 SELF-CLEANING!

Food scraps are shredded so finely they actually act as a cleansing agent for drain pipes. Self-reversing action changes water-swirl direction, assures self-flushing.

Fits all Youngstown Kitchens Cabinet Sinks and most other modern sinks. For full information, drop us a card mentioning the Disposer. Mullins Manufacturing Corporation, Warren, Ohio.

NOTE: Youngstown Kitchens Food Waste Disposer can be used with septic tank of 500 gals. or more capacity.

Do you know what these TV words mean?

You don't need to know any of these words to enjoy television. But you may understand its workings—and your serviceman—better if you know what this typical TV lingo means Electronics: Roughly, the science that has made radio, radar, and television possible.

Television: The sending through the air of a series of pictures and accompanying sounds in such rapid succession that you get the impresssion of a continuous reproduction of the actual scene. Break the word down and it means seeing at a distance.

Sending Tube: The part of the television station's equipment which "takes" or "scans" the picture—30 of them a second. It transforms light impulses into electrical impulses that can be sent out over the air. (Formerly known as the iconoscope tube, now known as the orthicon and also as the camera tube.)

Receiving Tube: This is the major element of your home television receiver. In most home TV sets you see the pictures on the big end of this tube. Technically, it is a vacuum tube which converts electrical energy (sent out by the television station) into light impulses on a screen surface where it is composed into the television picture. (Technically, it's known as the "kinescope tube," less technically known as the picture tube; also known as the cathode-ray receiver tube.)

Chassis: The mechanism of the television receiver without any clothing or cabinet.

Antenna: A device which plucks the television picture out of the air and pipes it into the television set. It is composed of masts and horizontal rods. Sometimes it is built inside the television set. Sometimes it is a small contrivance attached to the set which does its work inside the room where the set operates. Sometimes it is an elaborate apparatus installed on the roof of your home.

Dials: The controls or knobs you turn to adjust your television set. Those sealed in the back of the set are adjusted by the installation man. They should not be tampered with. You can sharpen your picture and sound by adjusting the dials on the front of your set. Taken as a whole, the dials control all the elements of the picture and sound quality.

Lead In: The wire which connects the antenna to the set in case you have an outside antenna.

Fluorescent Screen: The television screen at the big end of the receiving or picture tube. Its chemical coating causes the electronic beams to light up and make a picture when they strike it.

Signal: This refers to both the picture and sound impulses which go from the TV transmitter to the TV receiver and, taken together, constitute the television program.

Interference: Any electrical disturbance which distorts either the sound or the visual part of the television. It can be caused by all sorts of electrical devices or motors which produce static: neon signs, diathermy machines, automobile and airplane ignition systems, and so on.

Ghost: This is a second image on your television screen produced when the signal from the transmitter reaches your receiver by two paths. It is caused when you receive one signal direct and another by reflection off a distant object. In television, ghosts are as bad as they sound and are very hard to get rid of. There are negative ghosts in which the black and white areas are opposite to those of the real pictures.

Electron Gun: The device at the small end of the receiving tube which sprays the large end (the screen) with electrons which turn into light impulses and form the picture.

Radio Spectrum: A way of expressing the scale by which radio and television frequencies are measured. Loosely, a way of cribing that area of the ether over hich radio and television are ansmitted. Regular radio is transitted over the low part of the pectrum; FM and television over higher part. The higher you go the spectrum the higher the equencies.

requency: This refers to the umber of times an electro-magetic wave vibrates per second. oth the sound and the picture imulses ride on electro-magnetic aves from the sending station to ou. One kilocycle means a thouand vibrations a second. One egacycle means a million vibraons a second. Ordinary frequenes are expressed in kilocycles; levision frequencies in megacles.

hannel: Each television station nds its signals out on one of 12 annels and each channel repreents a band of six megacycles. So ch TV channel defines a freuency groove in which each television station can send its signals.

AM (Amplitude Modulation): This is the standard form of radio broadcasting. It takes place in the lower end of the radio spectrum.

FM (Frequency Modulation): This is a newer form of radio broadcasting, higher up in the spectrum. It is practically free from static. FM sound is used in television.

VHF (Very High Frequencies): This is a zone of the radio spectrum in which the 12 present television channels operate. They lie between 44-88 and 174-316 megacycles.

UHF (Ultra High Frequencies): This is a zone in the radio spectrum in which additional channels will be utilized in the future. It offers the prospect of channels with frequencies between 480 and 930 megacycles, and perhaps UHF telecasting will later advance into even higher megacycle areas.

Brahms—Quartet in C Minor, Op. 51, No. 1

Bartok—First Quartet
(Less difficult than his later works, Bartok's First Quartet makes a good starting point for the unprejudiced music lover who would like to understand modern writing.)

Ravel—Quartet
(This composition has all the refinement of the French genius on the fringe of decadence.)

Beethoven — Three Rasoumovsky Quartets

"We rescued our game room from mildew —electrically!"

says Mrs. J. J. Russo, Oak Park, Illinois

"Our basement was so damp that everything in the game room was mildewed—even the knotty pine paneling. Then we installed a Frigidaire Electric Dehumidifier. Overnight, it cleared up the excess humidity—now has completely ended mold and mildew."

No Messy Chemicals No Muss or Fuss

Now—check mildew-forming moisture electrically and automatically—with the amazing Frigidaire Electric Dehumidifier! Proved in thousands of installations, this revolutionary device draws damp air over chilled coils—forcing excess moisture to condense and drop into receptacle or drain. It's easy to install. And it's remarkably inexpensive to operate, for it's powered by Frigidaire's famous Meter-Miser refrigerating mechanism.

The Frigidaire Dehumidifier is effective in any closed area up to 25 x 40 x 8 feet. It's ideal for protecting game rooms, workshops, libraries, laundries, storage rooms—has scores of profitable business applications. For details, see your Frigidaire Dealer. DOES TELEVISION CAUSE EYESTRAIN?

that when the average individual complains of fatigue symptoms, the fault is usually not due to poor conditions of the screen but rather to defects in his own eyes. The latter fortunately can be treated. Considering the present-day, improved TV instrument, it is usually the eye, not the instrument, which needs correction. In such cases TV may be a blessing in disguise because it sends the sufferer to consult his doctor.

Occasionally, there are cases where, in spite of completely normal vision, eye fatigue rapidly appears. Such persons should have a complete medical examination, since their eye fatigue may be a symptom of a generalized weakness. In others, emotional difficulties may be the answer.

TV can actually be helpful in protecting vision. Many preschool children who do not use their eyes for detailed work have eye defects which remain undiscovered until it is too late to correct them. However, after televiewing, such children may complain and may avail themselves of medical help before serious damage occurs, especially if these symptoms are a manifestation of a real eye disease.

Sometimes television can even be utilized as a therapeutic measure. It can be recommended as a treatment for children who have what is commonly called a lazy eye. It is common medical practice to make these children wear a patch over their good eye, so as to stimulate the vision in the poorer one. Obviously, a three- or four-year old resents this. But it has been found that, if an exciting telecast is offered as a bribe, they gladly consent to cover the good eye.

However, if even our eyes and general physical condition are normal, there is a point in time at which natural fatigue sets in. This point varies with each individual. Many people concentrate on television for a much longer time than they would use their eyes at other occupations. But if you develop eye fatigue after viewing TV for less than an hour and a half, it is 90 per cent probable that the fault lies in some eye defect, assuming that your TV set is properly adjusted.

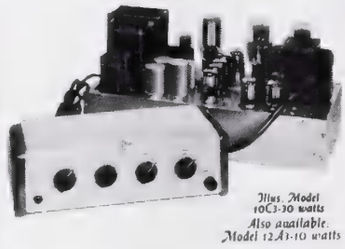
Statistics show that a great proportion of our population has optical defects. It is also known that small defects can cause as much, if not more, trouble than larger ones.

Optical defects (or errors of refraction as we call them) result from alterations in length or curvature of the eyeball. These in turn, produce blurred and distorted vision. With age even the normal eye loses its ability to focus close objects. Fortunately both of these common conditions can generally be corrected by glasses. In addition, some individuals have what is popularly known as weak muscles. Normal eye muscles direct the eyeballs so that images fall on corresponding points on the retina. This is necessary for the attainment of single binocular vision. If these muscles are not in equilibrium, a greater effort has to be made to direct the gaze equally. As a consequence fatigue sets in early.

Manufacturers are constantly making improvements in television transmission and receivers. By curbing outside electronic interference, the TV industry has made possible the transmission and reception of fairly stable, well-defined pictures with a minimum of "snow," "tweed," "herringbone" or other objectionable patterns. Unquestionably, it is easier and less fatiguing to see details with the larger pictures (12½" and 16") than with the smaller ones (7" and 10"). With the larger screens, the viewing distance should be at least ten feet. The smaller screens can be viewed at closer range.

The TV screen is almost always brighter than the movie picture screen. This sets up too great a contrast between the screen and surrounding area in a darkened room and, as a result, may induce strain. Televiewers have been advised never to have a room entirely dark. Indirect illumination has been found best. If using a floor lamp, place it away from the set, preferably behind the audience giving the whole room a fair amount of light.

Television in well-illuminated rooms should go a long way to obviate the visual conflict which ordinarily results from looking at a very bright object in a dark room. It permits one to rest the eyes by momentarily glancing away from the screen. Incidental minor accidents, i.e. striking objects or tripping over furniture when moving about, are less likely to occur when the room is illuminated.



In the past, the outrageous claims that were used were respon-

How to have a lovelier home

PITTSBURGH MIRRORS (wall-hung or built-in, framed or unframed) are versatile decorating tools. They'll make the small dining space of an L-shaped living-dining room combination like this seem far more spacious and appealing. They'll reflect color, movement, lovely furnishings. They'll break up dull wall areas, form attractive settings for almost any home activity.

THE EASY, QUICK, INEXPENSIVE WAY to give bedroom, bath or hall new beauty and utility is a full-length Plate Glass Door Mirror. It tells you the truth about your looks . . . head to toe . . . whether you're 6 or 60. And it cheers up the whole room. (Putting such a mirror on a door is just a jiffy job . . . you can do it yourself.)

EVERY HOME SHOULD HAVE a picture window. It's a magic pick-me-up for any dark or dispirited room. Brings in floods of daylight, makes your nicest outdoor view an indoor part of your home. And it's practical, too. For now you can use Twindow, Pittsburgh's window with built-in insulation, that cuts down heat loss, eliminates downdrafts and solves the old problem of fogged windows.

Architects: T. H. and M. K. Hunter, Hanover, N. H.

or poor quality in television pic-ures. These were jerky in every ense of the word. Nowadays the ndustry has learned many things bout making better television lms. The producers have learned o avoid "busy" long shots and to nake more detailed close-ups to llow for gradations ranging over nly 20 shades between black and hite. Thinner negatives and thin-er prints than those used for reg-lar motion pictures have been de-eloped. Few low key or extremely ark scenes are used. The stress s on comparatively fresh prints in ontrast to the old grainy ones.

Finally, here are a few sugges-ions to televiewers who want to void eye fatigue:

1. Do not have your screen too igh above eye-level. It is easier n your eyes when the screen is t eye-level or just below.

2. Larger screens are preferred. f your screen is very small, use magnifier.

3. Have the room well lighted. deally, the brightness of the room hould be that of the picture tube igh lights or about 60-foot lam-erts. Indirect illumination is best. f you are using a floor lamp, lace it away from the set, pref-rably behind the audience.

4. Regulate the sound to the desired degree, then bring up the picture to optimum brilliance.

5. Do not allow children to lie on the floor at the foot of the instrument.

With the larger screens, the viewing distance should be at least ten feet.

6. In order to avoid distortion of the pictures, sit as nearly in front of the screen as possible. Too great an angle makes it difficult to co-ordinate the two images received by the eyes.

7. Do not persist in televiewing if your eyes get tired.

8. Have the room well ventilated.

9. Colored glasses should not be worn. If the images are too bright, adjust your set.

10. Be sure you get a good installation job. In some localities more than one antenna is necessary. For your eyes' sake, have your set serviced by an expert at stated intervals.

And if you follow these simple suggestions, there is no reason for any eyestrain from television. Now that the bugaboo has been laid, let us forget our fears and enjoy a new privilege which will mean more pleasure in the home, a new vehicle for teaching, a richer entertainment. Let us be ready to enjoy what the future will bring.

If it's a musical career you want well, who's to stop you from hav-it? And whether it is humble truments, such as harmonicas, or morous ones—piano, violin, et —that fascinate you, why wait? We aren't concerned here too much with the would-be Larry Adler or Andres Segovia, whose magical performances, respectively, on the harmonica and the Spanish guitar have made their names household words. I have in mind the ordinary lover of music who'd like to be able to entertain himself, as well as his friends and, if necessary, even relatives with a respectable ability.

To get right down to rudimentary matters, there is the ukulele, a very compact and serviceable little business which can go along quite nicely with a vocal solo or a group sing (it wouldn't be loud enough for a community sing) or supply very neatly the harmony and rhythm for some melodic instrument. It happens not to be in such widespread use as it once was, and I wonder why. It is about the easiest of all to play for one thing, and surely a source of much fun for another. If Dad and Mother are anywhere around their fifties, just ask them about that. And let us not snub the ocarina, a rudely styled "sweet potato," which is actually shaped like a bird, and capable, when blown through properly, of emitting warm, flutey sounds to go with the uke, for instance.

There is enjoyment to be got out of the banjo, which played such an important part in the development of the modern dance band. It's not especially popular now, but what has that to do with it? It could still make life merry for you, should you learn to perform on it decently.

Music isn't for the few and neither is the right to make music. Often it has been said that there are only two kinds of music—good and bad—and I'm sure that both can be found in all music, from the least pretentious to the most intellectual. You would be surprised at how many famous classical virtuosos of our time relax with popular music. And what would many of the celebrated composers have done without folk music to use as basic material for their symphonies?

So with instruments. If you find greater pleasure in listening to the guitar than you do in listening to a symphony orchestra or an opera, there is no one to tell you you're wrong; no one has a right to in the first place. It rests on your own taste; choose the guitar by all means.

And speaking about the guitar, what would Spanish music, particularly the flamenco or Spanish gypsy style, have been without it? If there is any country in the world that has a national musical instrument, that country surely is Spain and the instrument is the guitar.

The guitar is about as enchanting a musical instrument as you can find—and very romantic! Although there are many types, the differences between them are of interest only to the expert or the historian. The six-stringed guitar, the modern version of ancient lutes and harps and gitterns, is the one most commonly used. Perish the thought about its being an accompanying instrument. All you have to do, to prove to yourself that it isn't, is to listen to recordings by Segovia or Vincente Gomez or, for that matter, any of the highly skilled guitarists of our own country—Alvino Rey and others of its shiny exponents among the dance musicians.

You can learn to play it! How well you eventually manage to do so will depend, quite naturally, on the amount of time you give it and, just as naturally, on the amount of talent you yourself possess. But it can be done, make no mistake about that.

There are other stringed instruments that may strike your fancy. The zither, for one, has latterly made quite a commotion, owing principally to the beautiful effects it achieves in the music for the recent film, "The Third Man."

Fun? Why there's loads to be had for the trying. Just don't let your imagination run riot concerning difficulties. With a little steady application, you'll be surprised how easily the difficulties get whittled down as you improve your technique on the instrument of your choice.

Clarinets, saxaphones, trumpets, trombones. Do you thrill all over at the mere thought of mastering one of these? Well, if you'll take my advice, you'll end this vicarious business of enjoying only somebody else's performance on such instruments. You'll do something about that by taking up one of them yourself. Here, again, it requires a reasonable amount of application and fortitude to sustain you through the early complexities. But how do you know unless you give it a try, whether the complexities are of discouraging proportions. Take a flier, it's the only way to find out. And the chances are ninety in a hundred that you will be most agreeably surprised. There is no point in being frustrated any longer. If you envy another one's talents enough, it should prove a motivating force to emulating him, whoever he may be. Perhaps all you need is a slight push and, in that case, I hope that my words may give you just that. So consider yourself pushed and get going. If I were you, I'd get going right now, even if the instrument that especially draws you is the violin or the viola or the piano or the cello, usually considered the ne plus ultra of the musical family.

Why, there are short-cut teaching methods for the piano today that by their results may be called miraculous. And what an advantage you do have, if there is a piano in your home! And from the piano it is but a short route to the organ and the rest of the keyboard instruments, including the home organ.

The beautiful sounds of the organ are no longer the exclu-operty of the cathedral or the ncert hall. Now, because of a npact and cleverly engineered , the organ can give you such easures in your own home. If, u've had any piano training at , you will find the home organ sy to play.

It may look difficult at first nce, but those little stops, those o keyboards, those pedals can come personal friends of yours relatively little time.

Would you like to have a junior nphony orchestra in your living om? Well, the nearest thing to it is a home organ, with all its ried orchestral sounds. You don't ve to worry about the thing called ouch," which in piano playing is the utmost importance. In the me organ the "touch" is right there in the instrument, and to play it no special pressure or contact is required. The tone combinations are yours to choose, from thrilling organ sonorities to delicate flute-like sounds.

Furthermore, this instrument just can't get out of tune, for the simple reason that there are no strings to go flat on you. And, it is alleged, neither humidity nor weather changes have any effect on the tone quality.

And there you are! Evenings of concert music, popular music, of genial, homespun music are all yours. Friends, conviviality, a happier existence, these are all extra dividends to be had from one of the soundest (no pun) of all investments—an instrument that is easy to learn.

citement of the sports telecasts. We suggest that you apply to evision-buying the same philosphy you use when you purchase car, or a washing machine, or a van. Buy when you can afford it. owing that next year's model uld be a little better and perps a little cheaper, but bearing mind that you cannot use and joy this year what won't even ist until next.

If you pursued the let's-wait-next-year thinking to its logi- conclusion, you'd never buy ything next year, either, on the eory that the following year's odels might be better and eaper. Remember the bird in the nd or, as the Romans used to say. rpe diem.

Is color television just around corner and will it obsolete sent TV sets when it comes? n if color television were just und the corner—which it probly is not—it would not obsolete V set bought today, tomorrow, ast year. The Federal Communiions Commission is empowered law to regulate the use of the waves (usually called frequenor channels) by the radio and vision industries. The FCC is mitted to this policy: It will authorize a color-telecasting m which would not permit you eceive color telecasts on your ent set in black and white. It indicated that it will insist that ent sets be able to receive color casts in color by the mere adn of an inexpensive converter dapter.

In any case, according to most authorities in the industry, color telecasting could not start for two or three years, even if the FCC should authorize it tomorrow. It would take about this long to allocate and test channels and to manufacture transmitters and receiving sets in sufficient quantity to make color TV an important factor.

Will something called UHF completely change TV reception? This mysterious sounding UHF simply means Ultra High Frequencies. The term refers to a section of the radio spectrum which could furnish additional TV channels so that television programs could go to many more people. If the FCC decides to authorize telecasting in the Ultra High Frequencies, this will have no effect whatsoever on the operation of your present television set. The programs, telecast on the VHF (or Very High Frequency) channels will continue to be telecast on these channels. Furthermore, statements issued by the FCC indicate that it would not permit telecasting in the UHF bands unless such telecasts could be received on your present set by means of an inexpensive converter or adapter.

The answers to the foregoing, disquieting questions would seem to indicate that prospective TV buyers need have no qualms about the future if they buy now.

The next question to think about is what to buy. We analyze this for you on page 73.

which are usually combinations of third-rate materials and haphazard parts all built around a tube, or viewing screen which is remarkably large for its price. This large tube at a little price is the big come-on, for in TV the price generally rises with the size of the tube and everyone wants a big screen. But in these bargain sets, the tube is frequently too much for the rest of the parts. Extra pressure on a tube that is too large for the other components of the receiver will cause it to burn out prematurely. So, while a bargain set's picture may look fine for awhile, you can anticipate a speedy disintegration of the whole apparatus.

Besides expecting to find these manufacturers cutting corners on the construction and hookup of the electrical connections within their sets, you are practically guaranteed poor picture quality, interference from unwanted signals, and inferior cabinet work, all of which show up almost immediately after the set has become yours. These operators cash in on an aristocratic trade name, turn over a crop of sleazy sets, then change to a new and equally high-toned name for another crop. So take a dim view of the TV bargain with an unfamiliar name.

What type of set?

Now, as for the types of receivers there are to choose from, sets appear on the market in three general manisfestations, from high to low on the price list. These are consoles, consolettes, and table models.

A console is a cabinet which sits on the floor, its screen viewable from chairs of normal height.

A consolette usually turns out to be a slenderized or abbreviated console, although sometimes there appears to be slight difference if any between one firm's console and another firm's consolette. In price, a consolette may occasionally be close to a comparable table model.

A table model is exactly what it claims to be, a set which you must place on a table or chest in order to bring the screen to eye level. Sometimes you have to shop around for a piece of supporting furniture. Sometimes the manufacturer or retailer furnishes it, or you may own a piece that will serve. More than one half the total television sets in the country are said to be table models, although people in the business notice more and more buyers investing in consoles.

You'll buy whichever fits your purse and the room in which it will be used. But part of your decision will hang upon whether you want a set to provide television alone ("straight television"), or a TV set which also houses radio and phonographic attachments. If you own a fairly new AM-FM radio or an up-to-date three-speed phonograph, chances are you won't be inclined to pay extra in order to get these facilities included in a TV set.

But if you like the idea of having all your home-entertainment machines under one big top, a so-called "combination" is a most economical way of purchasing a modern phonograph, radio, and television receiver. You get in one purchase a cabinet, loud speaker and amplifier for all three elements which add appreciably to the cost when such sets are bought singly. The unit combination usually includes storage space for record albums and in some instances even a home recorder.

Objection to the combination is that it tends to be a bulky piece of equipment, especially when the television comes in the large tube sizes. (The larger the tube, the deeper a TV set must be.) On the other hand, it has the advantage of requiring less total space than separate units providing the same performance, and manufacturers seem increasingly able to squeeze more equipment into less area.

Television combined with a radio or a phonograph is less frequently found in table models. But attachments which may be connected to any television or radio instrument make it possible to connect a record playing device for one or more of the new record speeds. Many television receivers provide a "jack" in the back of the mechanism to simplify this connection.

Just so that you won't misunderstand the meaning of "combination" when you see it in advertising, remember that it's a term used to cover many different arrangements of TV with other features. It may mean TV with AM or FM radio, or both: it may mean TV including a one-speed, two-speed, or a three-speed phonograph; it may mean TV with both radio and phonograph.

Before you buy, check closely on what you are getting for your money. You don't want to pay for extras you don't care about having, but you want to get all the extras you think you're paying for.

Next to price, the screen

l be the most positive factor in ermining your purchase of a evision set. Know in advance s universal truth: You will soon nt a larger screen than the one bought. No TV owner has yet en found who feels he could oy televiewing on a smaller een. Like the average home-ezer owner, the average tele-on owner is planning on a larger for the next purchase. In gen-l, a larger screen means a larger e, hence a higher price.

There are two kinds of tele-on: "direct view" and "projec-n." About 98 per cent of all evision now sold is direct view.

n direct-view television, the een, which is the frosty-looking ss panel you see on the front of television set, is actually the ge end of the electronic tube, led a kinescope, which produces picture you see. You can under-nd, then, how the size of the ture is directly related to the of the tube.

All manufacturers try to give as much picture as they can the money, so you will see ious treatments of the viewing een when you shop around. The of most kinescopic tubes hich is the screen you look into) circular, so on some sets the een will be round. But most nufacturers feel that the pic-e tends to be distorted around periphery of the tube, so they sk, or frame, the arcs of the le. The screen then appears to either a rectangle or a truncated le, its top and bottom cut off straight lines, but curving at sides.

comparatively new tube with ctangularly-shaped picture end lso being used by a number of ufacturers. You will probably examples of both round and ngular tubes when you're ping and can judge the quality e picture each furnishes.

be size, in television talk, is gnated by inches, and the s refer to the diameter of the as in a 7-inch, 10-inch, 12-tube, and so on. Translated square inches of picture, which more comprehensible to most , the following table gives you idea of the approximate view-rea you may expect from the sizes on the market, depending w the manufacturer frames reen:

ch tube—about 26 sq. in.
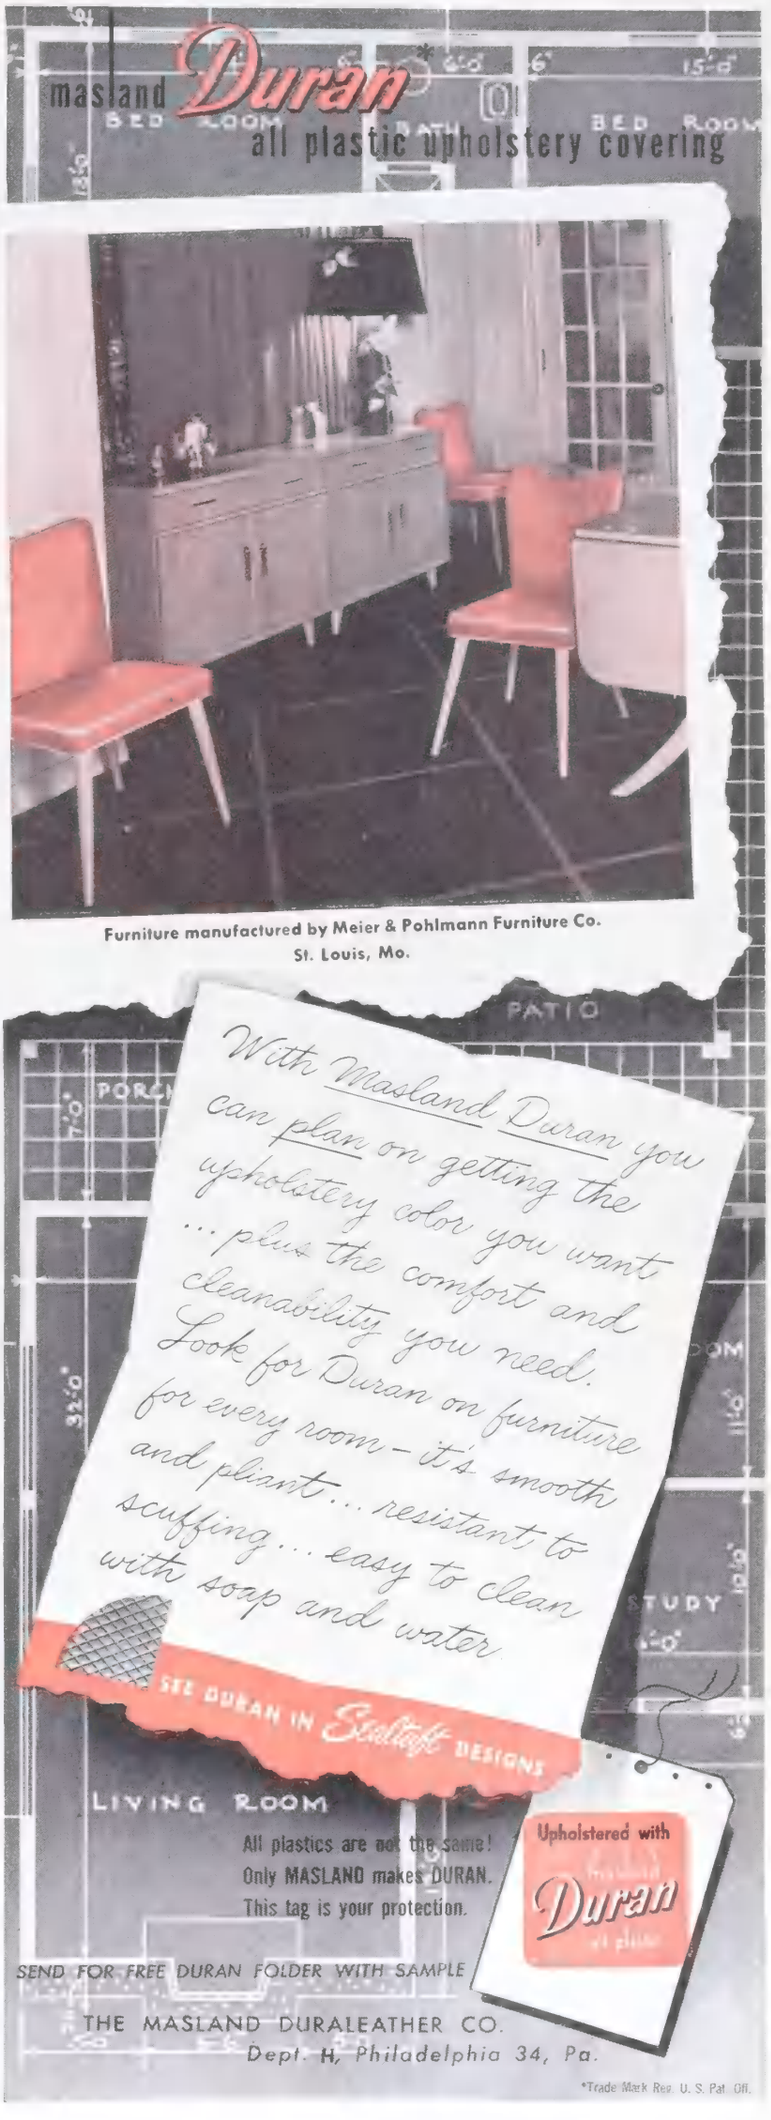
12- and 12½-inch tube—about 85 to 90 sq. in.
15- and 16-inch tubes—about 125 to 145 sq. in.
19- and 20-inch tubes—about 205 to 222 sq. in.

Customers have been so insistent on bigger screens that manufacturers have had to change their popular or "mass-production" size tubes from the 7-inch diameter it was a few years ago to a 12- or 12½-inch size. And it now appears that most people are asking for at least a 16-inch tube. Nineteen- and 20-inch direct-view tubes are available, and even larger sizes are being made experimentally.

Some manufacturers are said to have in their laboratories tubes more than 30 inches in diameter.

You must remember one thing about this, however. To have a larger tube and screen you must have a deeper cabinet, which will protrude more into your room and create decorating problems. No rose without its thorns! But the research people are working on this angle. Already the depth has been shortened.



Projection TV

In projection television—as opposed to direct view—you do not look at the picture directly in the kinescopic tube. Instead you may look at a screen. This shows you a many times enlarged image which has been projected onto the screen by an arrangement of magnifying lenses and slanting mirrors built into the set. The screen itself may be fixed in the front of the cabinet, just as in a direct-view set. Or the screen may rise out of the top of the cabinet for viewing and be folded back again when not in use. Or, the screen may be a separate piece of equipment, like a home movie projection screen, which is set up across the room from the television receiver. The picture is then flashed from the set to the screen which in its smallest size is 3 by 4 feet.

The advantages here are that you can have a much larger viewing area than in direct view, and you do not have to look directly into the tube. An additional advantage is the small, compact size of the cabinet, for this type of television does not use large tubes, hence doesn't need large housing for them.

The smallest projection picture has an area of 192 square inches, considerably larger than the viewing surface of a 16-inch direct-view tube. Inside-the-cabinet projection sets now available show pictures 300, 432, and 520 square inches.

WHAT SHOULD YOU BUY?

Outside-the-cabinet projection now available offers screens from 3 by 4 feet on up to regular movie-theater screen size.

There are television experts who will tell you (saying, "Don't quote me") that projection is the television of the future. Yet some of the largest manufacturers have stopped producing such sets because they found that the public did not take readily to them. The obvious reason for projection's slight popularity with the buying public is its cost, which must be fairly high because its manufacture does not lend itself easily to mass-assembly methods. There are some who say —without proof—that it's hard to find servicemen who know how to adjust or repair projection sets. It is also said that there are still technical bugs in projection TV. However, at the same time, executives of certain firms which have stopped making projection sets have chosen projection TV for their own homes! So, we'd definitely mark it for consideration while you're doing your shopping.

What size screen?

What size television screen should you buy? Despite a lot of talk about this subject, no one has yet come up with a safe rule of thumb to tell you how large a screen you should have for a room of any given size. Apparently, your best guide is common sense, as usual. You should view the picture far enough away from the screen so that your eyes won't hurt. In his article on page 80, in which Dr. Berliner explodes the myth that television causes eyestrain, he suggests that you sit at least ten feet away from large screens, that is, anything 90 square inches and up. So, you won't want a very large screen in a very small room, for that will put the viewers too close to the picture for comfort. This may help you gauge the screen size your room will accommodate.

What's a good picture?

There is so much about television that you must take on faith or the judgment of people other than yourself that it's good to have a few standards which you, yourself, can apply when you are shopping for a TV set.

Naturally, no one wants a television set with pictures which come apart and move from side to side in sections—or which come apart and move up and down in sections.

When you see this sort of thin happening, you will know one o two things about the set you're considering—either the dials whic regulate "horizontal hold" or "ver tical hold" are not properly ad justed, or the set itself leaves to much to be desired.

You don't have to be a technicia to tell when a set is distorting pic tures. Every television station send out "test patterns," usually befor its programs go on the air. Thes test patterns are arrangements o circles, lines, and angles. If th circle on a test pattern looks ova instead of round, or if the line are broken or curved instead o straight, you will know that th set is distorting the picture. On th test pattern this kind of defectio is clear even to people with su average eyesight.

How does it sound?

When you're buying televisio you're likely to be so concern with how it looks that you m forget to check on how it sounds and that's a most important co sideration, as you are aware you've ever had any truck with dud radio or phonograph. You going to have to listen to a lot sound emanating from this n investment, so take pains to sure it's good sound and not noi

Unless your present radio is Frequency Modulation, you sta to get better sound on televisi than you do on your radio, for te vision broadcasting is done o FM. As you know, this is bro casting in the Very High Frequ cies and notable for its lack static and interference.

But there are degrees of excellence in the tonal quality of TV sound, depending upon the loud speakers in the receiving set.

Few people have hearing sensitive enough to tonal quality to appraise either radio or television sound very exactly. But you will be surprised at how much more distinctly you hear sound and its variations if you listen with your eyes closed. Try this when you're shopping and you'll begin to distinguish good from bad.

While you're listening, check for the presence of good, clean (as opposed to fuzzy) bass tones and crisp, clear high tones which have good volume. This is particularly important in a combination radio-phono-television instrument.

The loudspeaker should be as large as reasonably possible in any cabinet. Table models generally use loudspeakers of a 6-inch or 8-inch diameter. In the better consoles and combination instruments, the loudspeaker is 12" in diameter. Speak right up and ask the salesman what size loudspeakers a set has. If a set has two 12-inch speakers, it probably has good tonal quality whether your ear can recognize it or not.

Something known as an audio amplifier feeds the loudspeaker and is important but difficult to evaluate without the help of an expert. This is most important in a combination, but if a combination is equipped with a "push-pull amplifier," you can usually take this as a fairly reliable indication of good audio-amplifier design.

Once you've decided upon the TV receiver you want to invest in, this is only the beginning. The next step, and so important a step that it cannot be over-emphasized, is to see to it that you have a first-rate installation job. We tell you more about this on page 81.

steel buildings which loom between you and the desired TV signals. In fact, it is generally conceded that your best chances at clear, sturdy TV pictures come from a custom-built roof antenna. Reason for this is that a high, outside antenna gives you the most likely opportunity to pick up the electro-magnetic impulses which are responsible for the TV picture. These impulses travel stubbornly in a straight line, from transmitter to receiver. And if intervening objects get in the way, the impulses bound off these objects, with such results as a double picture showing up on your screen—or no picture at all!

A home within the range of only one television station could probably do fine with the simplest kind of roof antenna. This is called a simple dipole and it's the basic unit of the antenna. It amounts to two rods fixed at right angles to a mast, placed end to end and parallel with the earth.

By the technicians' own devious methods, they can determine what television stations you can get on your set by cutting the dipoles in certain lengths which are known to be able to pick up the television signals of these stations.

A simple dipole cut to bring in a particular TV station will also receive other stations which send their signals from the same direction. It will also receive other stations, even though it is not specifically cut for them, but naturally its reception is not as efficient.

Actually, if you want first-rate reception from other stations, you must add to your antenna dipoles cut specifically to the frequencies of the stations you want.

Such an arrangement is called a "stacked antenna," with different dipoles of different lengths stacked at different intervals on the mast.

So, if you live in a vicinity where five or six TV stations are within reception distance, your serviceman can provide you with a stacked antenna arrangement that will probably pull all five or six channels into your television set. It is even possible that he may know how to bring in all these channels for you without cutting a different dipole for each channel.

The dipoles are known as the active or live parts of the antenna because they snatch the TV signal out of the air and route it on to your television receiver down below.

There are also "parasitic" or "dead" elements in an antenna, which we mention merely because you may hear talk of them—or be billed for them—when your set is installed, and you might like to know what they are. They simply help the dipoles do their job. One called a "director" helps herd in the signals that you want. The other, a "reflector," tries to exclude the signals you don't want.

There is also a kind of roof antenna, called "all-channel" or "broad-band," which can receive, often on a single dipole, a number of different stations.

But the best advice to you in the matter of antennas, as in everything else connected with television, is to enlist the best technical assistance you can possibly afford—and then abide by the experts' suggestions.

The retail store where you shop for television will probably be able to tell you in advance what kind of antenna installation you need in your location. Sometimes the store will miscalculate. But you won't have to keep a TV set which won't deliver pictures.

AT the time of installation, all such questions should be resolved by the serviceman. You had better invite him to make a thorough exploration of the premises—and then accept whatever type of antenna he recommends. He will explain the quality and quantity of television you can expect from an antenna that costs so much; and how much more of both you can get by buying so much more antenna.

Hear him out when he makes suggestions as to where you should place the TV set itself. He probably won't insist that it be placed in the middle of the floor if this turns out to be the spot where pictures flow into the receiver most freely. But he will be firm if you want the set against a wall that has a steel beam blocking out the impulses from the station or stations you hope to get. Better let him experiment. Then compromise on a spot somewhere between the place where the best pictures come in and the place where the viewing would be most comfortable. Except in rare instances this is not an issue, though, and you can place the set where it will seat the maximum number within its viewing arc—which, if you want to be technical about it, is the 60-degree arc at each side of the exact center of the screen.

For this first meeting with your serviceman—which couldn't be more important so far as your future life with television is concerned—it isn't a bad idea to have other members of the family on hand to listen attentively and to ask questions. It's a TV training course.

You will all be told, first of all, how to tune the set. You are not supposed to tamper with any other dials except those on the front side of the set—and in the last three years these have been getting fewer in number and easier to operate. The serviceman will inform you that he has tuned and fixed the dials on the back in adjustment with the antenna, and if you meddle with them, your receiver is almost sure to start acting queerly.

He may or may not mention—so we will—that nearly half the requests for service calls by new TV owners are unnecessary. All too often the nervous owners have failed to notice that the electric plug has dropped out of its socket and the set has no juice. And many times a set's misconduct is due to outside interference which a serviceman can not always remedy. Here are some of the causes of interference:

Diathermy machines of practically any type, if you live near a hospital, laboratory, beauty parlor or residence where they may be used. The diathermy impulses appear in diagonal lines running through the picture.

FM broadcasting stations—or even an AM broadcasting station if one is in the immediate vicinity. FM interference creates a herringbone effect superimposed on the picture.

Neon signs, elevators, and other non-shielded motors or electric installations, power lines, and telecasting on adjacent channels which are nearer to each other than they should be—all of these leave their marks on your TV pictures.

Automobile ignition systems, 12-volt systems on trucks or airplane ignitions will cause white flashes across the screen and in extreme instances can make the picture jump vertically. This is why the installation man tries to place the antenna as far from the street as possible.

And what an amateur radio operator can do, sending out messages on too much power, bears description.

MOST of these interferences can be eliminated by a "trap" or "shield," a small appliance which your serviceman can attach to your set for you. But if amateur radio operators are cutting up the air in your neighborhood, the best thing you can do is to ask them to operate. If they fail to do so, you and your neighbors find that their machinations are ruining your TV reception, you can appeal to the local authorities or the FCC which licenses these usually ha ss experimenters in electronics.

Your installation specialist may so warn you against moving your t from one part of the room to nother, or to another room, particularly if yours is a delicate antenna djustment. Your set and its annna may be moved, of course, but w adjustments to the new position should be made by an expert.

You should also know that sometnes your set may seem to be out order when the disturbance is ally due to a temporary failure the television station. You should erefore train yourself to first test e TV picture on all channels if suddenly becomes wayward on e particular channel, before you none for a serviceman.

Finally, your serviceman may ake the request that when you none for TV service you give your address and phone number correctly, state the name and serial number of your set, and provide a fairly detailed description of what seems to be wrong. This will help him bring the right tools and parts. But firms who specialize in doctoring television sets report that about a third of the set owners who summon help fail in one of these points.

ABOVE all, if you wish to enjoy your television set with a minimum of upkeep expense and worriment, don't be a tinkerer. If you must dabble with the mechanical elements which go to make up modern living, take out your tinkering propensities on such predictable equipment as the lawn mower or the sewing machine. Leave the care and wheedling of TV to the experts, who know what they're doing.

century English cabinet-makers, Chippendale, Hepplewhite, and Sheraton, are well represented in modern small pianos. Louis XV and Queen Anne are popular designs if you like things a little on the rococo side. Recently, there have appeared small pianos in French Provincial designs. Then you can find Regency models, Georgians, and Duncan Phyfes. Some makers show Swedish Modern models, though they are a little extreme for some buyers. Small pianos are also available in case coverings of what the makers call plastic fabric.

Don't worry if the legs of some small pianos appear fragile, unless you permit Junior to beat your furniture with his baseball bat. The legs are not functional, like those under your chairs. Piano legs are installed so that you won't think the instrument will fall over on its face. The weight of a small piano is concentrated back of the keys.

Musically, the small pianos—spinets, consoles, and verticals—reflect the late acoustical developments in the engineering laboratories of leading makers. For over a half century, the piano-factory technicians had the advantage of long strings and big sounding boards, characteristic of large pianos, in their sincere efforts to produce bigger and better tone. When the American housewives demanded pianos with less lumber and more eye appeal, the makers were confronted with new acoustical problems. It is only necessary to compare the small pianos of today with those newborn 15 years ago to realize how the engineering culturists in the piano factories have improved the voices of the youngsters.

The early piano makers in America sought and achieved an orchestral tone, so called, of greater majesty and sustaining power than prevailed in Europe then or since. This orchestral tone reaches its highest development in concert grands, approximately nine feet in length. In fact, it was created for those very instruments whose use is confined largely to the concert stage by top-flight pianists.

Professional pianists, as well as top-flight amateurs, who like to play a Beethoven concerto with muscles sufficient to make the living-room windows rattle, like this type of big orchestral tone, which

Cruises coming up

If, at this point, you've had enough summer for a while, why not take your winter cruise in the fall, when it's not summer but spring in the southern hemisphere? For instance:

Around South America—From New York, October 5, Thos. Cook & Son's Autumn Cruise-Tour, 54 days, $1,861 inclusive. By "S. S. Uruguay" to Trinidad, Rio, Santos, Sao Paulo, Montevideo, Buenos Aires; overland via the Argentine and Chilean Lakes to Santiago, Vina del Mar, Valparaiso; then home again on the "S. S. Santa Isabel," visiting Antofagasta, Callao, Lima, Guayaquil, Buenaventura, the Panama Canal, and Charleston.

Around Africa—From Antwerp and Southampton (one day later), Holland American Line, "M. V. Jagersfontein," October 12, "M. V. Klipfontein," November 9, 78 days, from $605 to $1,097. Visits Teneriffe, Capetown, Port Elizabeth, East London, Durban, Lourenco Marques, Beira, Mozambique, Port Amelia, Dar es Salaam, Zanzibar, Tanga, Mombasa, Suez, Port Said, Genoa, and Marseilles.

Around the Pacific by air—From Los Angeles, September 16, Hemphill World Cruises, 68 days, $3,590 plus tax. See Alaska, Japan, Hong Kong, the Philippines, Siam, Singapore, Java, Bali, Australia, New Zealand, Auckland, Fiji Islands, Hawaii.

Even if you never leave the main highway circling the 1,000 miles around Lake Michigan, you would quickly understand why so many vacationers contentedly return to Michigan and Wisconsin vacation spots year after year. And should you take time to leave the highway, to go by boat from Mackinaw City to Mackinac Island, for instance, or cross the Upper Peninsula to the Sault or any of its Lake Superior resorts, or drive west into the lake-spattered Indian Head section of Wisconsin, or north from Green Bay into Door County, you yourself may become an addict.

This is friendly, folksy, unpretentious vacation country, where kids learn to fish young, grandchildren carry on in the summer homes their grandparents built, people sing around campfires at night, and a luxury hotel is luxurious merely by comparison with hotels less so. There are, moreover, few areas in which you can find the hot-weather comfort afforded by the east shore from Benton Harbor north, or the is available only in grand pianos of generous size. Such tone is not necessary, and frequently undesirable, in the living room of your home. It is not a question of whether the tone of the spinet is equal to the tone of some other type of piano: the question is, does the tone please you and is it sufficient for your purpose? If so, and if you like the design, it is the piano for you. Rest assured that a well-made spinet will prove just as durable as a well-made big piano.

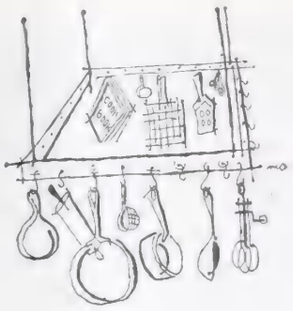
The words—spinet, console, and vertical—are used interchangeably to designate certain types of small pianos which bear no resemblance to the upright pianos of yesteryear. Hence, it is impossible to define spinet, console, or vertical, as representing distinct types or sizes. They range in height from 36 to 41 inches in most cases, although some are available 43 inches high. The other two dimensions are fixed within close limits for functional reasons. This discussion concerns only full-scale, 88-note pianos. If you want an extra piano for the rumpus room or the game room, you might like one of the 64-note or 72-note pianos which may be had in any color of the rainbow.



The first of the new small pianos were called verticals by a common consent and were larger than those of today. As they were reduced in size, their popularity increased. Then someone gave the smaller ones the name spinet, which was one of the early keyboard instruments, an ancestor of the piano. The word had been adopted by desk manufacturers but is now back home in the piano industry.

The appeal of the piano tone is just as personal as the appeal of an oil painting. Professionals who make their living playing or teaching the piano do not agree as the type of tone best suited each. Many shoppers acquire an acute attack of inferiority complex when they approach their piano purchase. This is wholly unnecessary. You are going to live with your piano, and it is you who should be pleased. Buy the piano that pleases you if you would be happy ever afterward.

It is well to arrange with the seller of your piano to supply you with a tuner-technician to service the instrument at regular intervals—three or four times the first year when it is becoming acclimated to the atmospheric conditions in your home. Remember your piano is basically an instrument made of wood. If an old-time tuner who has been servicing big pianos for a half century, mutters in his beard when he sees your spinet, don't pay any attention to him. Servicing a spinet, particularly the action, involves new techniques. Most tuners have mastered them, but some have not and don't see why they want to. Treat such a tuner as you would an automobile mechanic who grumbles at your automatic gear shift.

GIVE your spinet the same care as you would any other type of piano. If the case becomes soiled, wash it with tepid water and a mild soap, using both sparingly. The case is furniture and is comparable to a good furniture polish. Clean the keys with a damp cloth. They are probably plastic, although they may be ivory, cut from the tusk of an African elephant, which is more absorbent and colors more easily. Certain pianists still prefer ivory, claiming it feels better to the fingers but it's a moot point.

Enjoy Organ Music at Home

New electronic organs—compactly sized for today's homes—provide a wide range of musical entertainment

by Richard Williams

Pan fell in love with a nymph. She besought her sisters to change her into a river-reed. Pan cut the reed and fashioned from it a series of pipes on which he played sad tunes. The Pipes-of-Pan are the ancestor of the mouth organ, which is the ancestor of the full organ.

Mozart thought that "the organ is the king of the instruments." Used in the church—and in the Eighteenth Century it was in the church that most music was played—a rich and great repertoire was developed for this kingly instrument.

But only a few super-wealthy homes could afford to install the standard organ, which may cost anywhere from $6,000 to $200,000. What's more, your home or mine has not space to house it. Never

PHOTOGRAPHS BY EZRA STOLLER: PICTOR

The new electronic organs are designed especially for the home. Their spinet-like shape fits comfortably into living room, game room, or hall way. They are simple to install, cannot get out of tune, and are built to last as long as your love of music. The organ is a rewarding hobby

Adults and children alike enjoy the organ's wide range of sonic effects. There's nothing complicated about it. If either you or your children can strike the right keys on a piano, it's a simple trick to master the organ's almost endless tone combinations. No virtuoso "touch" is required.

eless, the standard organ in our ntury is busier than ever. It now ads a double life, like Dr. Jekyll nd Mr. Hyde. It has continued to ve in the church, but its new abitat is the movie palace where is made to produce some garish nd vulgar tricks.

About 15 years ago, there came to being a new kind of organ—e designed for the home. This me organ is a smaller and far s expensive instrument. It is no nger a pure wind instrument, but oduces its tone through a elec-nic principle, which I do not derstand and have no intention explaining. Now the organ is no ger either Dr. Jekyll or Mr. de—but Mr. Pickwick, a solid, ertaining and lovable citizen, y welcome in a small home. Like ancient relative, it produces at and glorious sounds.

he new electronic organs can-get out of tune, need little ntenance and are built to last ugh the years. They have ved popular because it is pos-e even with scanty technique produce on them satisfying ic. Play it, and you have the ion of commanding a whole estra. You can mix different timbres and tone color. It can thunder like the brass or sing as sweetly as soprano. If you know how to play the piano but a little, you can impress and entertain your friends. The natural resources of the instrument— the richness of color to which I have alluded—cover up your lack of skill. (You must still, of course, play the right notes!)

CHILDREN love to play on (and with) the home organ. I have known cases where children, who looked somewhat disdainfully at the prospect of a "musical education," became fascinated by this curious "double piano" with the two keyboards. They like to press down the keys and hear the swelling tones peal forth. The sheer beauty of the sound, as well as its volume, appeals to them as much as it does to adults. To children, it is an intriguing gadget.

The fact is that these instruments have stimulated the playing of music—in homes which like popular music, in homes devoted to the classics, and even in those homes where the player's fingers wander idly over the noisy keys in search of the lost chord.

There's nothing complicated about the built-in system. It has the same basic parts as the ready-made radio-phonograph. They're called "components" and consist of the radio tuner, the record player, the amplifier, and speaker. The big difference is this. You select the parts for your built-in system. You get the chance to buy better ones—high-fidelity components that reproduce the full range of audible sounds from the 20 cycles per second bass notes up to the 20,000 cycles per second in the treble. Parts in the ready-made sets don't handle this wide a spread, so you miss some sound at both ends of the scale.

Custom installation of components—building them into your house—not only gives you higher fidelity, more convenience of operation, but more economy than ready-made sets, if you do it right.

Suppose, for instance, you once bought a ready-made AM radio, and now you want to add FM or TV. Ordinarily, you just buy a complete new FM or TV set—paying for extra, unneeded amplifiers and speakers. But if you buy components alone, you need get only what you don't already have—no duplication. Simply hook the new equipment up to your present amplifier and speaker(s).

This is to cast no adverse reflection on ready-made sets of any kind. These have provided excellent service to millions of families over the years. The point is: For the same money you can buy even better components and install them yourself. If you have no mechanical ability, you can hire a competent serviceman to do the job for you. This labor costs about $3.50 an hour, and the average technician takes around three hours to install a fairly simple system. Manufacturers of components have been very diligent in turning out instruction leaflets written for laymen.

As to cost of components: You should be able to install a complete AM-FM radio-and-record player anywhere from about $200 up to $5,000. Typical prices of AM-FM tuners are $100, $140. Record changers range from a three-speed one at $48 to the one that plays 10 records and costs $1.797. Amplifiers range from $24 to $400, whil high-fidelity speakers vary from $18 to $2,000. This is a diminishing-returns kind of thing: The $2,000 speaker is, of course, better than the $18 one. But the $18 one remains a very excellent speaker for normal use. Installed correctly, with good acoustics, it will give you a full $18 worth of sound—far more than you can get out of a lower-fidelity speaker in a ready-made cabinet placed for decorative effect alone, in a room with unplanned acoustics. Don't forget that even the best of speakers in a poor acoustical setting can give you only mediocre sound reproduction.

Acoustics

A room can be either too live or too dead. Acoustics make it right. The three little sketches on page 132 show you how to control reverberation. Your ear will tell you when you've controlled it enough.

To widen a room sonically, face speaker toward a dead wall (sketch below). Incidentally, this also reduces the over-all sonic level in the room. Don't worry about sitting in front of the wall—you're dead too, sonically. It is worth noting that if you are planning an openable glass wall in your room—for daylighting, solar heating, and amiable indoor-outdoor relations—such a wall can easily double as your dead wall! When it's open, it's 100 per cent dead. Closed and fully draped, it's nearly as dead. In warm weather, open it up and take your music on the terrace—without having to install an outdoor speaker.

Only with components do you get the chance to install your speaker correctly. It should be at approximate ear-height, across the room from its several listeners. Best place is right in the wall—then the wall and the entire contour of the room serve as an "infinite baffle," to prevent interference from sound-waves behind the speaker. If you can't put it in a wall, a closet door will do. In an existing house, don't try to break into any walls. It isn't worth it. To prevent accidental damage to your speaker, cover it with a plastic grill cloth. (Lint and vegetable fibers of other fabrics soak up high notes.)

This simple acoustical trick will make a 9-foot room as wide as 24 outdoors, sonically: Speaker in storage wall at left faces sound-absorbent wall at right. You could use acoustical plaster or tiles, carpeting, fabric, thermal insulation board, anything to soak up sound.

If you are so intense a listener you can't concentrate on other things, yet would like the relaxing effect of faint background music while you work or talk—try this trick. Heavy drapery covers speaker whenever you want just background music. You are no longer conscious of the source; you hear only soft music, as from a distance.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY ROBERT C. CLEVELAND

Now, acoustics merely control sound within a room. To eliminate disturbing people in the next room, you need sound-insulation. Ordinarily this is expensive—but with components, you get a wonderful possibility: For several reasons, you need an absorbent-lined chamber (the bigger the better) behind your speaker. Expand this chamber to become a double wall, and you have an efficient sonic barrier to keep music in the music room.

You can see that all these things, so necessary for fidelity, are practically impossible to do with ready-made sets. Actually every new house should be wired for sound. Ideally, this means architect, owner, and sound engineer should all work together in the preliminary design stage. (Note in the third sketch, page 132, that room-shape greatly affects its acoustics.)

Now for the good news: If you're planning a new house, you may be able to finance your built-in equipment along with the house. What about when you move, ten years from now? Well, would you want to take the windows with you? A sound system specifically designed for a specific house is in the same category.

In buying components, let your ear be the judge—just ask for a demonstration. To this end, one components salesroom in New York has a setup where you simply flip switches to hear any of 2,600 possible combinations.

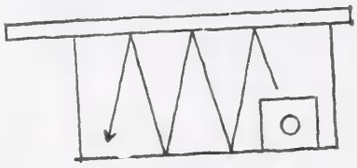
In designing your installation, you should definitely get expert help, to insure all the possible electronic and acoustical advantages at least cost. In all large cities there is at least one organization which sells quality radio-phonograph products, and these organizations have qualified men who can advise you. Intelligent people don't build homes without consulting architects. So get "sound" advice.

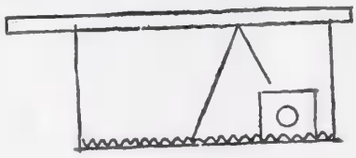
Convenience of operation



If your facilities are not arranged for convenient use, you won't bother to use them. With components, you can have the speaker across the room where it should be, and still locate controls at your finger tips. (Put them in a vertical surface, rather than horizontal, to minimize dusting.) You have the opportunity, at least, to plan ample record storage along with your built-in record player. Give yourself a handy counter top for sorting, and plan lighting so you can read the titles. You can easily pipe music from the master unit to other speakers in other rooms (sketches on page 67). One sound engineer has even worked out a dial system of remote control for such subservient speakers. You simply dial the program you want, just as you would on an ordinary telephone dial. This engineer is currently working on a process to add television to his dial setup.

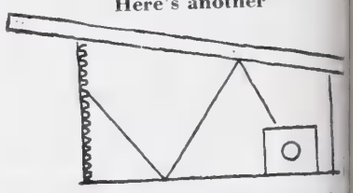
Modern music demands components

New ideas in musical expression are demanding better acoustics and sound systems in our homes. Since most rooms are so bad acoustically, it is no wonder many people think Stan Kenton, for instance, is all blare. We just don't have 1950 rooms to listen to 1950 music in. Music, like many other things, is way ahead of residential architecture. We need rooms that can take a deliberately sudden trumpet blast and a gentle clarinet sub-tone equally well. And such extremes of dynamics are not at all confined to jazz. Listen to Valse Triste by Stokowski and the Philadelphia Orchestra. With poor acoustics its tremendous crescendo will almost shatter the pictures on your wall, while other spots fade out completely—at the same volume setting. And if the recording engineer had modified those extremes while cutting the master disc, he would have removed part of the genius Stokowski put into it.



It all adds up: Sound should be an architectural part of your house. For this is the only way to enjoy music at its best.

This room is poor sonically



Reverberation occurs where two parallel surfaces are smooth, hard, sound-reflective. This happens in all three dimensions in most bathrooms and kitchens.

Here's one way to fix it

To dampen reverberation, make one surface soft, woolly, sound-absorbent. Commercial acoustical material on ceiling would do same job as carpet here.

Here's another

Making surfaces fan out toward a third, sound-absorbent one does the trick. Here sound waves are directed to draped wall. Ceiling simply follows roof line.

Sugar. The cream referred to is a creamy, velvet-smooth maple "butter" that's just the right consistency to spread easily on sandwiches, waffles, and pancakes, and to use for frosting cakes. Its mate is sap syrup made into flavored maple granules that can be sprinkled on toast, apple pie, fruits, and cereals.

John Shelby has a second pair, dubbed Sugar 'N Spice, which combined one jar of the aforementioned granular maple sugar and a jar of granular maple sugar spiked with just enough cinnamon to add a spicy fillip to the more subtle flavor of the maple. Next there's a real old-fashioned soft maple sugar, coarse and firm in texture and especially pungent in flavor, that's particularly good for use in dessert cookery. The final member of this group of maple specialties is a slow-aged maple vinegar—something I didn't know existed, frankly. A whisper of maple flavor wafts delightfully through its zesty yet mellow tang. Use it as you would any vinegar. You'll like the extra something it gives a tossed-salad dressing.

Cream 'N Sugar (1 lb. cream, 7 oz. granulated sugar) costs $2.50; Sugar 'N Spice (7 oz. each), $2.25; 1-11b. carton soft maple sugar, $1.40; two ½ pts. maple vinegar, $1.75. (Prices west of Miss. River: $2.65, $2.35, $1.50, $1.85, respectively). All from John Shelby, Barre, Vermont.

Until a sample of Bowl & Cruet Virgin Peanut Oil came my way for consideration, I'd fight anyone to a draw on the unequivocable superiority of fine olive oil for salad dressings. Why is a basement damp? If ground water leaks in through the walls or floor, that's one thing. To correct it, you've got to check drainage and waterproofing outside the basement. But the more usual moisture problem is caused by airborne dampness inside the basement. It is a summer thing. Warm, humid summer air touches the cool walls and floors of the basement. A film of moisture forms on the cool walls and floor, precisely as such a film forms on a glass with an iced drink in it. Keep that clearly in mind. What makes a basement damp is (1) warm, humid air touching (2) a cool wall.

But cool walls are just what make a sunken living room so nice and cool, in summer. Hot, humid air is just what makes you wish for a cool place! Do we have to take dampness and musty odor, if we want coolness? Well, it all depends on local climate.

In some places—Southern Florida, for example—the summer air is so moist that a film of water forms generally on anything that's cooler than 70°. People sometimes get damp floors, etc., above the ground, simply because the structure of the house has cooled off a little over night. People there don't often want underground space, let alone live in it.

In some places, for example El Paso, Texas, summer air is so dry that you never get condensation. Well—hardly ever. You may get an unusually humid day once in a while and moisture may form. But that does no harm. It is steady dampness, combined with steady heat, that grows the molds and causes the smell. So in El Paso, you get the coolness (and it is most welcome) without any problems attached.

Then again, there are places like, say, Palo Alto, California, where the underground has nothing to offer. The above-ground climate is so nice and mild you don't need any help.

In most of the climates of the U.S. the underground offers real help. You ought to use it. But if you just barge in and dig a hole, you may get a damp one. In most parts of the U.S. an ordinary basement should be engineered. A sunken living room definitely must be engineered.

The engineering revolves around two ideas: (1) You control the temperature of wall and floor. You make them cool, but not so cool that water forms; or (2) you dry the air that gets into your underground room.

First: The deeper you dig, the cooler (in summer) is the earth, down to about 20 feet. Therefore, the more deeply sunken your room, the cooler its walls and floors. So, in the same town, a moderately deep (and, therefore, moderately cool) sunken room may be dry. A deep, very cool one might be damp. But, of course, wall construction also has an effect. The coolness of the earth outside seeps in more readily through a thin wall than through a thicker wall, more readily through an un-insulated wall than through one built of the new fluffy kind of insulating concrete. Main idea: Don't have the inside surface of the wall too cool, and you won't have dampness.

"But that's stupid," you say. "That's killing the goose. If you can't have the walls cool, then why fuss with the underground at all?"

But, the problem is not as sharp as that. You can have cool walls. Only, you can't use all the coolness you could possibly get. For every place in the U.S., your architect can calculate how cool your basement walls should be. It depends on the kind of summer air that place gets. How much can you cool that air down before it starts making wet films? The weather bureau calls this critical temperature the "dew point." They would say, for instance, that typical summer air in St. Louis has a dew point of 70°. This means when that air touches anything that's cooler than 70°, it puts a film of water on that thing. Well, we know what the dew points are for typical summer air in all parts of the country. We know what the ground temperatures are. So your architect can design a wall that will be, on the inside surface, just a little warmer than the dew point of the air. Then it stays dry. That's the trick. And remember: "Just a little warmer" can still be comfortably cool—much cooler than the rooms upstairs.

The second way to keep an underground room dry is to dry the air. This can be done by chemicals, salt-like substances that soak up moisture. But, at present, chemical drying machines are mostly industrial. Residential models have a limited capacity and would work best in basements where the windows are kept closed

For a sweet-smelling sunken living room, you could also dry the air by running it through another type of machine. These machines are actually compressors designed mostly for air-drying and little or no cooling.

"But," you say, "if I have to use complicated machinery, then why bother with sunken rooms? Why not simply air condition the house and let it go at that?"

Answer: Because it takes a big unit, expensive to buy and expensive to run, to air condition a room that's naturally trying to be hot. It takes a small unit, cheap to buy and cheap to run, to air condition an underground room that is trying to be cool anyway. If the sunken room needs air conditioning, it is equally true that air conditioning needs a sunken room.

HOUSE BEAUTIFUL believes this is something to think about long and hard. Surely air conditioning rank with the telephone and the automobile, the serum and the vitamin among the most remarkable advances of the last 100 years. You don't have to think of its effect on opening new parts of the world for white settlers. We, right here, live (in summer) in one the hottest countries on earth. The toll we pay to heat, in energy health, work done, etc., is terrific But people have hung back on air conditioning for the home because of the expense.

Well, you can afford air conditioning—in a sunken, ground-cool room. We predict you'll be surprised when you investigate the possibility.

More Americans use the underground than you would think. Brood the subject up, and you'll find cases right among your friends, and their friends. A businessman has fixed himself up a bedroom-and-bath in his basement. A lady says, half laughing, half complaining—"Mary has the best room in the house. Mary is the maid. Her room is in their basement, and it's true, it's the coolest room in summer, the warmest in winter. Houses in Michigan have "summer kitchens" in the basement. People in Nebraska have been living underground for years.

And so it goes. But, funny thing, it's usually "unofficial." People think they are doing it to use waste space, or to get away from their own too-fussy furnishings upstairs, or to get away from teen-age parties, calls and parties. Or, if they frankly do it to keep cool in summer they think of it as an emergency thing. It sort of doesn't count. Like a southern girl I know. She drags an easy chair down to the basement and spends hot summer afternoons reading by electric light, between the coal bin and the laundry tub. But if you asked her: "Do you think a house should have an underground living room?" she would say, "Horrors, no!"

But some people do it officially—openly. There are now probably a dozen outright underground houses in the country. I mean houses that have their normal, year-round, living quarters underground. The most interesting is one in Youngstown, Ohio. This is because its owners, Mr. and Mrs. Hildemar Johnson, did not build it. They have no axe to grind. Its builder, a prominent engineer, had to leave it and move to a different part of the state and is now planning another such house. The Johnsons, who live there now, were simply house hunting, right after the war. They found a small house that miraculously was empty. They peered in by the window, decided it would barely do, and hunted up the agent. Only then did they find the underground part, twice as large as the top part! They rented it, lived in it for a year, liked it, and bought it. They still like it.

This house is radically underground. It has forced ventilation with air drying, which they run few hours a day in summer). It s no natural light downstairs! ut they say it lives up to all Dr. ple's claims. It's cool in summer, rm in winter. It is quiet both ys: Other people don't bother , and your party noise doesn't her them. The Johnsons lead in he normal life that goes with a her large house in an American n. Mr. Johnson, a graduate of orge Washington University Law ool, is in the automobile busi- s on a substantial scale. Mrs. nson, a graduate of Miami Uni- ity, Oxford, Ohio, is active in League of Women Voters and r civic affairs. They are raising attractive girls. Their Great e, too, seemed happy in his erground home. You know, you may fool people with theories about comfort but you can't fool a dog.

"But still," you say, "those people must be. . . ."

"Of course, everyone thought we were nuts," says Mrs. Johnson. "But now that we've lived here a few years and they have been to parties here, they begin to see the point."

What is the point?

It differs slightly depending on whether you live in an existing house or are building a new one.

If you live in an existing house (in the zones where the ground temperatures are favorable for use), consider enlarging your basement windows to let more light and sun into the basement. If it is light and cheerful, you'll gladly use this buried treasure.

If you live in areas of high summer humidity, then consider installing dehumidification equipment in your basement to cure the dampness and moldy smell. For, in your case, light and sun alone will not be enough. You'll find that for a not-too-staggering sum you can develop a new livable room that will be a godsend in summer.

If you are buying land for a new house, try to buy a piece with a slope, and place your house so that one wall of the basement can be above-grade. Then you'll have a made-to-order situation for creating a room with a stabilized climate. If you live in the flat plains, where no slopes are to be had, consider excavating a hole bigger than your basement is to be, and developing a sunken terrace below grade, similar to the one illustrated on page 93. It will gain you much, at very little extra cost, for excavation at the time of building is not costly—viewed in the light of providing one extra room.

The LOG of the Practical Gardener

Grass

Letting the lawn "make a little extra growth" in the spring always leads to a midsummer weed problem, amply demonstrated this year on my own lawn that got too tall before its first cutting of the season. I was out of town for two weeks and now I'm paying up for failing to treat the grass right.

Bloom

The apple blossoms in Rhode Island were the most abundant I've seen in years. Mother's terrace-shading Greening apple was so spectacular in bloom that I wished it could have been seen by some of those who find it fashionable to scoff at the homey apple as a garden flower.

Mid-century Hybrids

Try to get a look at the fine new American lilies that have been originated in Oregon recently. Look for the Mid-century Hybrids, especially "Enchantment," the first American lily to win an award from the British Lily Society. I saw acres of them last summer in Jan deGraaff's fields near Mt. Hood. Wayside Gardens of Mentor, Ohio, is the retail distributor.

180 members of the Men's Garden Clubs of America traveled to California in April for the National MGCA Convention. They visited the California Spring Garden Show, and then spent three days visiting gardens in the Oakland-San Francisco area. There's no better way to get ideas for your own garden, ideas made for the American way of life instead of Europe or an out-moded life. Next year's convention meets in Detroit.

Show

I'll soon be on my way to the San Mateo (California) Floral Fiesta, one of the best small garden shows in the country. Dates this year are September 8-14. If you attend, plan also to visit the three HOUSE BEAUTIFUL Pace-Setter houses and gardens, located on the corner of Hillsdale Boulevard and Alameda De Las Pulgas in Hillsdale, San Mateo, Calif. If you are near Philadelphia on September 7 or 8, look in at the dahlia and fall flower show of the Pennsylvania Railroad Garden Club at the 30th Street Station.

More wearing

More people than ever wear flowers everyday, but still far too many gardeners don't bother to get this extra enjoyment from their efforts. It's easy and takes only a few minutes to fix the flowers. Look back at your June issue, page 142.

Super roses

Any rose that blooms well in the heat of August is a super-rose. Look at the "all-time top 10" and you'll see why they scored so highly with the All-America judges: Charlotte Armstrong, Forty Niner, Katherine T. Marshall, Mirandy, Nocturne, Peace, Rubaiyat, San Fernando, Taffeta, and Lowell Thomas.

Iris

August is the time to plant iris. Last spring I was fortunate in visiting six famous iris gardens: Cooley in Oregon; Milliken, Mitchell, and Salbach in California; Cassabeer in New York; and Wittman in New Jersey. The six standouts in the medium-price range were Great Lakes (lavender blue), Melanie (orchid pink), Miss California (rose pink), Orange Glow (orange), Red amber (two-tone red), and Sable (rich purple).

FRAGRANCE—IS IT A LOST ART IN GARDENING?

fragrance in your plans? Take the trouble to grow flowers such as mignonette and wallflowers. Add an apple tree or a clematis vine, (or a citrus tree, if you are in a frost-free place). Put the mints, the scented geraniums, the spicy herbs in your garden. Grow these deliciously-scented plants close to paths or terraces where people will feel encouraged to finger the leaves to release the fragrance. For that matter, it's a good idea to keep all fragrant flowers and leaves close to the paths or terraces. Better still, elevate the plants in raised beds to get them nearer nose level.

Floral and leaf scents are not mass-produced, and they often are quite delicate. Don't expect them to perfume a large area. In fact, you should give your fragrant plants some protection from winds and midday sunshine. Winds drive the odors away. Sun-heat burns them up.

JUST a word of caution: Don't over-do perfume gardening. Too much of one odor, or an indiscriminate mixing of odors, obviously is bad. But so is having fragrance every place in the yard. One area needs to be odor-free. Well, not exactly this, since the good earthy smell is inherent in all gardens. And any newly-washed leaf always imports a pleasant after-rain odor not matched elsewhere.

Try a little experiment after the next rain. Look at the garden from your picture window. Then go outdoors and look at it again, this time smelling as you see. You may get a new concept of gardening, experience a new kind of enjoyment.

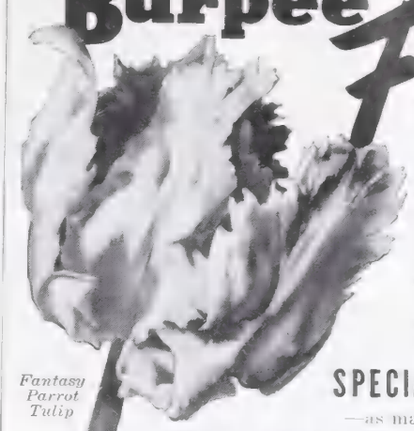
special skill is required to produce and to harvest seeds, so many people who have no knowledge of how to grow good seed, harvest and sell zinnia seed. Know your source. Much of the zinnia seed, especially that sold as "mixed colors" is simply field collections—junk.



3. Don't waste time trying to start zinnias in cold, wet ground. Start the seeds indoors six weeks before it's safe to sow seed outdoors, and your zinnias will bloom a month ahead of schedule.

4. Insure huskiness in the plants. Seedlings must grow continuously—never get checked. They need full sunlight and ample water at all times. Pinching off the growing tips on the main shoots from time to time encourages branching. This avoids the lanky, floppy growth that falls over during summer rains. The huskiest plants are multi-branched and nearly globe-shape in outline—the result of regular pinching.

5. If you must garden in a windy spot, plan to supply some extra support for your zinnias. Plant them close to a wall, for example, or let them "surround" and lean against fence posts and the rails or wire. If you grow zinnias against walls or solid fences, confine your zinnia growing to a few handsome specimens far enough apart to get sufficient air movement to dry the leaves quickly after rains to prevent chance of mildew. (I emphasize this mildew warning, not because the disease is common, but because the combination of stagnant air and muggy weather can lead to trouble.)

Look around at the flower show put on by zinnias from now to frost. Make a note to include zinnias as a must for you next year.

REG U S PAT OFF

Dear David:

Your letter that came today virtually takes us by the hand and leads us through the Wessex country, far from the madding crowd and under many a greenwood tree. How I should have enjoyed a pause with you at "The Crooked Billet" or "The Volunteer Rifleman." The flavor of their names must enhance the hospitality they offer.

My gift to you of Crane's has been returning sheet by sheet, until I feel I had blessed myself instead of you. Its substance makes your long letters easily airborne and its strength is proof against handling. In fact your letters present you as smartly as you would present yourself.

After we have read them, almost memorized them, they go into the family archives. Safe they are, for Crane's, like the paper used by the "posterity" letter-writers, is of the stuff that time touches lightly.

Time deals gently with us and we go our accustomed ways without leaving so much as a ripple of excitement or news. Your letters are bench-marks for us and we thank you again for their excellence and frequency.

Affectionately,
Uncle George

Nothing gives so much pleasure as correspondence with a kindred spirit who looks upon letters as the continuing links in the chain of friendship. To such a person the gift of Crane's is the most natural and appreciated of remembrances and one that blesses you many times in the letters that follow. For paper to give . . . paper to use . . . to enhance the pleasure of writing . . . look for the name and watermark of Crane.

Presenting

the new type tableware for gracious living every day

Patina

Butler's Tray—Your Diamondware service comes in a stunning silver gray or natural hardwood Butler's Tray. Use it as a wall bracket or sideboard ornament to show off your Diamondware. Makes table setting easy!

Silver Grape

As lovely as sterling silver yet costs far less than fine silverplate

Diamondware is the new type "eternal metal" tableware. Beautifully designed, gracefully shaped, perfectly balanced—it reflects your good taste on every occasion. But the amazing thing about Diamondware is this! It never tarnishes! Never needs polishing! There's no need to save Diamondware just for best. Enjoy its beauty every day. It's shining finish resists scratching and wear indefinitely!

Diamondware combines traditional beauty with modern utility! The patterns are really lovely! There's Silver Grape—a delicate, etched, overall floral design definitely in the 17th century French tradition. And Patina—a strikingly simple pattern that's smart and sophisticated. See these lovely patterns—designed by the world-famous Raymond Loewy—at department stores, jewelers, and fine home furnishing stores. Or if your dealer does not as yet carry Diamondware send us his name and we will send you a descriptive booklet on this lovely set.

Diamondware is guaranteed for 100 years! A guarantee bond is included with each set, yet an entire service for six, complete with the handsome Butler's Tray shown above, costs only $29.95. Be the first in your group to recognize the exquisite taste—the extraordinary value of durable, practical, beautiful Diamondware.

YOUNGSTOWN KITCHENS Jet-Tower

World's Largest Makers of Steel Kitchens develops new principle that will change all your ideas about dishwashing. This Jet-Tower principle will bring more practical help into your daily life than came when the vacuum cleaner modernized house cleaning, when electric refrigeration modernized food preservation, and when the clothes washer modernized laundering.

You have probably wished for practical, efficient, automatic dishwashing for years.

Now it's here! The Youngstown Kitchens Automatic Dishwasher . . . ready to take first place among your other modern appliances and bring the greatest help a housewife ever had! It's easy to see why!

Dishwashing is the only household job you still do in the old-fashioned "by-hand" way—two or three times every day.

The Youngstown Kitchens Automatic Dishwasher so completely modernizes dishwashing you'll find it the most useful, most helpful of your labor-saving appliances.

Just 9¾ minutes after you close the lid, your dishes, glassware, and silver are spotlessly clean. And that goes for cooking utensils that don't obviously require special soaking or scouring.

With your Youngstown Dishwasher, you'll find that before you've tidied up after the meal, this new marvel has done the hard, boring work. Imagine! What a wonderful team you and a Youngstown Kitchens Dishwasher will make! You can rest, instead of wrestling with this endless, thankless task, when you have modernized dishwashing.

Let your factory-trained Youngstown dealer show you proof. Let him show you how you can have a Youngstown Kitchens Automatic Dishwasher on easy terms. If building, specify Youngstown—you'll save!

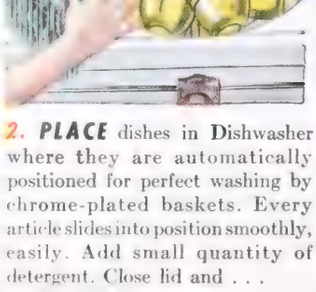
AMAZING JET-TOWER WITH EXCLUSIVE HYDRO-BRUSH ACTION

This revolutionary idea completely modernizes dishwashing. Water is "booster-heated" to ideal washing temperature (regardless of hot-water supply). Then, 64 whirling, swirling jets brush-lush every hollow, groove, corner and contour of very dish, glass, piece of silver and cooking utenil. Hydro-Brush Action from top to bottom. Followed by a piping-hot double rinse. Presto! Dishwasher stops and pops open cover for practically instantaneous flash drying. All in 9¾ minutes (normal water pressure).



Youngstown Kitchens Electric Sink includes Automatic Dishwasher in beautiful 48" Cabinet Sink, with all the work-saving features, utility and beauty that have made Youngstown Kitchens world-famous. Handy, flexible rinse spray. Hi-Bake enamel finishes wipe clean easily. Youngstown Kitchens Food Waste Disposer optional at extra cost.

For better living, for better protection

choose a CONCRETE HOUSE

YOUR FAMILY will enjoy better living and greater protection from destructive elements if you build your new house with concrete. Whatever size or style house you plan, it will be better built with concrete masonry walls, concrete subfloors and a firesafe roof.

It's easy to insulate a concrete house. Such a house provides warm winter comfort, cool summer livability and is dry in all seasons.

A concrete house stands stanch against the attacks of rats, rot, termites, rain, wind, sun and freezing and thawing, destructive forces injurious to all but the most durable construction. Concrete's durability and resistance to these forces keeps your house repair and maintenance bills amazingly low.

A concrete house also provides maximum firesafety. Concrete can't burn! Knowing that your loved ones and prized possessions have this protection promotes great peace of mind.

More than half of all home fires start in the basement. Concrete subfloors prevent such fires from spreading upward. They also add great structural strength and rigidity to your house and will not sag, warp, rot or squeak.

Your concrete subfloor can be finished with the covering of your choice—hardwood, asphalt tile, carpets (top three photos, left), rugs, linoleum, terrazzo or ceramic or rubber tile. Two lower photos, left, show construction details of concrete block joist and precast concrete joist floors, two popular types. Ask your architect or builder about them.

Even with all these advantages a concrete house actually costs less to live in because moderate first cost + low maintenance expense ÷ long years of service = low annual cost.

Investigate all these plus values. Write for a free copy of "Why People Like Concrete Homes," distributed only in the U.S. and Canada.

HOW TO GET YOUR CONCRETE HOUSE . . . and what will it cost?

Phone a local concrete masonry manufacturer for names of architects and builders experienced in concrete house design and construction. They know conditions in your community and can answer your questions about plans and costs. Take any plans or sketches you have obtained from any source to an architect. Have him show you how your home—of any size or style—can be built economically with concrete walls and subfloors and a firesafe roof.

Fine trees give so much—expect so little!

The Davey Tree Man

Modern equipment . . . scientific materials . . . years of experience . . . an educational program that never ends—these are the tools that Davey Men use so skillfully to keep your precious trees vigorous, beautiful—at a reasonable cost to you. Perhaps that's why more people depend on Davey for the protection of their fine trees than on any other organization.

Think of the moments or hours of quiet relaxation that are always waiting under your favorite trees—the silent companionship that brings new calmness and new strength to a sore heart or a troubled mind.

Yes, to those who love them, fine trees give much—a giving that goes on and on through the years as a man and his trees grow graciously old together!

And, for all they give, your trees expect so little in return! Inspection now and then to detect and correct the damage caused by a long summer. Possibly cabling or pruning of branches, feeding of trees to help them withstand the ravages of the coming winter. A small amount of intelligent care—that's all.

But this care, surely, should be the best—the kind that only trained, experienced Davey Men can give. If the Davey Tree Expert Company is not listed in your phone book under "Tree Service," write us today.

It's a two-FORD garage for 250,000 families

Yes, a quarter-million families now own two fine cars—and both of them are Fords!

These families are enjoying the convenience other people dream about. And they've found that two Fords cost little more than one high-priced car.

Fords are thrifty to buy, thrifty to run, and there's less dollar depreciation at "trade-in" time!

Chances are you are closer to being a two-car family than you think. See your Ford Dealer today and "Test Drive" the two '50 Fords shown here. The car you now own may well provide the down payment on both of them.

The '50 Ford Fordor Sedan. A smart, roomy car that's a pleasure to drive. With King-Size Brakes that act 35% easier. With a "sound-conditioned" Lifeguard Body and Sofa-Wide seats. With fine-quality coachwork and "jewel-box" interior styling that make it a "Fashion" standout! And with Ford's famous "Mid Ship" Ride to "float" you over the rough spots.

New Ford "Country Squire" Station Wagon. The "Double-Duty" Dandy of them all! Passenger-car comfort for eight. New "Stowaway" seat and level tailgate give "Flat Deck" cargo space of 38.8 square feet—more level carrying surface than any other station wagon in its field. (Handles half-ton loads with ease.) A business cargo carrier as well as the family's "fun car."

White sidewall tires and wheel trim rings optional at extra cost.

There's a Ford in your future...with a future built in

It's almost a miracle . . . the transformation of shabby old "waste space" into a high spirited playroom like this. And so durable and easy to keep clean! The Micarta ® Plastic Laminate top on the snack bar never stains or mars in ordinary use. And the plastic Kalistron ® upholstery on the bench combines handsome appearance with remarkable resistance to wear.

This "Best Cellar"...costs less than you think!

Craftsman Grade Weldwood Plywood saves you more than 30% on the material cost of beautiful wood-paneled walls.

Your basement can wear a party dress, too . . . at a cost so low it will surprise you. Craftsman Grade Weldwood brings you genuine hardwood paneling at a saving that can mean the difference between having . . . or not having . . . a "gala room" like this. For you can buy these quality panels up to ⅓ less than has been possible for many years.

And make no mistake about it. These are quality panels, available in birch, oak, walnut and Korina . . . surpassed only by the superb Algoma Grade made in our Wisconsin mill.

Craftsman Grade Panels carry the Weldwood warranty. Properly installed, they're guaranteed for the life of your home. And remember this all-important point: your first cost is your last; no periodic expense for painting and decorating.

Many home owners save even more money by doing the work themselves. The big Craftsman panels go in quickly and easily. The folding doors covering the shelves and television nook in the room above are surprisingly simple to install. And the Weldtex* ceiling squares go up in a jiffy. They also enable you to use the recessed lighting . . . strikingly beautiful, yet simple and inexpensive to build.

All these structural details are described in the free folder offered in the coupon. Get the famous Easi-Bild Patterns too . . . see how easy it is to build the snack bar at the left and the two all-purpose tables.

*And . . . an FHA Home Improvement Loan gives you up to three years to finance your remodeling!

See how easy and inexpensive it can be to have a beautiful playroom? Don't lose any more time. Start now getting the figures together. Your local lumber dealer will be glad to help you estimate. The coupon below offers our help, too. Mail it today.

You Can Work Wonders With Wunda Weve

Wunda Weve is easy to vacuum. The pile is woven through the back and double locked for double durability. Yarns are predyed. Wunda Weve wears comparably to quality wool broadloom.

Wunda Weve is prelaundered and preshrunk. Small sizes go into home washers, larger sizes go to laundries at low bulk rates . . . come out bright, fluffy as new.

You'll find Wunda Weve is a special asset in even the most attractive rooms. Its wonderfully decorative texture and glowing colors put it in a class by itself among all other floor coverings.

Wunda Weve is a new kind of carpet, loom woven from long-wearing cotton fibres. Its range of exciting colors, from delicate Ancient Ivory to dashing Cherry Red, makes it easy to have just the decorative effect you want for any room in your home.

The Dining Room of "Four Winds" (shown above) sparkles with the dramatic simplicity of soft white walls, antique white sideboard, Turquoise upholstery, polished mahogany and gleaming, antique silver, with a Cherry Red Wunda Weve as the dominant and exciting accent. Note the flowing, random pattern of highlights and shadows formed by Wunda Weve's deep, cut pile.

You'll find Wunda Weve in leading rug departments everywhere. Select yours soon in just the color you desire, round or oval, standard room or scatter rug sizes. (If your rooms are extra-large or oddly proportioned, you can order a Wunda Weve to fit.)

CHARCOAL STEAKS without a charcoal fire

Several years ago a fellow we know got to wondering if it were possible to season a piece of meat to give it exactly that same delicious smoke flavor it gets when cooked over a charcoal fire. He started to experiment. Today he has it! CHARCOSALT is as simple to cook with as salt and pepper and you can prepare, right in your own kitchen, the most aromatic charcoal steaks and meats without investing one dime in fancy stoves and broilers. Treat your meat with CHARCOSALT in ten seconds time and cook in any frying pan or oven broiler. It's amazing but it's true. Send $1.00 and we'll send you enough CHARCOSALT for over 100 servings. People Come from Miles Around to See These Beautiful

... now captured by the color camera in this magnificent volume

Carved staircase and main hallway, completely paneled in pine, are the climax of Carter's Grove's interiors, called the finest in America.

A house where Washington really slept, Sheldon's Tavern in Litchfield, Conn. Washington's bedroom was upstairs, right of center. The four-poster bed in which he slept still is in use.

NOW, without leaving your living room, you can feast your eyes on the beautiful old Early American Homes which people travel hundreds of miles to see. Their stately beauty has been captured by the color camera for "A TREASURY OF EARLY AMERICAN HOMES," by Richard Pratt, described in The New York Times as "a breathtakingly beautiful book."

In these large 10" x 13" pages 250 rich full-color photographs you will see mellow old Bucks County farmhouses basking in the afternoon sunlight. You will explore houses that knew Washington, Jefferson, Franklin, Patrick Henry—perfect architectural types of old New Orleans, Massachusetts, Natchez, New England, California—old Charleston houses with walls of tinted stucco and age-pink brick, and gardens glimpsed through gateways.

FAMOUS HOUSES THAT INSPIRE MANY IDEAS

Here, revealed in all their splendor, are the interiors and exteriors that have provided a wealth of inspiration to architects, designers, decorators. Lovely places like Monticello, Sheldon's Tavern, Carter's Grove, Andalusia, Hammond-Harwood House, Pierce Nichols House, Gunston Hall, Brandon, Westover.

EXAMINE IT FREE

Anyone who has ever visited these architectural gems—or would like to but can't—will treasure this book. Invaluable for decorators, architects, students, artists, designers, and home-owners looking for ideas. A perfect gift for people who seem to "have everything." Many people use it as a "travel guide" for visits to some of the most beautiful spots in the U. S.

No need to send any remittance now, unless you wish to. Merely mail the coupon and we will send you this large volume to examine free. Then, if you wish, you may return it within 10 days and owe nothing. Otherwise you may keep it on the terms mentioned in the coupon. The First Edition was sold out 10 days after publication; but the book is now back in stock and can be sent promptly to those who mail the coupon at once. McGraw-Hill Book Co., Dept. HB-9, 327 West 41st St., New York 18 N. Y.

Drawing room where Benjamin Franklin came to tea. House today is owned by city of Philadelphia, beautifully furnished with priceless Colonial pieces, preserving perfectly the atmosphere of Franklin's day.

How to leave home and like it

by Louisa M. Comstock

Spice on any Caribbean Cruise is the Netherlands West Indies island of Curaçao. Nothing you have seen elsewhere in the Caribbean prepares you for it. Your cruise ship approaches the usual harbor mouth, passes the usual fortifications. But then, instead of carrying you merely up to the port city of Willemstad, it takes you right on through it as on a liquid main street, between rows of narrow gables, scalloped, scrolled, and variously colored, and as Dutch as the Zuyder Zee. It's a pretty remarkable experience, especially when you go sailing literally into town on any such impressively sized ships as Grace Line's "Santa Paula" or "Santa Rosa."

Budget well your time in Curaçao, also your money and your customs allowance. Even a few hours ashore will reveal a unique combination of peoples, languages, customs. And since Curaçao is an almost free port, it affords some of the area's more exciting shopping. The usual shore trips give you a taste of both. But you will be tempted also to take the 35-minute flight over to Aruba, whose Palm Beach is considered something special in high swim-and-suntan circles, or to dawdle on the Hotel Americano's cocktail terrace watching the Queen Emma bridge float aside to admit other ships. Or you may be tempted to overstay your time on the dining terrace of the new Peter Stuyvesant Hotel, Curaçao's first in the Caribbean linger-in-luxury tradition, gloating over the dazzling blue of sky and water. And it will always be difficult to leave without once more dashing back to Heerenstraat for one more consideration of that Delft Blue plate, the fine German camera, that exquisite Madeira linen, that French perfume!

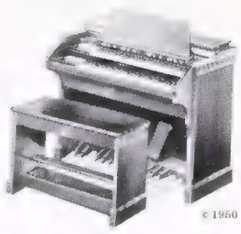
To the girl who never finished her music lessons

Remember those first music lessons—the thrill of them? Your teacher said you showed promise. But somehow you never finished those music lessons—and the years went by. After you were married and the children came, you seldom found time even to think about your music. Sometimes, though, you heard the organ at church, or at a friend's house, and you had an urge to play again. Well, why not now? The children are raised. The years ahead are all yours. Don't you owe the girl who never finished her music lessons something special? A Hammond Organ, for example!

For just $1285* you can own a Hammond Organ. Budget terms? Of course

You needn't know music. Thousands without any musical training have learned to play simple pieces on the Hammond Organ in less than a month.

Large or small house, you'll find a Hammond Organ model to fit it. Simply plug into an electric outlet and the Hammond Organ is ready to play.



Why wait? See and hear the Hammond Organ—the world's most widely used organ in homes and churches—at your dealer now. And mail coupon for complete information.

The real present and the unreal past

I know only two kinds of people: those who live in the future, "when things are going to be better," and those who live in the past, "the good old past when things were ever so much better." Have you met many people of whom you could say that they live in the present?

Very soon the new concert and opera season will begin. We shall receive our usual complement of conventional and a modicum of unconventional concerts. No matter what the coming season will turn out to be, no matter what new pianists, violinists, singers, and other new talent may come forth to ravish the public ear, we shall have with us those people who assert, without admitting contradiction, that things in the world of music used to be better than they are now, that the stars of our day do not compare with the stars of past days, and that this particular season is one of flat mediocrity. The older people, especially, will tell us, with that sweet condes sion that those who have live long time arrogate unto themsel that singers used to have far n beautiful voices than those we hear at present. Indeed, there no good voices left, my dear; in time, I heard Caruso and Semb and Fremstad and Schuma Heink. And whom have you today compared to them? So t will assert, and their discourse be summarized under the gen heading of "The Golden Age." sigh will follow it.

There is something in what t say. There undoubtedly is. We l nobody like Caruso today, tho there are two tenors, each of wh claims that he is the second ruso. (Neither of them is—b long shot!) We have nobody Feodor Chaliapin. I have rece listened to a great many old ords, among them the record of Chaliapin as Boris. To liste that performance is a unique perience; there is a sureness a

I have nothing against admiring the past. Indeed, I do it myself—and too much of it. Yet, one needs to season one's admiration for past greatness with a more reasonable appreciation of the present. We cannot be asked to achieve a retrospective view of the present and, therefore, we are likely either to overvalue it or undervalue it. In musical performance we are more likely to undervalue present artists simply because they are present and the distance of time has not as yet lent them enchantment. But in all fairness we must appraise past artists honestly. The fact is that the singers of the so-called Golden Age were not always and not invariably the paragons that we now make them out to be. Misguided by our sentimental hankering after "the good old days," the ear is tricked. I have heard many recordings of the stars of the Golden Age which are something less than perfect. To be blunt: The recordings are downright bad. I do not speak, of course, of technical shortcomings in the record. I speak of the performance, of the way the song is sung. More often than occasionally, these performances are surpassed in artistry, in musicianship, in fidelity to the composer's wishes, in understanding of the contents of the music, by singers of today whose voices may not compare either in beauty or in bulk with the voices of the past. Such is the evidence, the only trustworthy evidence. We cannot believe legend or hearsay. We can believe what we hear. True enough, a record (particularly an old one) cannot capture the whole fascination of a singer's personality. But a singer must stand or fall by the music he produces. That part of him is on the old record as a musical document.

Even the contemporary accounts of competent judges may disillusion us. Caruso, said a contemporary critic, was a very indifferent actor: One could not expect him to give an illusion of the character he was impersonating. Perhaps the critic was prejudiced; but it makes one wonder. As a lover of Verdi's music, I have made it my business to find out all I could about the première of Verdi's last opera, Falstaff, a performance which Verdi himself directed and which has gone down in the annals of musical history as a matchless and definitive performance. By chance, I came across a letter written by Giulio Ricordi, Verdi's editor and publisher, a man who knew a great deal about music and who is to be considered a competent witness. He said that all the singers—including the famous Maurel—were "almost mediocrities" and that they were "very bad in their first interpretation." It was only the arduous work of the old Verdi himself, who taught the singers the sense of the words, who taught them how to phrase the music and showed them how to behave themselves on the stage, which "finally succeeded in obtaining a persuasive interpretation." How do you reconcile such a statement with the worship of the old singers?

It is not my purpose to belittle the past. I devoutly wish that we had a few of the voices of the Golden Age with us today. I think an interest in past glory is instructive, provided that we mix with it a little critical salt, provided particularly that we learn to live in the present and appreciate for its worth the good music-making that is to be heard in our day. A great deal of such music-making can be heard. If it is true that the singers of our age do not have the golden voices of a past age (and there is much to be said on both sides of that question), it is also true that we are living in our own spec Golden Age. To be specific: chestral playing has achieved a gree of perfection unknown in last century or even in the beg ning of this century. The perfo ance of Falstaff that Toscanini g last season was, I am sure, a gre er performance than the premi of the opera, regardless of singers. All in all, the playing our major orchestras is superb. are quite likely to take it for gra ed because, as I say, no roma distance separates us from it. Wh you hear Beethoven's Pasto Symphony performed by the B ton Symphony or the Philadelp or the New York Philharmonic, for that matter by one of the g smaller orchestras, you are hear it performed with a rectitude t Beethoven never dreamed of which would have caused ma and astonishment as late as thi years ago. What do we do? clap politely and go our ways.

We hear stories of "the tit of the keyboard." We are t about the playing of a Liszt Rosenthal, a Busoni, a Godows Do you believe that they pla better than a Horowitz, a Rub stein, a Moiseivitch? I do Young piano students of consi able talent will tell you—so what ruefully—that the art made such progress as to al room for only the very supe talent, a condition which did exist in former days. As to the lin, I believe that Heifetz can practically everything that Pa nini did, and I am certain that plays with greater artistry.

It all amounts to this: We n not let sentiment of the past us into a disparagement of present. We must not altoget accept all the stories of past gr ness. These stories have a way becoming more and more ros and less and less exact. The in art is important to us: No a can do without it and all art n lean on it. It is entertaining stimulating company. But let it keep us from the enjoyment of present! This is a truth whic believe to be applicable to o fields of living and of enjoym than of music alone.

The American Style

is a product of the way of life peculiar to the United States in the Twentieth Century. To understand this new style you must look beyond its appearance and see how our rising living standards gave it birth

How American is your way of living?

Your house, its decoration and furnishings are a character reading of you. So is your garden and the food you serve. We are all used to reading some of the social signs. For instance, mink coats and Cadillacs are accepted social symbols of financial success. Most people are well aware of the impression made on others by clothes, speech, manners and behavior. But few, in comparison, realize that the same role is played by homes. If your appearance, manner, and voice are important in giving an idea of what you really are, how much more important is that large, immutable thing—your home!

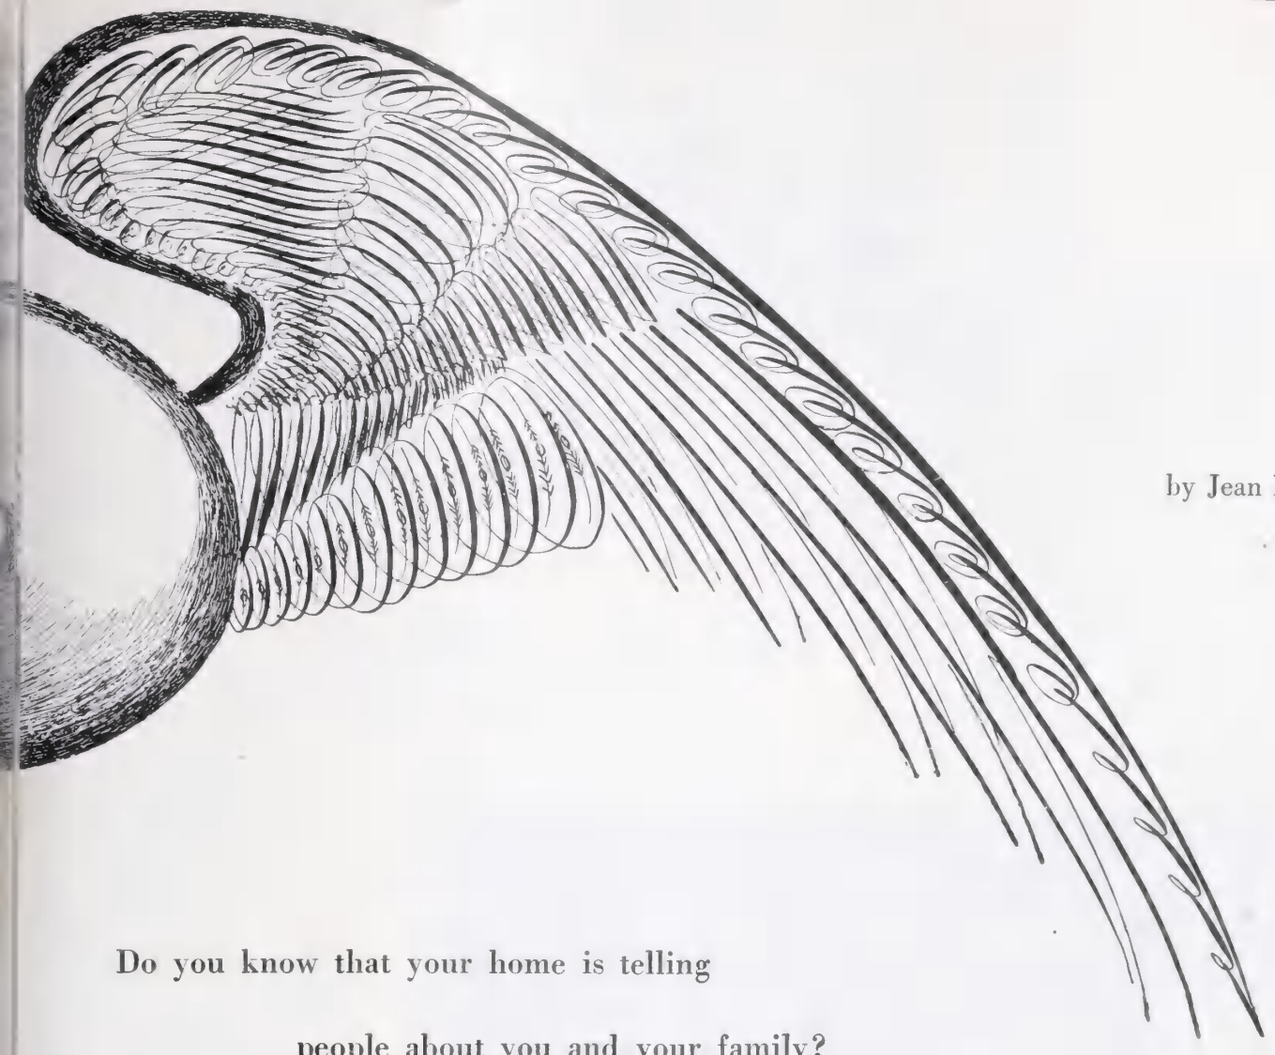
What is your house saying about you? Do your furnishings and garden spread tales about your attitudes toward life? Do your party menus reveal things you'd rather weren't known—such as the sad fact that you have a sense of social insecurity?

Each of these questions leads in turn to further ones.

Does your house belong to the Twentieth Century? Has it taken advantage of all the labor-saving devices, the modern equipment, the building techniques and materials, and the kind of planning which have been developed in the last fifty years?

Is your house American? Does it permit you to live the efficient, easy, drudgery-free life that our times and our American inventive genius have made possible?

Does your home look like what it is, or is it masquerading as an Andalusian stable, a Cotswold cottage, or a Spanish fort?



Is your house related to its geography and to its times? Could you look out the window and expect to see an ox cart or a coach and four, instead of an automobile?

Does it form a suitable background for you, your manners, your ambitions, and values? Or does it make you look slightly ridiculous, as if you didn't quite belong, as though you had strayed onto a stage set?

Does your house express the serenity and self-assurance of a person living in a democratic society where Everybody is Somebody? Does it show that you are sure of yourself as a person of character and importance, or does it show you are worried because you're not somebody else?

Does your home express the qualities you would like to embody in your living such as convenience, graciousness and simplicity?

And your garden—what about it? For the garden is really only an extension of you, your house, and its furnishings? Are they all of one piece?

by Jean Murray Bangs

Do you know that your home is telling people about you and your family? Is it revealing things you'd rather weren't known?

Is the garden the final thing which completes one picture? Or is it something alien, apart from the others? Is it an extension of the house into the out-of-doors, yet at the same time something which folds the house into its arms, sheltering it? Or is it neither one of these?

Is the food you serve a hang-over from your grandmother's way of life—complicated, fussy, too hard to prepare?

Are your menus laborious to execute, unimaginative, humdrum? Is eating at your house a pleasure or a necessity? Does your cookery take advantage of our rich, varied, almost international food supply?

Most important of all, does your house help your activities, or hinder them?

Whether you face it or not, the character of your house sets the pattern of your life, decides how you will spend your time. Your house is the greatest force in your environment. If it is at variance with your aims, your house will constantly impose its will on you. But if it parallels your aims and intended way of life, you will find it helping you. This is why the owner-built house is the most preferred way of living in the U. S.

In a democratic society such as ours, our houses do more than mold our way of living—they reflect our ideals about the good life, because we own our houses, can build them as we wish. We need not have their form determined by what someone else decides for us—unless we are renters. (That is why home ownership has always been the American Ideal.)

Your way of living may not be American because you have been misled to believe that you and your family could live successfully in something designed for some other way of life: for life in an English village 300 years ago, or for the poverty-restricted existence of a Spanish peasant, or for the pioneering life of a New England settler, who had to eke out a hard living in a rugged climate without the facilities which we now have to control climate and ease our path.

But perhaps just the opposite is true. Perhaps you haven't been misled at all, but are really protesting against our times. Perhaps the house of your choice is saying that you really don't like being an American at all, that you would rather have been something else—perhaps the mistress of a French king, or a British nobleman.

Now, of course, there is no law against your feeling that way if you wish, for this is America. (Continued on page 161)

WHAT IS A truly AMERICAN HOUSE?

A house in which all the social and technical progress of the Twentieth-Century United States is put to work to serve the basic ideals of American life. This means many things about appearance and performance

by Jean Murray Bangs

It provides a restful background for your activity

Can you curl up by the fire to read a book without having to shift the furniture or rearrange the lighting? The truly American house is primarily designed to meet the needs of the people who live in it. We Americans believe that nothing is too good for our own families. An eloquent example is this room designed for Weston Havens by Harwell Harris.

TWO PHOTOGRAPHS BY HANK HOAG

It provides for all the family, both at work and at play

Both children and adults can lead a rich, free, and full life in a home like that of Architect Henry L. Eggers with its special room for family projects. Father and boys work together with wood and clay at work bench (right) while Mrs. Eggers works at her loom. South wall (above) is entirely of glass.

The truly American house is a relatively new thing, never occurring before anywhere in the world. It has undergone a ng period of development to fit it to our needs. Its design has en created by our ideas about the importance of every person. As a result, it provides for the activities of the family as they ave never been provided for before. It has made it possible for ildren and adults, young and old, to do what they wish. It has en conceived so that everyone living in the house can achieve rich, free, and full life, both at work and at play. Both plan and quipment have been evolved so that the house operates easily, nveniently, efficiently, and without getting in our way.

Women have put their best thought into it; architects, their t; builders, their skill. The whole power of American industry as been mobilized to produce its equipment. As a result, the merican house is the envy of people all over the world.

The American house is not the result of long-range planning y some central authority, but it is the product of the people, ade by ourselves, for ourselves. In large part, it is the creation our desire for social equality.

For instance, nothing could be more common than the free-anding house, with picture window and side porch, in the middle its own garden. But nothing is more unique, nor more charac-ristically American. This house is seen from one end of the coun-y to the other. It is not the social sym- (Continued on next page)

Its rooms have a close relationship to the terrace and garden

American houses tend to open up to the outdoors, to provide for close communication with nature, both summer and winter. From the living room of the Eggers house you can look over a low partition (lower right) through dining room to terrace (above, right) planted to look well the year round.

The truly American house looks like nothing but itself

The forms of American houses depend upon practical individual requirements, but they all tend to look like homes. They present a pleasant, hospitable, and trusting front, with neither the ostentation of a palace nor the forbidding look of a fort.

It provides for relaxation and fun outdoors as well as indoors

The American house is equipped for the kind of life the family really wants to lead, and shows our love of independence and of the outdoors. See what abundant facilities for outdoor living are offered in this sheltered terrace with a badminton court.

bol of one social class or one income group, but the house of everyone. It shows our love of independence and of the out-of-doors. But, more than this, it tells of social equality. How American to have one set of standards for everyone!

In the early days in America, our ideals about social equality caused us to demand that every house should have at least one room set apart to entertain company. The pride and self-respect of our early people demanded that their houses do something more than merely provide for the biological needs of the family.

But social equality has come to be taken for granted. And a new feeling has grown—that nothing is too good for the family itself. So the needs of the children and the family began to take precedence over everything else, and another change in the house began. The parlor began to be taken over for family use. Since 1900, it has been assuming the characteristics of a common living room. In the larger houses it has tended to absorb hall and formal dining room to make way for the space-consuming activities of family life with children and adolescents.

This basic feeling of self-respect is still changing the form of the American house. It is breaking down the distinction in quality between the public and the private rooms. In the newer houses all parts of the house are becoming equally well-planned and attractive. There are no "lame duck" rooms. There is no discrimination in price or quality between what goes into different rooms. Kitchen equipment often represents a greater investment in both thought and money than the furniture of the living room.

How characteristically American this is can only be realized if we stop to compare it with the difference in elegance and comfort between the state apartments and the private quarters in a European palace. Or consider the difference between our kitchens and the English sculleries. What a contrast in convenience, light, and labor-saving devices, and in general cheerfulness.

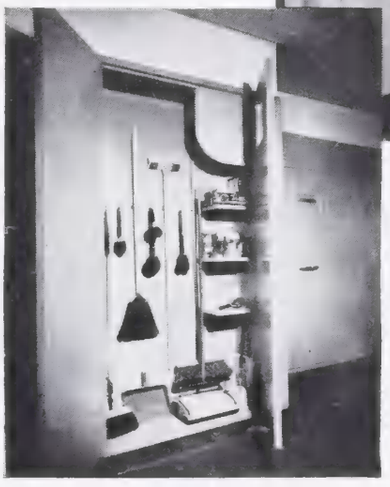
Naturally, such changing ideas about how a house should behave were bound to affect its form. So, ever since the houses designed by H. H. Richardson, in the decades just after the Civil War, and the early houses of McKim, Mead & White, the American house has tended to look more and more like nothing else but itself. In other words, the truly American house is untraditional in design and not a copy of something else.



This is simple to explain. The attempt to adapt old forms to new uses inevitably results in new forms. This is the process which has been going on in connection with the American house, in its architecture as well as its furnishings, its gardens, and even in the foods served within the house. And the process of change is speeding up, as we get farther away from old prototypes, and as our way of living is crystallized by our economy and technology.

But if you look for a definite style form in the houses which we have come to recognize as American, you will be disappointed. These houses are not frozen forms, but records of the effort of the American people to achieve houses to fit their own needs. The forms of these houses depend on the practical requirements of the situation, on the economic conditions under which they were built, and on the creative abilities of the men who designed them. However, there are certain qualities which all these houses tend to have in common, by which they can be recognized. They look like homes. They present a pleasant, hospitable, and trusting front, with neither the ostentatious qualities of a palace nor the forbiddingness of a fort. They do not display the first floor of windowless masonry of an Italian palace nor the barred windows of a Spanish house. They do not even surround themselves with a high board fence. When they feel the need for privacy, they manage to secure it subtly, without being too obvious about it, doing it either by means of large (Continued on page 157)

It operates easily and efficiently without making too great demands

All parts of the newer American houses are equally attractive and well-planned. Much thought and money are spent to produce efficient service areas such as the engineered storage facilities above, for cooking utensils, table accessories, cleaning gear.

PHOTOGRAPH BY ROGER STURTEVANT

All the photographs on these four pages show the work of two architects: Henry L. Eggers and Harwell Hamilton Harris. Equally telling examples, however, may be found in the work of scores of other American architects.

Quality is not spared on private rooms

The truly American house has no "lame duck" rooms to be hastily screened from visitors' eyes. There is no distinction in price and quality between public and private rooms. This bedroom boasts as much light and as glorious a view as the rest of the house, as well as being thoughtfully equipped for desk work and reading.

Can you tell which of these objects is- Modern or Traditional?

The American Style has a straightforward, modern look which is often indistinguishable from that of traditional designs of the purer, simpler type

If two designers tackle the same problem with the same materials and the same spirit, their products are bound to look very much alike, even though they were born a couple of hundred years apart.

Simplicity, fitness to purpose, honest handling of materials, and independence of man-made rules are the ideals of modern design. But they're not exclusively modern as you can see by noting the origins of the products on this and the next three pages. These characteristics have been an essential part of our native design tradition since the days of the early colonial craftsmen. It is this spirit, rather than details of shape or ornamentation, that marks the American Style.

Simplicity of line is an old tradition in American pewter and silver. The old way. Americans give short shrift to elegance if its upkeep demands time and labor. We wouldn't dream of having curtains with ruffles which need grooming with a fluting iron. You've seen the color photograph of this setting on the front cover. Below is the complete story on preparing the luncheon.

"Darling, look at these glorious shells that I found at Oliver's today." I am lugging in beautiful giant clam shells that are found on the coral reefs in the South Pacific.

"Yes, dear, they are terrific. But what in the world are you going to do with them and, what is more to the point, where are you going to put them?" Bob answers. I realize suddenly that the poor darling probably shudders every time I bring home a box of dishes or containers of something or other. For I am always looking for new ways to dish up a carrot with glamour.

"Just think, dear, what your lobster bisque will look like in these clam shells," say I, with the enthusiasm of a wife who has just bought something she didn't need. (Editor's Note: You can see for yourself what Mrs. Stanton achieved by turning back to the front cover.)

"Golly, that would be something. You're so right."

Of course, not being able to wait too long to show them off, I say, "How about this next Sunday? You can play golf in the morning. We'll lunch on the terrace. The Browns have E.V.s and—"

"Wait a minute. What in the world are E.V.s?", Bob interrupts.

"Oh darling, you know—Eastern Visitors. I'll ask another couple, so you can have a golf foursome at 10:30 and I will ask the gals to come over early to enjoy the sun on the terrace." (I am trying to sell this production.) "And we can play Canasta in the afternoon after lunch."

Bob agrees with the mumbled comment, "How lost is my week end," for he loves his free Sundays. But I know that once he is into it, he will love every minute. Thank goodness (Continued on page 139)

Presenting House Beautiful's Third Pace-Setter House for 1950

A conventionally designed and furnished house which still exemplifies the biggest pace-setting ideas of the year: How to have Climate Control and Privacy on a city lot

HOUSE BEAUTIFUL'S 3 Pace-Setter houses for 1950 are on exhibition until September 27. Read how to reach them on page 147

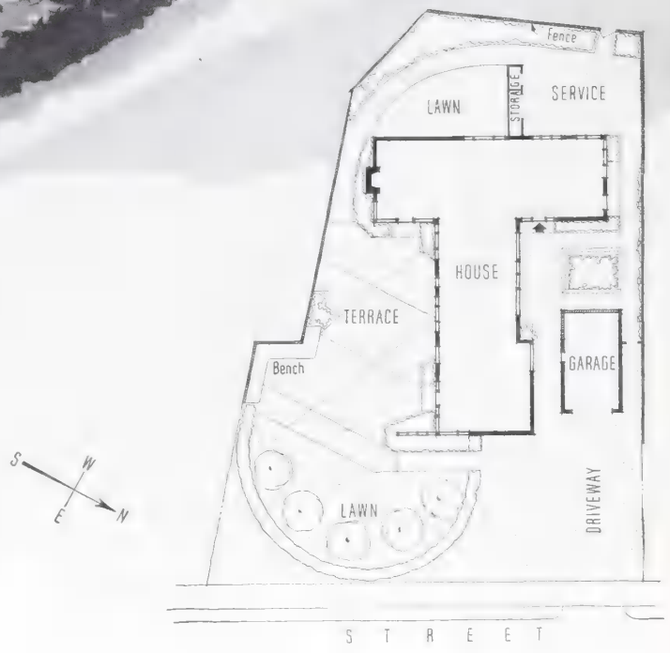
A "CAUTIOUS" PACE-SETTER

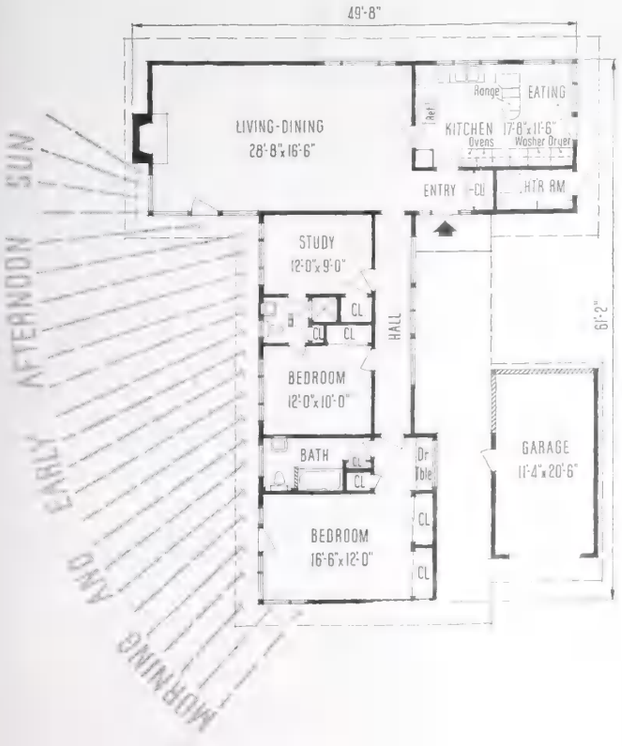
by Marion Gough

This house may look so familiar that you are asking "Why does HOUSE BEAUTIFUL call this a Pace-Setter?" Our answer is that this Pace-Setter is supposed to look familiar. We publish it especially for those who have told us that they prefer the new and the different in smaller, less startling doses than our previous Pace-Setters have offered. So, while this ready-built house contains some of the most desirable innovations of up-to-date living, it still makes no sudden break with the dear old familiar. It fits the new into a conventional frame. You won't approve if you want progress to be quick and uncompromising. But for those who like change to be tempered with tradition, HOUSE BEAUTIFUL'S Third Pace-Setter House for 1950 is a comfortable solution.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARK

You enter this house through covered passage between house and garage, pass alongside a little paved court to reach front door. Because of windy, northwest exposure, windows on this side are small, few, and high.





From the front door, looking toward the street, you can see how wide eaves give you protection against all weather. Note that rear wall of the garage is of vertical louvers.

DRAWING BY GEORGE COOPER RUDOLPH

PLANS BY SIGMAN-WARD

If you want the maximum livability from an ordinary suburban lot, you can learn a lot from this house. Special problem here was to make the most of a "marginal" local climate. But universal problems of privacy, outlook, and circulation are also neatly solved by placement of house.

This plot plan is designed to improve its local climate. To be comfortable out-of-doors in this part of California means being in the sun and out of the wind. See how this was accomplished on an east front lot. Result: Outdoor living area is exposed to sun, protected from chilly west winds.

Entire southern half of house and lot is traffic-free, thanks to placing of entrance, garage, and service areas along north. This also gives major rooms privacy from street, maximum exposure to morning and early afternoon sun, and in addition a pleasant view across their own land.

Evolutionary is the word for the way this new house retains a quality of familiarity. This reassures traditionalists that contemporary practices like Climate Control and Privacy planning don't presuppose a different-looking house

Dark, glossy woods, tooled leather, and fabrics which look more formal than informal give the living room an 18th-century atmosphere. (Actually, sofa cover is durable 20th-century nylon frieze.) Lovers of traditional could live here comfortably, enjoying its modernisms but under no compulsion to accept any "advanced" styles.

Fortunately for the cautious who don't care to hurr into a new era, the most revolutionary features of pre ent-day architecture are the easiest to take—sun-regula ing overhangs, broad windows, and greater provision f outdoor living, with greater privacy. It is a rare ready-built house which is as painstakingly oriented as this. Rooms get the maximum benefits from sun, breeze, and shade—a kind of planning which was once hard to find even in custom-designed houses. One definite modernism of this traditional living room is its close relationship with the outdoors, visually a part of the room.

Privacy from the neighbors has been so plotted into the plan that this house has an air of countrified isolation, although it's on a typical suburban lot, 75′ x 120′. Pleasing near vista from the dining end of the living room is actually a trellised tool shed. The small-scale dining furniture makes a permanent game table set-up between meals.

So naturally do elements of past and present merge here that traditionalists would call this room traditional. Ruffled organdy is time-honored, but such a broad window is a modernism so frequently seen that you never question its newness. Chintz is an old idea, but it's a fresh slant to match its pattern in wallpaper and make a room look larger.

PACE SETTER

How many houses do you know where a bedroom can have floor-to-ceiling window wall, open out onto a green-planted terrace, and still be inviolate to the neighbors' eyes? The idea may sound revolutionary, but the execution doesn't need to be. Careful engineering of terrace fence placement is part of this privacy trick. If you're a traditionalist, see how familiarly this garden-facing master bedroom takes to 18th-century mahogany.

AQUATINTS, COURTESY RAYMOND & RAYMOND

Even traditionalists, without thinking twice about it, want a general lack of furbelows and fussiness in furnishings and architecture. But that's modern! See it here in the restrained upholstered chair, the simple ceiling molding, and in the very slightly curved valance.

This year's 3 Pace-Setting kitchens

There have been better kitchens—but not at this price. What's most interesting about them is:

- they are all different—yet
- they use similar equipment
- they are all in $25,000 houses
- they all have the new unit range that lets you really custom-design the whole kitchen

PACE SETTER

A ranch-house kitchen

The kitchens on these six pages make NEWS in 1950. They are not, as you might think, built to order for private owners with unlimited budgets and individual kitchen-planning advice. Instead, they are part of the three $25,000 Pace-Setter builders' houses, published in HOUSE BEAUTIFUL in June (Contemporary), July (Ranch), and in this issue (Traditional). See three different floor plans on page 103.

← The kitchen on the opposite page is small, only 9′9″ x 13′2″. But its remarkable completeness would probably not have been possible if it weren't for its revolutionary electric range. This comes in separate units. The idea is to use as many four-burner tops, ovens, and storage drawers as space and need demand, in whatever combination is most appropriate. Since no two kitchens, families, or sets of cooking habits are alike, this flexibility of choice and arrangement means you can have what you want, exactly where you want it, to cater to personal convenience.

by Charlotte Conway

A contemporary kitchen

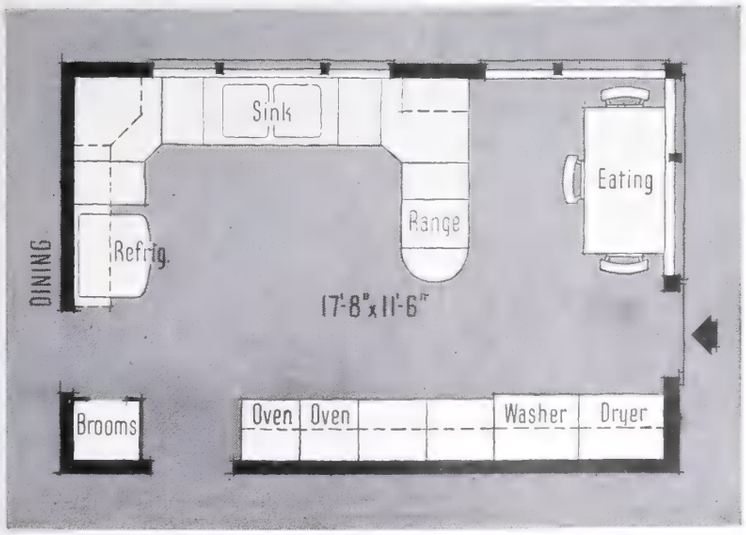
When you can get a complete kitchen, laundry, and a place to eat into a space only about 12′ square, it's a real achievement. Here both parts of the unit range are located on one wall, but separated from each other by a work counter. A hooded ventilator and grille to control cooking steam, odors, and grease, are built into the wall cabinets above. Washer and dryer have their own corner, out of the way of the kitchen proper, but an easily accessible part of it.

In all three kitchens shown on these pages, great care has been taken in selecting materials for counters and floors. Floors are durable, resilient, and comfortable on the feet. Moreover, they are resistant to grease, acids, alkalies, and easy to keep clean. Counters resist ordinary kitchen stains and heat, stand hard knocks without denting or cracking, and are quiet in use. A damp cloth wipes them clean. See the traditional kitchen on the next page.

COLOR PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER

Traditionalists want a colorful and gay kitchen

The part of this kitchen where most of the food preparation goes on is U-shaped, a pattern economical of time and steps. Work progresses from refrigerator to sink to range top in logical sequence. Range top here is located in peninsula separating kitchen proper from breakfast area. You can cook from either side of the peninsula, pass hot food quickly to table.



Rounded shelves at the end of the peninsula prevent bumps and bruises, provide a convenient place for toaster and other small electric appliances. The twin ovens are only a few steps away. (See plan directly opposite and photograph on page 105.) Big windows and plenty of them make this a cheerful spot. Pages 98 through 99 show you the rest of this 1950 Pace-Setting "traditional" house.

PACE SETTER

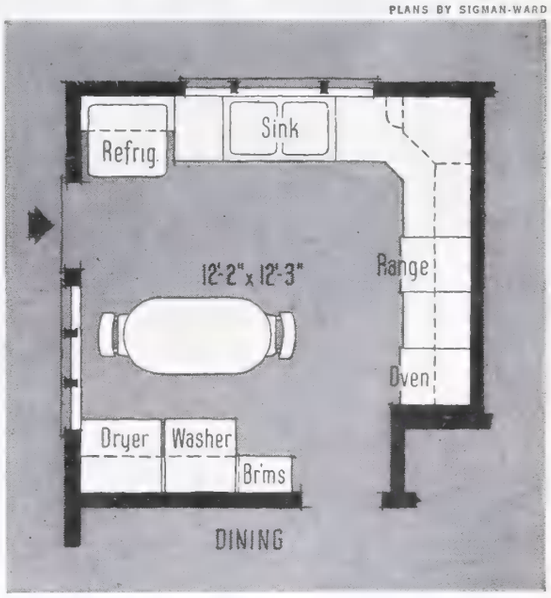
Up to now, in most areas of the United States, it has been builders' practice to equip a ready-built house with a range, a refrigerator, a sink, and a storage cabinet or two—and call it a kitchen. But these three Pace-Setting kitchens of 1950 are setting new standards for ready-made houses. They are revolutionary because they actually offer complete kitchens as they are wanted today, planned according to the best standards of efficiency, time- and labor-saving. They include equipment which is the newest and best for their size and shape. They incorporate floor and work-surface materials requiring the least maintenance effort and offering the greatest durability. They are properly ventilated to remove smoke, grease, odors. And besides all this, they are colorful and cheerful, with a real decorative quality which is related to the other rooms of the house in which they are built. They prove that, even when you buy a ready-built house, you can have a complete, made-to-measure, workable kitchen if you know what to look for and insist upon having it. After all, it's the heart of the house!



The floor plan of the kitchen shown on the opposite page shows the relation of the U-shape cooking area to the breakfast corner, the two ovens, and the laundry equipment. Here you have clear traffic lanes in the kitchen and to other parts of the house—plus good ventilation.

The kitchen shown on page 100 looks like this in floor plan. It, too, is U-shaped, so there are a minimum of steps from refrigerator to range to sink. Because it is small, washer and dryer are in adjoining garage.

PLANS BY SIGMAN-WARD

The L-shaped arrangement, shown here and in photographs on page 101, permits nice separation of the different functions usually taking place in a kitchen. Cooking, laundering, and eating do not interfere with each other, and can go on simultaneously if necessary.

By having range top and ovens separated, you can have as much or as little work space as you like between them—an advantage you get only with unit ranges. Moreover, your oven is at eye level, so there's no stooping and bending and peeking. Note ventilator hood and grille over range top.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER

So many chores center at the sink, that two bowls are practically a necessity. Here one is standard depth, the other deeper (see detail at left) for rinsing dishes, hand-washing delicate fabrics, or cleaning vegetables. The sliding drainboard and swinging faucet serve both bowls.

PACE SETTER

Seasonings, spices, and the like belong where they are within easy reach, preferably at the mixing center. A cabinet unit with pull-down top serves the purpose excellently, without interfering with the full use of the work counter underneath.

Wasted space is not to be tolerated in any kitchen, but it is really criminal where the kitchen is small. Here the usually inaccessible corner is put to work by means of rotating shelves. Load them with pots or canned goods. They spin into reach at the touch of a finger.

Many housewives insist upon two ovens, so they can bake and roast at the same time. With the new unit ranges, you can have the two as easily as one. At eye level, these two are near range yet separated from it (plan, page 103). They share adjoining work counters with washer and dryer. Supplies are in cabinets above.

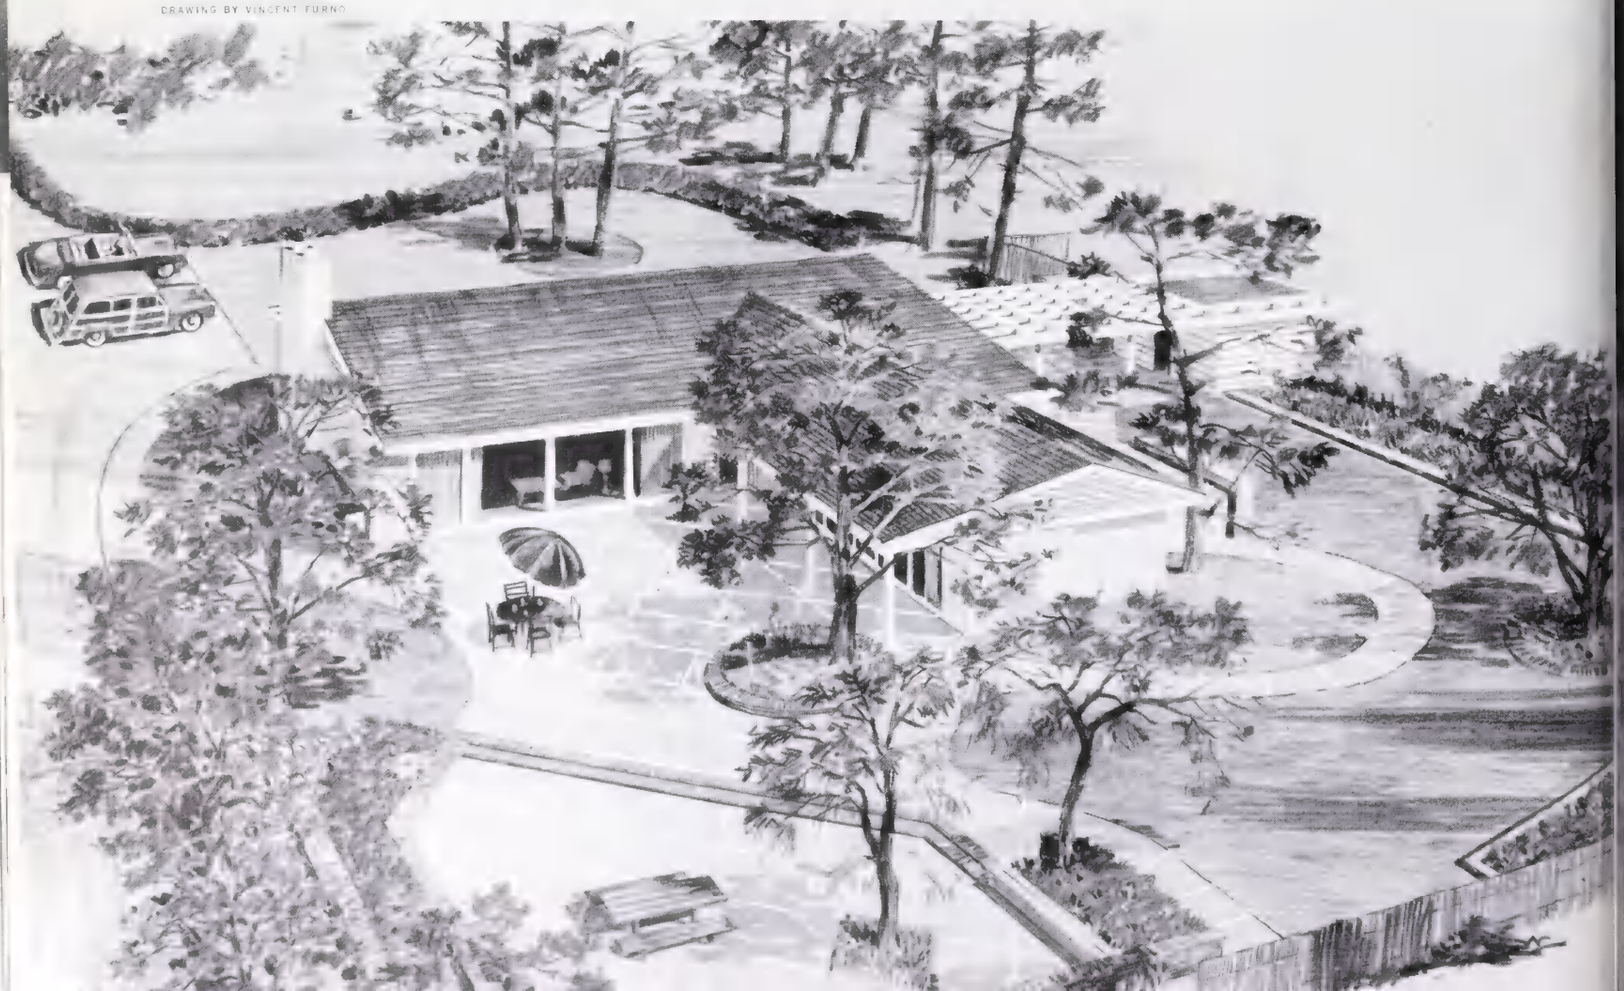
When they remodeled their garden

They tripled the size of their house



The E.F. Euphrats started with this small house, lacking both actual and visual spaciousness. They wanted both—but without the expense of building more house.

Optical illusion is more concrete than you may think. It's as good as money spent on more house. Outdoor space, even in winter when it's too cold to be out, gives your rooms a spaciousness that's worth more than actual enclosed floor space. More important, improved outdoor space costs only half as much as indoor space

DRAWING BY VINCENT FURNO

← BEFORE. No one really got any use from the outdoors. There wasn't anything to make you want to go into the garden, and no easy way to get out there, even visually, from the house. The garden was typical of so many in America—an uninspired collection of bushes that shut off the house from the outdoors. The lawn was a real chore to care for because of heavy shade.

↓ AFTER. Large windows and doors open up the house to make you want to use the big outdoor living room. This particular spot was chosen for the terrace because the trees shade it during the afternoon when it would be in use. Grass is confined to places not likely to receive much foot traffic. The foundation shrubs are gone—replaced by colorful flowers at the lotline.

how this small house grew! Structural changes were or. The only addition was the trellis and outdoor storage n. But now the garden offers a real living room, properly ded for comfort, easy to get to. The indoors looks bigger ause of the big windows and the inviting garden view. Even off-street parking area was added in the new garden plan.

Two-level terrace solves problem of how to make dining and sitting areas seem intimate enough when party is small, yet spacious when entertaining a crowd. Steps are broad and low for safety, and for best design are of the same material (brick) used on the lower level for the retaining wall. This also serves as extra seating space.

Paved paths provide dry, firm footing that gets you to any part of the yard. Contrast this with the usual American yard. Note, too, that the main planting now occurs at the lotlines rather than at the foundation of the house. This one design trick alone greatly expands the apparent spaciousness by pulling the eye away from the house to see the distant view.

PLAN BY VINCENT FURNO

PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER

Good garden designing always starts with wise use of what nature offers you. Paved terraces are in the cool shade, flowers in the sun. Shade gardens are possible, but why go to extra work they entail when there is a sunny spot for flowers? Raised flower beds show off blooms better, also provide a wall for extra seating space when needed.

Trees are featured. Here's a way to save work (no hand trimming around trunks) and add interesting ground pattern. Material inside wooden ring is pine needles (use sand, crushed rock, or vermiculite under deciduous trees). See how the trellis which connects the kitchen with the new storage room makes the house seem so much bigger. Roofed breezeway could be used instead in cold climates.

Fall is a wonderful time

Nature does her part to make the outdoors enjoyable— Have you done yours? Is your garden full of color—or has it petered out?

by Dr. Joseph E. Howland

House Beautiful's Garden Editor

What does your fall garden look like? Is it full of the rich, warm color of new fall blooms? Or is it a bedraggled remnant of leftover summer flowers? All too often you may have to admit that it looks pretty run-down at the heels.

How does that happen? You probably thought you could coast through the fall on your summer flowers—but you can't. Nature sees to this. She tries to make all plants bloom early so that their seeds ripen before frost. You want to have plants in bloom right to the time of killing frost. So you must circumvent nature's plans. You must reserve part of your garden for plants bred to bloom in the fall. Most people know this—but they give only lip service to the idea. They mean to save the space but they get many more plants from their packets of seeds than they expected. Few gardeners have the ability to discard these unneeded seedlings. So they stick them into any bare ground they see. When planting time arrives for chrysanthemums, dahlias, and the hardy fall asters, all the garden space has been filled.

How much space should you save for fall flowers? Look at it this way. Fall flowers can extend the season two months—beginning in mid-September when your summer flowers begin to peter out noticeably. So fall flowers deserve at least 25 per cent of your garden space, especially since they bloom during the time nature's color palette is so wonderfully rich and the exhilarating weather makes you want to be outdoors.

give you fresh color for Fall

You could fall-garden with chrysanthemums alone. They are available in a variety of heights, colors, flower sizes, and shapes. Some are ideal for small gardens, others for sophisticated estates. All bloom so freely that you can cut them liberally for use indoors—and they are especially long-lasting as cut flowers.

Chrysanthemums are easy to transplant, even when in full bloom, so they can be moved into place at the last minute to pep up the fall color show. Or you can grow them in pots or tubs that are moved to the terrace when they're at their full-bloom best.

BEFORE. A young girl growing up won't get much inspiration from a drab setting like this. Dresser and desk line up uncomfortably against a bare wall. Radiator sticks out awkwardly into the room. See how built-in units (left) house beds and radiator, provide needed storage space.

AFTER. Now there are comfortable sofas where she can relax or talk with friends. Her favorite records are readily accessible. All the things she likes are there—to be enjoyed. Note photostatic blow-ups of old costume prints.

SHE'S GETTING TO BE

Quite a young lady!

When that girl-child of yours changes into a young lady, it's time to do something about her room. For that room can leave its stamp on her personality and her adult life. It's where she will think and dream, plan her career; it's where she will develop interest and pride in her surroundings. See that it's good enough!

BEFORE. This definitely was not a room in which a young girl could entertain her friends or work at a hobby. It was just a place to sleep. Twin beds conventionally placed took up valuable space. There wasn't enough storage space or even a comfortable place to read. The room didn't work.

AFTER. Now it's a room designed for a growing personality. This girl is interested in costume designing, so her room is set up to help develop her ideas along those lines. Storage and work space is planned for the use she will make of it. Twin beds were discarded in favor of box springs and mattresses that double as sofas. Opposite them a neat bit of space-saving planning combines traditional pieces with built-in bookshelves to make a modern-looking storage wall. Instead of a cubicle, she has a livable, one-room apartment.

BEFORE. Something had to be done about the haphazard architecture at the end wall. Flowered wallpaper certainly didn't help. The fireplace, jammed in between the bathroom and entrance doors, was completely useless. The only practical solution was to board it up, use the wasted wall to build in a closet.

AFTER. How much "cleaner" the end wall seems now. Doors and woodwork are painted the same color as the wall to minimize their bulk. And see how the bookcase wall serves the needs of a hobby. Desk can also be used as a dressing table or cutting table, and it's just the right height for a portable sewing machine. Desk top lifts up to make a drawing board, extension lamp pulls out to give light where it's needed most. Here's a spot that fairly invites a girl to sit down and go to work.

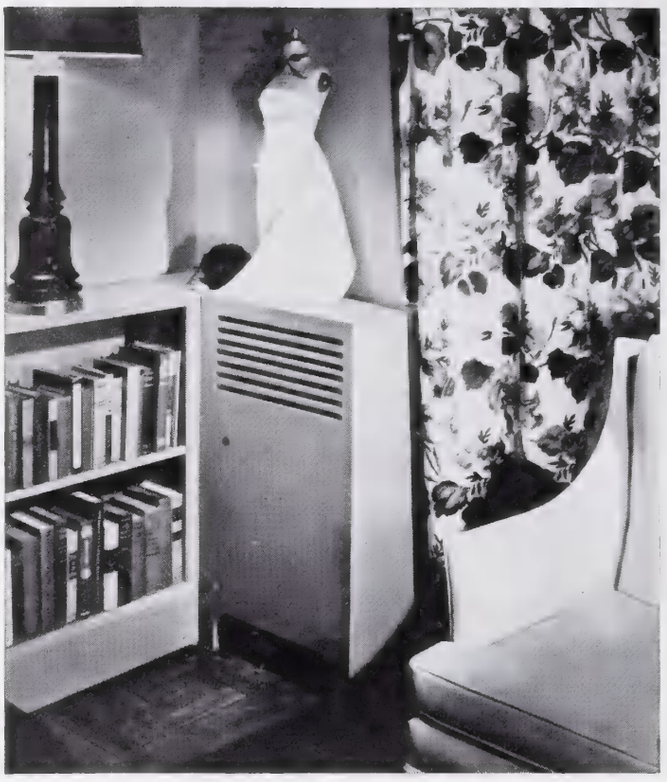
A young lady will be neat and orderly providing she has plenty of space to store her possessions. An aspiring costume designer needs a storage bin like the one above, wide enough for portfolios and drawings and a portable sewing machine. Partitioned bin against the wall holds pillows and extra bedding. "Lids" lift up for easy access.



Here are the essential storage pieces that make up the work-wall shown on the opposite page. Two chests of drawers, a desk with a removable drawing board top. These traditional pieces were cleverly incorporated with built-in book shelves to take full advantage of every inch of space.

Radiators need not be ugly space-wasters

BEFORE. This radiator, even though it's covered, was far from attractive. Besides, it wasted precious wall space. The top of the radiator had no room for books and magazines, and was too high to co-ordinate into near-by scheme. See solution at right.

AFTER. A trim and tailored cover with vents at top hides the new radiator. Bookcase meets it at right angles, makes it seem even smaller, less in the way. It's no longer necessary to stack books in an untidy fashion and there's space for a tall lamp.

MORE INFORMATION ABOUT THE FURNISHINGS IN THIS ROOM, ON PAGE 146.

Sketch shows how box spring and mattress units fit into the "L" formed by the storage cabinets. Beds slide part way under cabinets, are reduced to sofa width. (Dotted lines show how far the bed slips under.) This gives greater sitting comfort, helps keep beds stationary. At night they can be pulled out to full width for sleeping. Bed against the wall pulls out and down toward radiator.

A poker table for the living room

Almost as long as there have been Americans there have been American-made efforts to make tables turn into benches, or to have chairs, wardrobes, and even pianos change themselves into beds. It's a basic native taste trait. We like things that do more than meet the eye. They please our love of the mechanically-contrived, while satisfying that demand for practicality which seems to be in all of us. This 54-inch-wide, custom-made table, for example, rates acclaim in anybody's language for its fine cabinetry and the general handsomeness of its walnut wood and pleasing circular shape.

But it has a peculiarly American appeal because (1) you could use it in the living room or dining room; (2) you could eat, write, study, or play cards at it; (3) it's equipped with such hidden devices as poker chip troughs and off-the-table supports for drinks and ash trays; (4) it's commodious enough with legs carefully placed to seat four luxuriously, six in great comfort (24 inches per person), and eight adequately (21 inches per person).

Dan Cooper designed it and, since it is made to order, can produce it in any size or kind of wood.

Proof that it can be highly desirable to make your poker table a permanent part of your living room. See how pivoting poker-chip troughs close flush with the table apron and so conceal their gambling purpose. Drink trays swivel in and out as needed. Table top, in the American Style tradition of easy upkeep, looks like leather but is stain-proof, drink-proof, non-absorbent "Kalistron" plastic. Chairs are also by Dan Cooper.

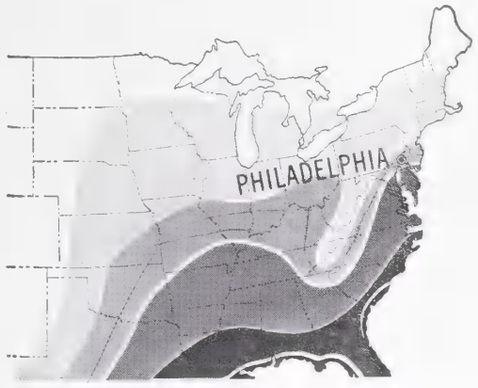
Can a house and its furnishings work a miracle on its owner's personality?

A story by Lloyd Shearer

I've been a Hollywood writer for six years, and by now you'd think I'd be inured to the characters who gravitate here. But I'm not.



There's no other town I know where the social dregs rise so persistently to the top and the cream habitually sinks to the bottom. And I guess this perverseness in the accredited order of life is what fascinates and glues me to the place. It is positively amazing to me, for example, how the outcasts from the East and Midwest can come out here with no talent, no ability, no contacts of any kind, and in a miraculously short time become rich, renowned screen stars, and the socially prominent of Southern California.

Take for illustration—and I offer her in evidence because you are readers of this magazine—the case of June Scott. Despite her years, Mrs. Scott is not only the acknowledged queen of motion picture society, she is also the owner of what practically every top-flight decorator has enviously termed the most tastefully furnished and livable house on the West Coast. She has a rare assortment of truly magnificent Shaker furniture. Her home has been photographed and published in every home furnishings magazine in the land. Her advice on design and architecture is avidly sought by professionals infinitely more experienced than she. Her gardens, trim and picturesque, are open to the public in the name of charity twice a year. And her sponsorship of several California art schools has caused her to be listed among the country's most conscientious patrons of culture. (Continued on page 149)

The Philadelphia story on climate control

There's nothing special about Philadelphia's summers. Half the country shares her problem of high heat and humidity. But her passion for stone houses is unique. Here's a story on how to have such houses and still have summer comfort, free of sweating walls, mildewed closets, musty smells. If you can do this in Philadelphia, you can do it anywhere. Turn page to see a house that can.

Philadelphia is in a middle of a zone of summer-heat-and-humidity. North, it's better. South, it's worse. But the problem differs only in degrees. So does the cure.

Our Philadelphia house is a perfect

Lesson in summer comfort

The battle to control our winter climates, indoors, is largely won. There's no excuse for cold-weather discomfort any more. But our fight against summertime heat and humidity—and all the stresses it puts on us, our possessions and houses—lags behind. This house gives you comfort winter and summer

THE PROBLEM	THE SOLUTION
1. Mildew in closets and closed storage spaces.	1. Sealed, dehumidified storage for out-of-season articles in basement.
2. Roof troubles: rot due to high humidity, freezing and thawing which produce leaks.	2. Aluminum roof, guttering, downspouts, etched to reflect heat away and avoid glare and glitter.
3. Winter condensation on glass and window sash.	3. Double, sealed insulating glass in wood sash.
4. Condensation on the inside of outer walls.	4. Vapor barrier of transparent plastic.
5. Excessive winter heat loss through masonry walls.	5. Blankets of glass wool insulation inside walls.
6. Excessive summer heat gain through the structure itself.	6. Reflective roof, plus generous wall shading, plus glass wool insulation, plus attic fans.
7. Summer discomfort due to combination of high heat and high humidity.	7. Natural ventilation through all principal rooms, plus attic fans to pull in cool, night air, plus room air conditioner in north-facing study.
8. Winter discomfort due to loss of body heat to cold, damp structure.	8. Warmed floors and walls. A simple but ingenious heating system wraps house in warmed air, circulating it through floor, wall and ceiling spaces.
9. How to exclude summer sun and summer insect, while still admitting summer breeze.	9. South front is protected by continuous galleries, screened with plastic insect mesh.

If you think that modern principles of design like Climate Control are automatically hostile to tradition, study this home. Here the stone house, of which Pennsylvanians are so fond, merges easily with modern requirements for comfort, privacy, sound construction. On the north or entrance side, see how the covered "bridge" gives perfect bad-weather protection to front door. (Its masonry floor, heated by boiler room below, will always be snow-free.) Note that for privacy and winter comfort, windows are small, few.

Old and new combine to lick a difficult climate problem. Under an aluminum roof, finished to look like pewter, are attic fans and plenty of insulation. Together, they'll get rid of most solar heat before it ever enters the house proper. Yet Philadelphia has been using metal roofs for centuries. The fieldstone walls and simple porches might date from William Penn's day. Here they are used as sun shades to protect a south wall that's almost entirely glass. Note how house is situated to give privacy from drive.

Summer sun is kept out by the screened porches, two stories of them. Although there'll be many times when you'd sit here, this is primarily a sun-control device. It permits a south wall largely of glass, with sliding doors for maximum ventilation. Vine-covered pergola and trees at left shade terrace on hot summer afternoons.

Winter sun is let in by the same device. See how glass walls on both floors flood all major rooms with winter sun. This is important in regions like Philadelphia, where little more than half of winter days are sunny. What's more, thanks to modern heating, insulating glass, and weatherstripping, it's also practical.

Many American cities have an architectural tradition to be proud of. Philadelphia is one of them. But a tradition that's worth its salt has simple, down-to-earth reasons for being so. A house is admirable not because "William Penn lived here" but because it enabled William Penn to live here in comfort and grace. Philadelphia's ancestors did many things well, including their houses. But there were many things they did not do perfectly, simply because the knowledge and resources of their times did not permit it. Thus their stone houses were often lovely to look at and, for some seasons of the year, pleasant to live in. But in their hot, humid summers they were defenseless against heat, sweaty walls, mildew, and insects. In the coldest weather, no matter how bright the fire, they lost body heat to clammy stone walls.

Here's a house that takes the best of this tradition. the part that still makes sense æsthetically and functionally, (Continued on next page)

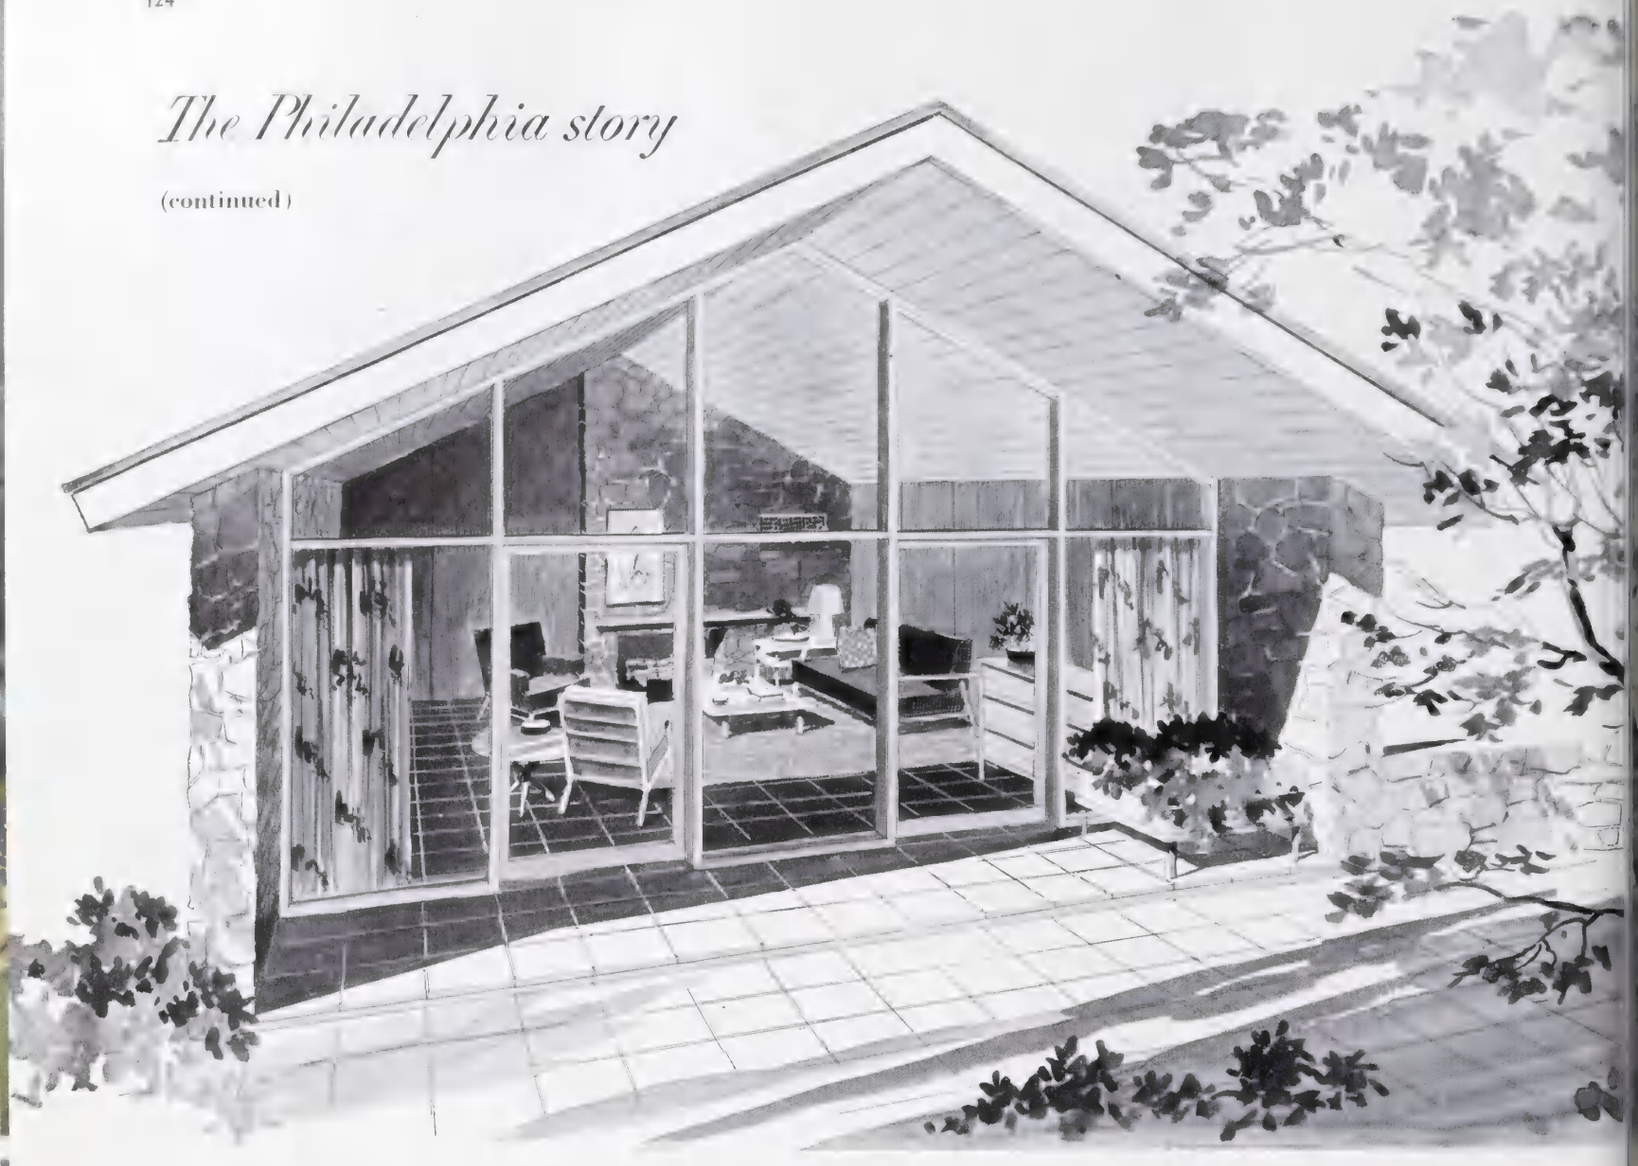
FIRST FLOOR

An economical plan gives major rooms southern exposure. a garden view, privacy from street and drive. (Exception is second-floor study described on next page.) Though it uses the center hall so familiar in this region. this house nevertheless has the openness demanded by today's living. Note in first-floor plan (right) how "covered bridge" to study creates sheltered loading space for two cars at front door. Its flagstone floor is snow-and-ice free due to heat from boiler room below.

Plastic wrapped and dehumidified, like a modern industrial carton. the basement is well equipped for a humid climate. Entire foundation is wrapped in tough, sealed envelope of transparent plastic (below) that runs under basement floor and up outside of basement walls. Electric dehumidifier makes windowless boiler room ideally cool and dry for storage of out-of-season clothing and bedding (see plan, right).



BASEMENT

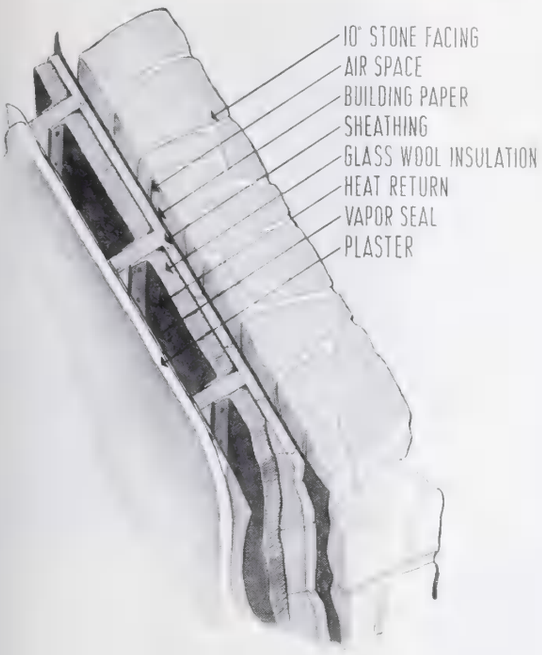
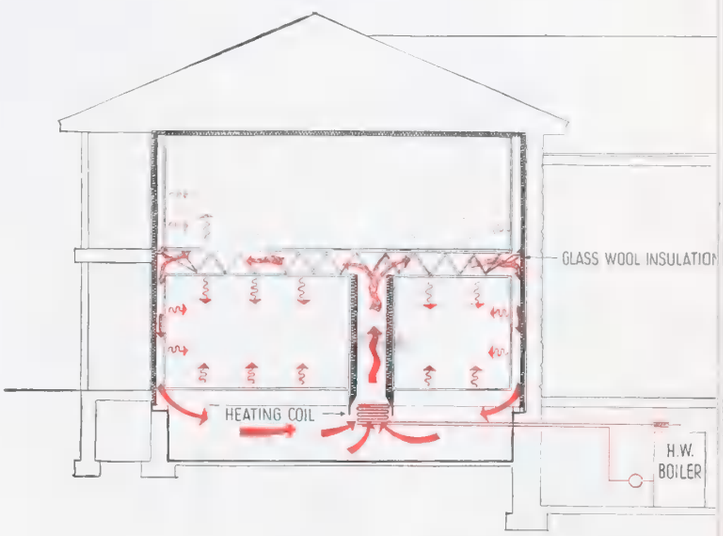
and combines it with the best current practices in heating, insulation, ventilation, and orientation. If you study the details on these pages, you'll see how easily and naturally this was achieved.



Designed for a fairly large, south-sloping lot in the Main Line district of Philadelphia, the house was sited for best possible exposure and maximum protection from auto traffic—a necessary evil to suburban living. By placing the entrance front toward the north and street, the least desirable exposure, climate-wise, was given over to two motor courts, garage, and service yard. This freed the whole southern part of the plot (direction of winter sun, view, and summer breeze) for living. Main problem was to create a house that conformed to the stone farmhouse tradition of the community and yet met local climate demands more effectively than the prototype. (Continued on page 148)

The study faces north, has a polished tile floor and a room-size air conditioner built into fireplace wall. It's thus a perfect retreat from the worst of Philadelphia's summer. But it's a good year-round party room as well, isolated from the rest of the house where noise won't disturb the kids and the clutter won't haunt you the next morning.

HOW YOU CAN GET CHARTS AND TECHNICAL DATA ON CLIMATE CONTROL



Through the cooperation of the American Institute of Architects, technical reports on HOUSE BEAUTIFUL'S Climate Control Project are being published for the benefit of architects, contractors, manufacturers and home owners. These reports analyze precipitation, temperature, wind velocity and direction, humidity, sunshine, etc. They are published for each region studied in the Climate Control Project, and are available concurrently with appearance of the general regional story in HOUSE BEAUTIFUL. Reports are now available on the following regions: Mid-Ohio, Metropolitan New York and New Jersey, Southern Florida, Southwestern Desert, Missouri River Valley, Gulf Coast. Price: 50¢ each from Administrator, HOUSE BEAUTIFUL'S Climate Control Project 572 Madison Ave., New York 22, N.Y.

HOUSE BEAUTIFUL'S

If your climate has hot summers, cold winters, and high humidity most of the time, build your stone wall like this. Heat will have a hard time moving through it in either direction. So will moisture, thanks to plastic vapor barrier behind plaster. With its "sandwich" construction, this wall will be comfortable and dry, winter and summer. Spaces between studs are "ducts" for warm-air radiant heating system (below).

New radiant heating system warms every surface in this house—floors, ceilings, walls, even underside of the bathtubs. Principle is simplicity itself. Hot water coils below vertical duct heat basement air, send it up duct like a fountain. At top, it spreads out to warm floors, ceilings, then flows down cavities in outside walls to basement where cycle is repeated. This air never enters rooms. System needs no fans, offers no fire hazard, since actual source of heat, an oil-fired boiler, is sealed off in another portion of basement.

Porches are fine to sit on, but few people realize that, properly planned, they make fine climate-control devices for house itself. Here two-story porch along entire south wall keeps sun, insects, and blowing rain out of all rooms, permits large glass doors to slide back for real summer ventilation. Insulating glass makes same walls weathertight in winter.

Why does insulation Insulate?

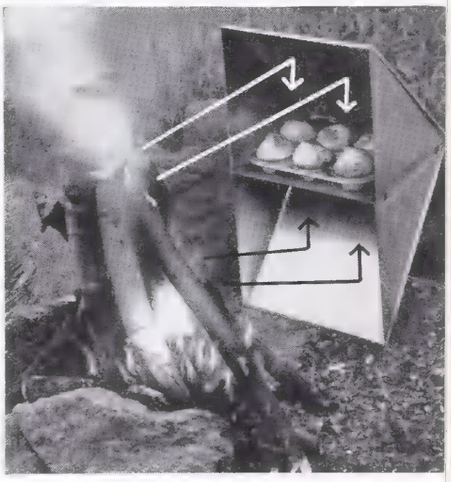
Wolfgang Langewiesche

It's no wonder you're confused about insulation. There are so many kinds. Which is the best? If you insulate against cold, are you also protected from heat? And why does insulation insulate, anyway?

The best insulating material in the world is air. Of all common substances, air offers the greatest resistance to the flow of heat. Just plain air is 6 times as good an insulator as wood, 29 times as good as brick, 39 times as good as ordinary concrete, 44 times as good as glass, and 1,600 times as good as copper. Aluminum and copper are about the worst insulators, which is another way of saying they are the best conductors of heat and make rather nice cooking utensils.

If air is so good an insulator, then why not simply use an air-space in the wall? Well, people do, especially in this country. The air-space is a distinctly American usage, and an old one. The first settlers built their houses the way they had built them in England—a wood framework filled with brick. But they soon found that a house was more comfortable if it had two skins, so to speak: an inner skin of plaster and an outer skin of boarding, with a hollow space between. You can see why: because the hollow air-space served as insulation, and the climate of the new colony called for insulation: the summers were much hotter, and the winters much colder than in mild old England.

But the simple air-space does not make full use of the air's insulating power. Trouble is—the air in it won't hold still. A "block" of air (if you will imagine such a thing), the size of brick, would be twenty-nine times as good an insulator as a brick. But air doesn't come in blocks. On one side of the hollow air-space, the air picks up warmth. It becomes light and flows up. Then it flows across to the cool side and rubs off its heat there. It gets cold, sinks down, flows across to the warm side again and chills the warm side. So these drafts actually transport heat across the air-space. The insulating value of an air-space goes to pot. It's still much better than it would be if the outer and the inner "skin" of the house were touching each other without an air-space. But it isn't good enough.



To get better results, you have to stop those drafts. You have to pin the air down. Fortunately, this is easy. Air is like honey. It clings to things. A thin layer of air clings to your hands. A thin layer of air clings to the skin of an airplane in flight, even at 600 mph. For the airplane designer, this is a bad problem: for the house designer, it's a good thing. For example, it is almost the only reason why a window pane has any insulating value. The glass itself would not keep much cold out. But a very thin layer of air clings to each side of the glass and does the job. It is almost the only reason why an air-space has any insulating value. The insulating is done almost entirely by the two thin air-layers that cling to the two surfaces.

This same clinging tendency of the air is the secret behind most insulating materials. You simply criss-cross your hollow air-space with billions of tiny fibers or surfaces. The air clings to each of them. This pins the air down. Or, in some materials, you sub-divide your air-space into a billion tiny air bubbles. In any case, that's what you buy when you buy insulation—air, arrested air. And then, of course, you don't necessarily have to put the stuff into a hollow space between the walls. You can put it wherever it is convenient. But about that, more below.

It makes surprisingly little difference what material you use to arrest the air with. Most anything will do, just so long as it is fluffy, with lots of little fibers or surfaces or bubbles, holding lots of air. The insulating power of most insulating materials lies not in the substance of which they are made, but in the air which they hold in place. Glass is a very poor insulating material: glass wool is excellent insulation. Rock is a poor insulator: rock wool is excellent. You could stuff an air-space with steel wool and get pretty fair insulation.

And when you look down a list of technical specifications, it is amusing to see what-all they make insulation of: rock, glass, pig's hair, cattle hair, licorice roots, slag, cotton, wood shavings, and also a kind of mineral that you can puff up like popcorn.

CLIMATE
PROJECT

Magnified 20 times, this microscopic photograph of mineral wool shows the billions of air bubbles imprisoned in mass type insulation. Since air is a good insulator, such air-trapping materials make excellent insulators.

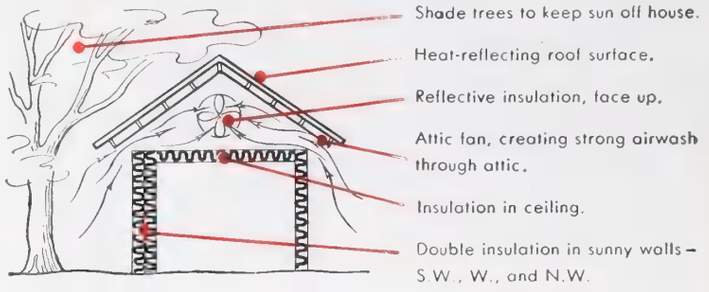
into the insulation business. It sounds so easy. All you have to do is find some stuff—most anything—that shreds or puffs up or tears or beats up into a fluffy enough shape. Then you sell it and make a million.

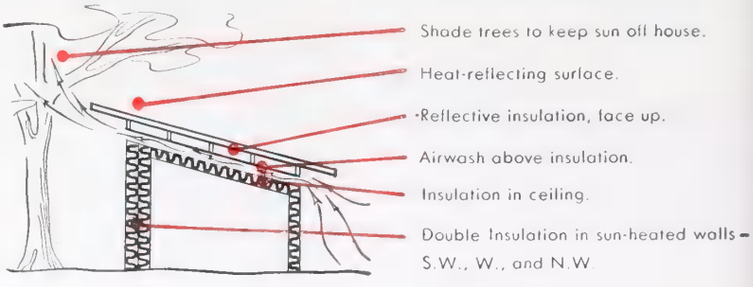
But, of course, it isn't quite so easy. You would have to ask: Will it burn? Does it smell? What if it gets damp. Does it settle down with age and become compact? Can insects live on it? Mold? Fungus? Does it shed a dust that is harmful to the lungs? Does it rust, rot, or corrode? And so on, down a long list of technical requirements.

You would also ask money questions: How expensive is it to make? Is it easy for workmen to apply? How does it fit into the house? That's why insulation material comes in so many different forms. For example, it comes in blankets or quilts that fit into the hollow spaces of a frame wall, between the upright studs. It comes loose, to be blown into an existing wall after it has been built. It comes as rigid boards that serve also as part of the wall's structure. Of these boards, some are for finishing walls (with foil on their backs), and others are for structural work only. Some serve at the same time as "lath" to hold plaster. Some are tough enough to serve as outside sheathing of the house, right under the shingles or clapboard.

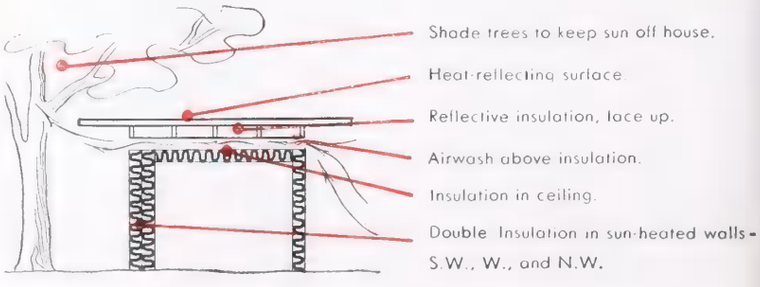
There is no "best" insulation, nor is there a "cheapest." There is only a best and cheapest for a particular house. To choose it is quite a problem: it ties up with the whole design of the house, and the character and extremes of your summer and winter climate.



House Beautiful's optimum standards



Thanks to our Climate Control Project, House Beautiful has come to believe that in many parts of the country we need to use more insulation than has commonly been supposed. Also, we need to be more careful about how we install it. For the finest insulation will cancel itself out if its installation is wrong.



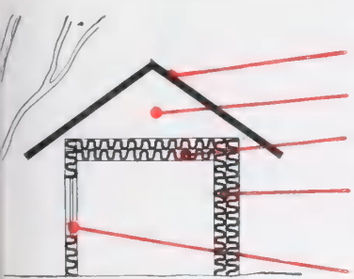
In the interest of saving you money, the insulation manufacturers have developed "minimum standards," which have been widely accepted. These are fine for operative builders, and people with minimum budgets. But we think House Beautiful readers want to do things right, in the best possible manner. Insulation is one of the least expensive materials in a house. A little more of it in a few extra places affects total costs relatively little. Why have ¾ of a loaf when you could have a whole one?

For those who can afford to do things 100% right, we offer three optimum standards. Pick yours, depending on your climate.

If summer heat is your main problem

Insulation against summer heat is not exactly the same thing as insulation against winter cold. "Of course not," you say. "It is exactly the opposite thing. In winter you try to keep the heat in: in summer you try to keep it out. But doesn't the same insulation do both jobs?" Well, almost. But not quite.

Here is one big difference: In winter, you have a source of heat in the house—your furnace. It keeps making new heat as the old heat leaks out. Without this constant flow of new heat, the inside of the house would soon be as cold as the outdoors. Insulation, after all, cannot heat the house. It can only slow down leakage of the heat from the house. Well, in summer, you have no source of coolness in the house (unless you have a cooling device), and your insulation cannot, in the long run, keep the inside of the house any cooler than the outside world is.



"That's not true," you say. "I do have a source of coolness." And you explain how you can open the house wide all night and let the night coolness in. Then, in the daytime, you close it up tight, and it stays cool, because the insulation won't let the heat come in so fast. By the time it begins to get warm it is evening, and you open up again and get a new batch of coolness. It's a good system, if you can make it work by itself. It's a good system to have family arguments about because it often does not work.

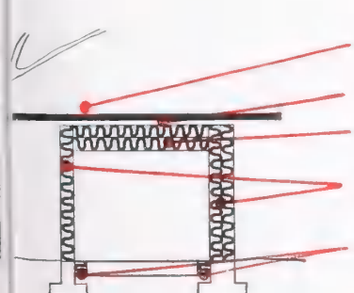
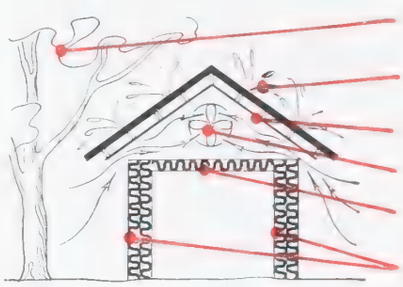
for insulating practice

FOR A LIST OF INSULATION MAKERS TURN TO PAGE 184.

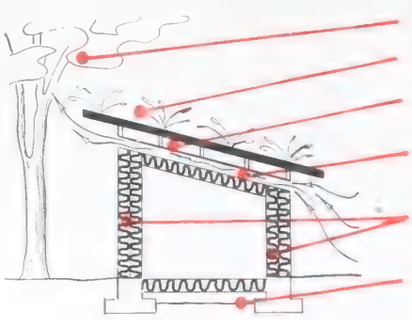


If winter cold is your main problem

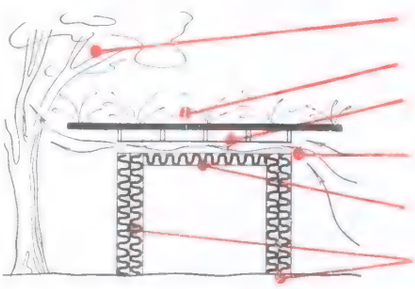
- Dark-colored roof to absorb sun heat.
- Sealed attic.
- Heavy insulation in ceiling.
- Insulation in walls – double it in direction of coldest winds, least sun.
- Double glass, weather stripping.



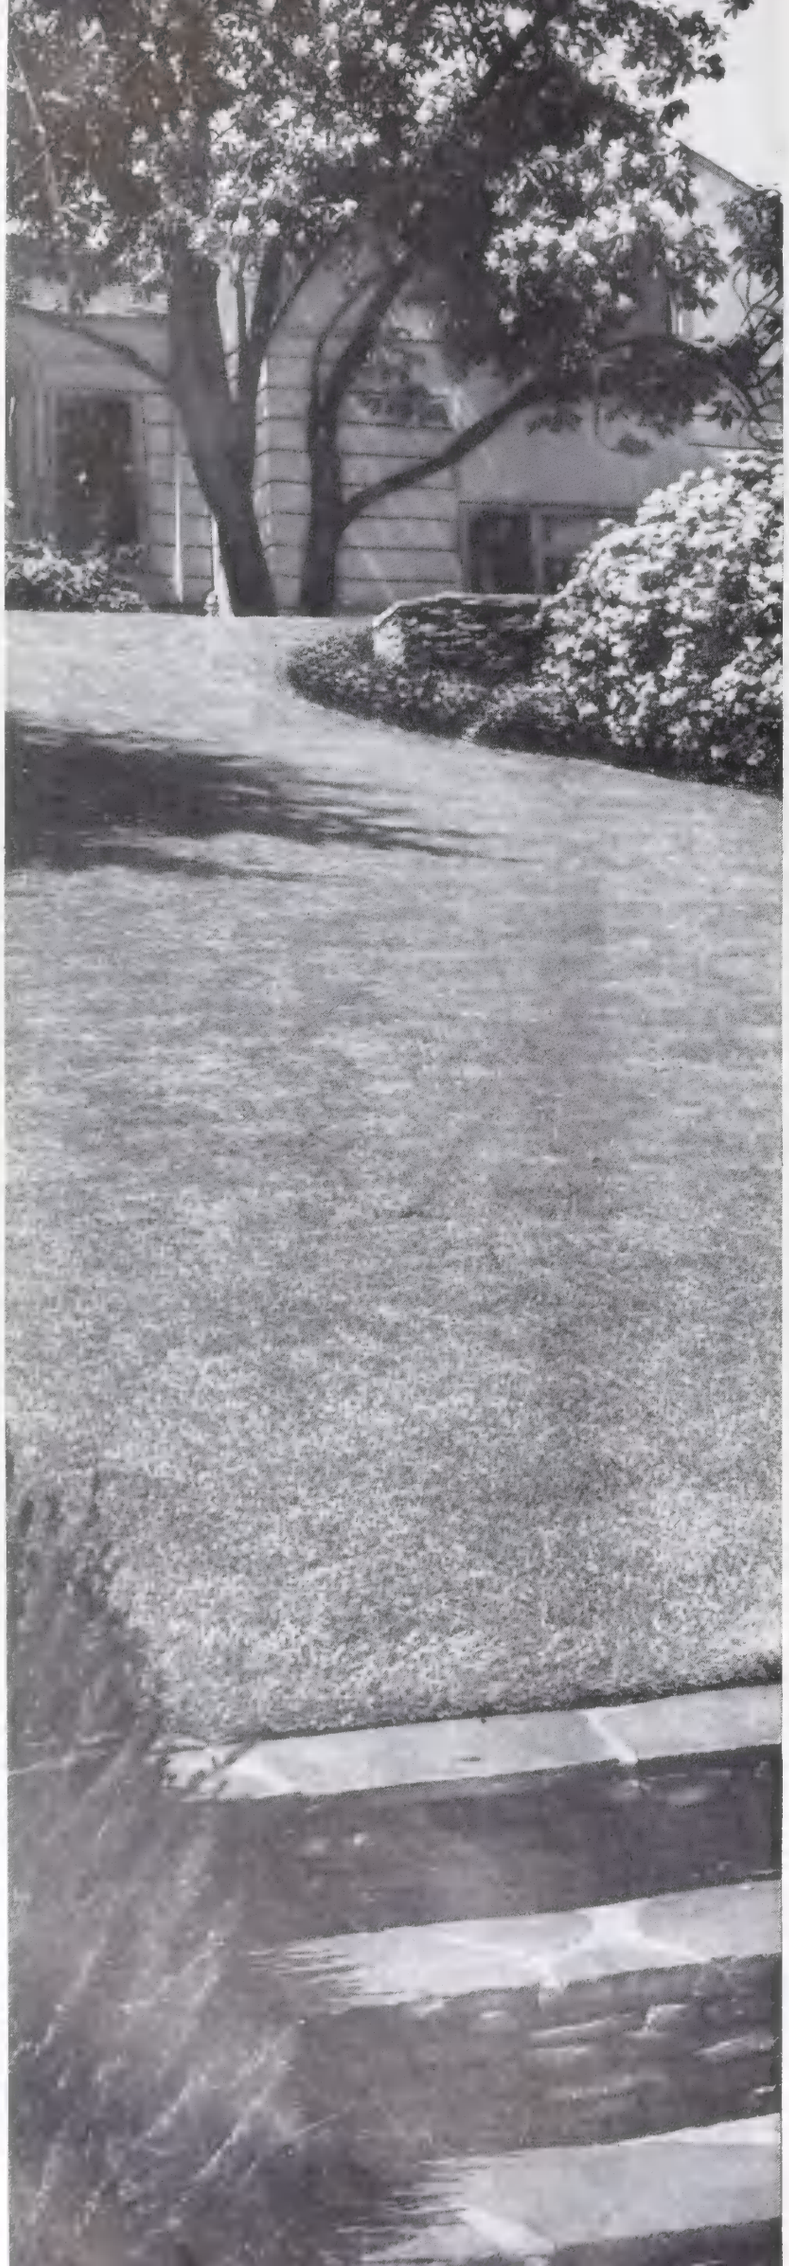
- Dark-colored, heat absorbing roof.
- Sealed air space between insulation and roof to prevent condensation.
- Heavy insulation in ceiling.
- Insulate all walls – double it toward coldest winds, least sun.



- Dark-colored, heat absorbing roof.
- Sealed air space.
- Insulation in ceiling.
- Insulation in all walls – double toward north and cold winds.
- Insulate edges of slab if floor is concrete slab.



If extremes of heat and cold are your problem



- Deciduous trees for summer shade.
- Roof spray on dark roof kills sun in summer. In winter, roof absorbs sun heat.
- Reflective insulation, face up.
- Attic fan for summer, off in winter.
- Insulation in ceiling.
- Double insulation in walls toward summer sun, winter winds.

There's too much bunk about LAWNS

Forget all the conflicting advice. Here is a work-saving program guaranteed to produce a thick, velvety green carpet

NEVER CUT SHORTER THAN 1½ INCHES. Nature intended grass to grow several feet high. Shave it down to an inch or less (most lawnmowers do just this) and the grass starves to death—and weeds take over. So buy a mower that does a good cutting job at 1½-inch height. Don't be fooled by a sales demonstration. Any mower will cut grass short. Only a good machine can give a smooth cut at 1½ inches.

FEED LIBERALLY. Few lawns get enough plant food. The result is skimpy growth, bare spots, and lots of weeds. All lawns need three feedings a year—September, October, and February. Use four pounds of a garden plant food, or two pounds of a lawn food at each application for each 100 square feet of grass. If your soil is more subsoil than topsoil, make a fourth application of plant food in April each year.

Most people think that feeding the grass makes extra work—more frequent mowing. Let's look at this claim. Starved lawns must be mowed regularly anyhow because there are always occasional sturdy grass plants that grow tall enough to make the lawn look ragged. So while you do cut off more grass on the well-fed lawn at each mowing, you don't mow much more often—certainly not more than two extra mowings in the whole season. And mowing is easier on well-fed lawns because grass is soft and lush, not tough and wiry.

WATER ONCE A WEEK—OR NOT AT ALL. Sprinkling the lawn encourages weeds and doesn't really help the lawn grass unless you wet the soil at least four (Continued on page 201)

Pantry Shelf News

by Julie Polshek

"Heard about the canned live lobsters?" queried a visitor from New England. Another "shaggy-dog" story, I thought to myself, and waited for him to spring the punch line. But it wasn't a joke. And in due course of time, the arrival of the Liv-Pak lobsters themselves brought visual proof. Yet, even when I opened the hermetically sealed container, I didn't quite believe it until I poked one gingerly and saw him kick.

The magical canning feat is achieved by the synthetic Atlantic Ocean water that nurtures the lobsters during their canned sojourn. It contains both the chemical elements necessary and especially beneficial to the well-being of lobsters from the Atlantic waters as well as some that neutralize and absorb waste products during the journey. The container also provides the necessary oxygen.

Did you know that lobsters born and bred in any one body of water can't subsist on the water of another one? The sealed-in lobsters are guaranteed life for six days by the Liv-Pak Company who developed the synthetic sea water and packing technique. (They've been known to remain hale and hearty for as long as 14 days.)

Open the container and you'll find four cans. Three of them yield two Maine chicken lobsters a piece, each weighing about 1 to 1¼ pounds and as fine as they come. The fourth can contains their salt-water rations.

The claws of these canned lobsters are plugged so they can't nap at you as you extricate them. Drop them into a waiting kettle of boiling water or split them for broiling, just as you would any other live lobsters. What eating! The fine-textured meat is tender, sweet, and oh-so-rich in flavor. There's nothing in the sea-food realm to match fine lobster meat.

The 6-lobster pack costs $9.95, plus collect transportation costs, from Jordan-Marsh, Boston, Mass. (It weighs 24 lbs.) Liv-Pak lobsters are shippable to any destination that can be reached in six days by air freight or the combined air-and-ground transportation used if destination is not on air route. (We're told virtually all locales can be serviced in 6 days.)

The cheese-sampling jamboree I had in Old Denmark's rare-cheese department is a gustatory treat I wish all my readers could enjoy.

Every member of the distinguished imported galaxy is personally selected by Old Denmark's knowing cheese connoisseur during his periodic shopping expeditions in the Scandinavian countries. Just-any-imported cheese doesn't measure up to his critical demands. He travels from dairy to dairy seeking out the elite and long-aged cheeses of an area famed world-over for its mastery in this art. It's a skill that's passed on from father to son for generations back. The quality of the cream-rich milk used contributes its important bit.

Every cheese on Old Denmark's shelves is at least a year and a half old, and all naturally aged. Which you choose becomes a matter of which type you particularly fancy. Each is as mellow as they come.

Let's go down the line and meet the most popular members of the group. First comes Old Denmark's proudest offering—Danish Emmenthaler Swiss from Zurick, two and a half years old. They call it the "crying cheese," for this long aging makes it tear when you cut into it.

Its texture resembles an aged cheddar. It slices like a dream and its mellowness and rich flavor are enough to make any cheese fancier wax eloquent.

Meet now a Port Salut of special excellence, which is especially packed for Old Denmark. Finally, there are three made by Tholstrump, a name that carries special renown. Royal Danish, the trade-name this maker's cheeses bear, is no figure of speech. Tholstrump has produced cheese for the royal family for generations. The trio include two-year old Kommenast, a cheddar-type cheese flavored with caraway seeds; Tilsit, a cheese that's somewhat similar to Port Salut in texture and flavor but possesses a scintillating savor all its own. Wrapped in aluminum foil, it will keep for a year. The final member of the Royal Danish trio is Gorgonzola, two years old, that offers convincing proof of Tholstrump's special cheese-making skill.

A 2½-lb loaf of Port Salut costs $3.80, plus postage. All of the others named cost $1.60 per pound, plus postage (minimum shipment is two pounds). Rugbrod, whole-grain rye bread stays fresh two or three weeks, affords a delicious serving mate for all these cheeses. 45¢ for 2-lb loaf. All from Old Denmark, 155 E. 57th St., New York.

One of the most interesting and unusual cookbooks I've encountered in a long time is the "Mennonite Community Cookbook." Its author, Mary Emma Showalter, is herself a Mennonite and comes from a long line of Mennonite antecedents known for their culinary skill. The book carries the blessing of the Mennonite Community Association of Scottdale, Penna.

Many of the 1,400 fine recipes which are given in this book have never before appeared in print. Many are recipes that have been handed down by word-of-mouth fr generations from mother to daugh ter and have, heretofore, been use entirely from memory. SUNDAY LUNCHEON ON THE TERRACE the children have been asked on an all-day picnic. So they will not be disappointed that we can't play baseball with them.

On Sundays we have no help and it is difficult to get anyone just for Sundays to help with housework and cooking. So, as I want to enjoy the sun and the guests, I will arrange a menu that is simple and can be fixed the day before. Since the lobster dish, served in the new clam shells, will be the conversation piece, the rest of the luncheon can be unpretentious but delicious. I'll have a table for cocktails out on the terrace—with olives and nuts to nibble on. I'll have Cheese Fondue Janie, as the main course, which must be prepared the day before, for twenty-four hours in the refrigerator enhances its flavor. A salad of mixed greens with a French dressing and caraway seeds. Then a fruit dessert, with cake or cookies. This will be a fun luncheon, for it is so little trouble.

I order the lobsters from Johnny on the wharf for Saturday (I prefer them alive and to cook them at home), but cooked ones will do nicely. If you are too far away from the source of supply, I will give you a recipe later for this lobster bisque from tinned ingredients.

Lobster Bisque for 8

2	large lobsters (If small, order 3 or 4.)
8	cups water
1¾	cups dry white wine (Wente Sauvignon Blanc, Pinot Blanc, Beaulieu Vineyards Dry Sauterne, or Chateau Beaulieu)
1	medium onion, chopped
1-2	tablespoons vinegar (less if wine is very dry)
1	teaspoon salt
2	sprigs parsley
2	stalks celery with leaves
1	bay leaf
½	can tomato juice (S & W 18-ounce can)
36	soda crackers

After cooking live lobsters 20 minutes in boiling salted water with a half bottle of wine, take out, split, remove cord running down back of the tail part, and remove meat. Save the coral, rinse out the greenish liver and head, separate the shells, and remove the gills. Toss the well-washed shells into a large soup kettle. Mash the legs with a mallet and, if you have the large eastern lobsters, by all means take the meat out of the large claws. Over the lobster shells pour the eight cups of water, wine, vinegar, salt, celery, bay leaf, and parsley. Boil for an hour or more and strain. When cool, put in a covered container in the refrigerator. Also store the lobster meat in a covered container in the ice box. There should be between eight to ten cups of liquid for your soup.

Fifteen minutes before you are ready to serve the soup, open the tomato juice and put ¼ can in the electric blender and drop in the crackers until they are puréed. Pour out and repeat process. You might need to use the cold lobster broth as some of the liquid to blend in the crackers. The crackers thicken the soup and, as they are already cooked, you do not have to cook the soup very long, for you don't have to cope with that "floury" taste. Pour the tomato juice with the crackers and the lobster liquid in a pot and heat it to near boiling, drop in the lobster cut into big chunks and the coral and serve in your glamour shells.

On Saturday morning while you are brewing your lobsters, fix the cheese dish.

Cheese Fondue Janie for 8

- 8 slices stale bread
- 1½ lbs. good cheddar cheese grated
- 6 eggs, beaten slightly
- 2½ cups milk (more or less)
- 1 rounded teaspoon brown sugar
- ¼ teaspoon paprika (Spice Islands)
- 1 finely minced shallot or green onion or scallion
- ½ teaspoon dry mustard (Coleman's)
- ½ teaspoon Beau Monde seasoning (Spice Islands)
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon Java Cracked Pepper (Spice Islands)
- ½ teaspoon Lea & Perrins Worcestershire sauce
- 1/6 teaspoon Cayenne pepper

The wonderful part of this dish is that it can be made the day before and also sit in the oven an extra twenty minutes in case your guests are late. (Oh, those men! Time means nothing to them out on the golf course.)

Slice the bread medium thickness, cut off the crusts, butter the bread and dice it, cutting the squares very small, about a quarte inch. Select one of your good-look ing flat casseroles, and butter well. Arrange the diced bread o the bottom, put a generous layer grated Cheddar cheese over it an then another layer of buttere bread squares. Put the remainin half of the grated cheese over th second layer of bread. Mix the dr ingredients together, pour the mil over them, mix well, and then ad the minced shallot or green onio the Worcestershire sauce and th lightly beaten eggs. Pour over th cheese dish and if there is n enough milk to barely see aroun the edges, add a little more. Cov with waxed paper in refrigerato

Two hours before serving, tak out of the refrigerator and let star for half an hour. Set it in a shallo pan with cold water in the botto put in a cold oven, and turn th heat on low both top and botto with the temperature set at 300° After an hour in the oven, yo might peek in and see if th Fondue is getting too brown, an if so turn off the top element. U the same cooking temperature an technique for a gas oven.

Salad for this kind of me should be really interesting. S get all the different kinds of le tuce you can find in the marke one of each kind. Wash thoroughl Dry by swinging the lettuce in tea towel. Put in a nylon bag an store in the refrigerator.

French Dressing with Caraway Seeds

- 1 teaspoon (rounded) brow sugar
- ⅛ teaspoon Java Cracked Pe per (Spice Islands)
- ¼ teaspoon paprika
- ¼ teaspoon caraway seeds
- ½ teaspoon Beau Monde se soning (Spice Islands)
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 tiny clove garlic
- 1 green onion, minced
- ⅓ cup white wine vinegar
- ¾ cup olive oil

Mash garlic and green oni in your mortar with the brow sugar, pepper, paprika, caraw seeds, Beau Monde, and salt. A vinegar and mix well. Pour in a two-cup glass or ceramic pitch and slowly add oil, stirring co stantly. Pour into a bottle, and is ready for use after 24 hours.

For dessert have your favor fruit or Peaches in Raspber Sauce. Friday night take out t boxes of frozen raspberries to thaw. Saturday morning while the lobster liquid is cooling and after you have made the Cheese Fondue, swing into the dessert deal.

Peaches in Raspberry Sauce for 8

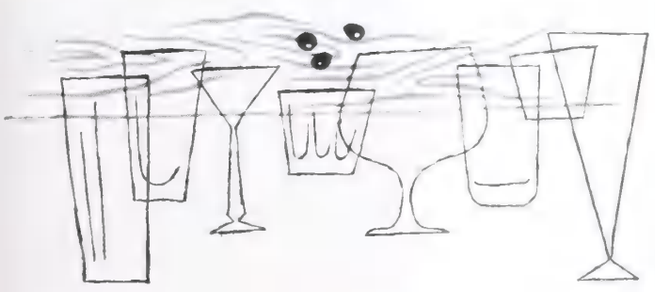
10 or 12 beautiful peaches
2 cartons frozen raspberries
4 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons peach brandy
2 teaspoons Kirsh (optional)

Take one carton of defrosted raspberries, put in a cup of water and whizz up in the electric blender. Drain through a very fine sieve into a saucepan. Repeat this process with the other carton of raspberries. Bring slowly to a boil and add the sugar.

Peel the peaches, one at a time very carefully, drop gently into the bubbling raspberry sauce and let stand two minutes. Place peach in the attractive bowl you will serve them in, and do another. After all the peaches have been poached, add the liquor, peach brandy, and Kirsch to the raspberry juice. Mix well and pour over the peaches. Cover the bowl of fruit and store in the refrigerator until ready for the luncheon party. If the berry juice becomes tired-looking, pep it up with a few drops of red food coloring.

Serve this dessert with Sesame cookies. If you make your own sugar cookies, when you roll them out to bake, scatter Sesame seeds on the board and on top and roll them in. I have a local baker make a rich butter cooky and add the Sesame seeds. They are delicious with fruit. They should be fairly small cookies, about an inch in diameter to heighten their daintiness.

Fix your little after-dinner coffee cups on a tray ahead of time. Also squeeze a cup of lemon juice and put in a covered bottle, for everyone might want a tall cool drink. It is so easy if you have the ice all ready. You make a smooth syrup for the drinks by putting a half cup of sugar in a heatproof glass cup. Then pour a cup of boiling water over the sugar, stir until dissolved, and put in a small pitcher in the ice box, and your luncheon is all set. Use as sugar.



For those who are not fortunate enough to be able to get the fresh or frozen lobster, here is a recipe for:

Lobster Bisque from Canned Products

1½ cans S. & W. Tomato Juice (18-ounce can)
4 cans Snow's Lobster à la Newburg (8½-ounce cans packed by Snow Canning Co., Pine Point, Maine.)
2 cans Rock Lobster (5½-ounce cans, either Fanci-Food by Juilliard Fancy Foods Co., San Francisco, or Caribbean Queen, Habana, Cuba.)
1 rounded teaspoon white sugar
2 teaspoons brown sugar
⅛ teaspoon Java Cracked Pepper (Spice Islands)
1-2 tablespoons good dry sherry (Pedro Domecla Ina Sherry)
Freshly ground nutmeg
Dash of saffron
½ scant teaspoon salt

Put the lobster Newburg in a pan and slowly stir in the tomato juice. This thickened sauce on the lobster does not dissolve, so it has to be stirred to a smooth consistency without lumps. Stir in the seasonings of sugar, pepper, saffron, nutmeg, and salt. Open the lobster, add the juice to the sauce and heat. When the soup is hot, drop in the canned lobster in bite-size chunks and heat for one minute. Stir in sherry and serve in hot bowls with crackers. Grate nutmeg over each bowl and serve at once. (Incidentally, Spice Islands is bringing out the most workable nutmeg grater that I have ever seen, and it will save many a scraped knuckle.)

This whole menu is so easy to prepare and so simple to serve, you're sure to have a lovely time while you're being the hostess.

Hightower Home, Showplace of Oklahoma, Enjoys Fine Modern Heat with Webster Baseboard Heating

Frank J. Hightower Residence, Oklahoma City. Architect: J. W. Hawk. General Contractor for remodeling: Smiser Construction Co., Oklahoma City. Webster Baseboard Heating installation by American Plumbing & Heating Company, Oklahoma City. Interior Decorator for remodeling: A. M. Adler, New York City.

Here is one of the finest residences in the entire Southwest, home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Hightower, Oklahoma City banking family.

In 1949, the Hightowers selected Webster Baseboard Heating for their lovely home as part of an extensive remodeling and redecorating program. Before deciding on Webster Baseboard Heating, the Hightowers considered a number of other heating systems—some were new and untried, others impractical. None gave the promise of perfected Webster Baseboard Heating.

For the mild climate of Oklahoma City, Webster Baseboard Heating has a number of advantages. Mild heat is spread all along the outside wall of every room. There is no concentration of heat to cause discomfort or dry out furniture. Webster Baseboard Heating is clean heat. Floor to ceiling temperatures vary less than 2° — no baked dry air in the breathing zone.

Hidden Screen of Warmth

Webster Baseboard Heating is forced circulation hot water heating installed behind a specially-designed metal baseboard. Air enters at the floor line, passes over copper heating element, is warmed and flows out of the top of the baseboard, supplying constant, even circulation.

Webster Baseboard Heating—first in the field of true perimeter heating—has been proven in service in more than 12,000 installations. New homes and modernization. It is an outstanding post-war development of a leader in the heating field since 1888.

Booklet "Questions and Answers about Webster Baseboard Heating" and descriptive literature on request.

RUFFLES WITHOUT WORK

The current good news in curtains is that you can have them wider and fuller than ever with far less upkeep care

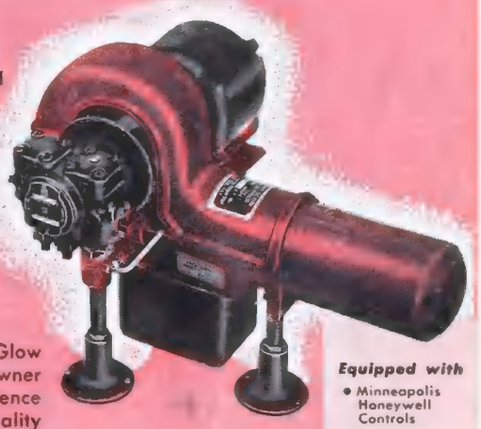
Since we have not yet attained the millennium, there is no such thing as a completely indestructible, thoroughly maintenance-free window curtain. But who's complaining?

Compared with what used to go on in the days of boiled starch, curtain frames, and/or the hours over a hot iron, today's curtains are the least of a housekeeper's worries.

This should come as particularly pleasant tidings to the increasing population of homeowners whose windows are no longer mere openings in walls but glass walls in themselves, requiring to be decently covered by night and sometimes by day.

Curtains must still be washed. But if you stop to think about it, even their generally easy, shrinkless washability is a step in a carefree direction from the old-time business of having to have them dry-cleaned or risking all sorts of calamitous effects from laundering.



The really heartening news, however, is the restful trend toward fabrics which need not—and in one case cannot—be ironed. This no-ironing clause applies especially to Fiberglas (see on page 90 how well groomed the ruffles of an unironed curtain can be), nylon, and Orlon. These last two are sometimes improved by a touching-off with an iron at the hemlines, but for the most part the laundering process consists of dunking, rinsing, and hanging back at the window to dry. It is true of all these that by the very nature of their smooth, rodlike fibers, they tend not to acquire soil and stains easily. They shed water, so aren't likely to go as droopy as the weather on humid days. They also shed dirt readily in the washing process. To date, Fiberglas and Orlon are the least prone of any fabric to sun deterioration.

Incidentally, Fiberglas curtains as of 1950 should not be confused with earlier products of the same name which used to buckle, bend, or practically stand alone instead of draping luxuriously as curtains should. Now, through a process which gives the fibers a silky softness, they hang softly, in lush folds.

Curtains are usually in marquisette weaves, in white or fragile-looking pastel colors, but they are also being woven in heavier, more complex weaves for casement cloths, and are frequently printed in decorative patterns. Most people need to be reminded, though, that Fiberglas wears best when it's hung on a stationary rod. On a traverse rod, the constant abrasion of opening and shutting the curtains may weaken the glass fibers.

The chemical people have been coming up with surer, improved dyes for nylon, so you can now find that fine stuff in a great variety of pretty vivid colors. It is also being finished to have a more lasting crispness. The cautious word is still to use fabrics woven of lustrous yarns at windows, for dull-lustre yarn, although it makes up into some mighty handsome, gauzy effects, doesn't withstand the sun's scorching rays very well. Nylon keeps its shape best when it has been heat-set during the manufacture of the fabric. On this subject the consumer has no one's word to go by but the shopkeeper's. Or you can reassure yourself that a reliable store will stock only that nylon which has been properly set. In any case, ask about this.

Orlon you will be seeing in increasingly generous quantity now that more of this tough, sun-resistant, weather-resistant yarn is being made. It is showing up at the moment in tailored marquisette commercially made curtains, but the yarn itself is said to be so strong and so amenable to experimentation on mechanical looms that there's no telling what Orlon's future holds.

And speaking of the future, certain new synthetic fibers are destined to increase its carefree quality. Specifically, these are duPont's Fiber V and Chemstrand's new fiber on which final experimentation is still going on.

Even the curtains which definitely do require ironing are actually easier to launder than former curtains ever were. Cottons, rayons, and combinations of both have been given finishes which incline them to shed soil easily, to wash amiably, and to keep their crispness and shape through lots of laundering, needing no starching and no stretching on those murderously needled frames which used to be standard equipment in every

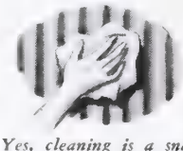
To a mother whose teen-age daughter wants a room of her own

No conflict between big sister and little sister—thanks to the "Modernfold" movable wall. And see how the smaller "Modernfold" door at the bedroom opening actually creates more space for living. No area required for door swing! Every square inch is usable.

Mother, if you have a growing daughter who wants a secluded spot in which to study . . . a private nook for teen-age get-togethers . . . It's easy to give her that room of her own . . . with a beautiful "Modernfold" accordion-type door.

a "movable" wall! You see, Mother, a large "Modernfold" door is actually a "movable wall" . . . a natural for dividing a large bedroom into two smaller ones! There will be cozy privacy . . . and whenever you need to use the rooms as one . . . fold the door quickly and easily against the wall.



save space, too! And do you want more floor and wall space for placing furniture . . . hanging pictures . . . for happier, roomier living? Then, consider smaller "Modernfold" doors throughout the house in place of space-wasting swinging doors. "Modernfold" doors save about 8 square feet . . . because they don't swing—they fold like an accordion.

and so easy to own! Best of all, is the common-sense price! You'll be delightfully surprised how little it costs to make two rooms out of one . . . create more space for living. Get full details today. Look in your classified telephone book under "doors" for our installing distributor. Or mail coupon.

Beautiful, Durable Easy to clean

See the hidden, rigid frame of steel. No wonder a "Modernfold" door gives you smooth, worry-free service . . . year after year.

Yes, cleaning is a snap! Just use soap and water—and the vinyl covering remains lovely and lustrous. It's fire-resistant—will not crack, peel or fade. It comes, incidentally, in a variety of gorgeous decorator's colors . . . to blend with any color scheme.

DRAWING BY VINCENT FURNO

Moisture-proof, fire-resistant, long-lived, and tough, the plastic vapor barrier in this house is stapled directly onto studs before plaster is applied. Since it comes in several widths and thicknesses, whole houses can be wrapped in it with few seams.

This was done by designing each element—walls, floors, windows and mechanical equipment—for performance as well as for appearance.

A climate-wise structure

The concrete that melds this house into the earth—and helps give you trouble-free storage space in the basement—is from the Atlas Portland Cement Co., N.Y. Open-web steel joists from the Truscon Steel Co. of Youngstown, O., make possible the free circulation of heated air between floor and ceiling. (See sketch at bottom of page 125.) All wood sills are "Wolmanized" against decay and termites, by the American Lumber and Treating Co., Chicago, Ill.

Plywood for exterior wall surfacing comes from a local member of the Douglas Fir Plywood Association, Tacoma, Wash. The fieldstone that gives this house its native Pennsylvania quality is quarried right in Pennsylvania, and the cross-section on page 125 shows you how to use it.

Interior walls of all baths and the kitchen are surfaced with Vitrolite structural glass by Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co., Toledo, O. Other walls are of plaster, from U.S. Gypsum Co., Chicago.

All bedrooms are floored with Kencork cork tile—the kitchen and baths with Kentile asphalt tile —both by David E. Kennedy, Inc. of Brooklyn, N.Y. Oak floo elsewhere is by the E. L. B Co., Memphis, Tenn.

How moisture and heat were mastered

Where summer heat is a p lem, surface your roof to re the sun. Here it's done wit glare or that "industrial" look, ing embossed aluminum roofin the Reynolds Metals Co. of L ville, Ky. Aluminum was spec also for all flashing, gutters, downspouts.

Where year-round humidity stitutes a problem, include in walls a moisture barrier to pre water vapor from sneaking thr the pores, condensing wi walls. eating, cooling, ventilating

The boiler that keeps this house rm as toast, and incidentally events ice and snow in the en-way, is by the Fitzgibbons iler Co., Inc. of New York. Hot-ter circulation is monitored by ntrols from Bell & Gossett Co., rton Grove, Ill., as commanded thermostatic controls from the nneapolis-Honeywell Regulator ., Minneapolis. Built into the dy wall is a Chrysler Airtemp m air conditioner, by Chrysler rp., Dayton, Ohio, which supplies the dehumidifier which keeps everything snug and dry in the basement storage room. The Ilg Electric Ventilating Co. of Chicago makes the fans we specified for attic ventilation and kitchen exhaust. All paints were manufactured by the Martin-Senour Co. of Chicago.

Bathroom plumbing fixtures are from the Kohler Co., Kohler, Wis., connected to wrought-iron pipes from A. M. Byers Co., Pittsburgh. All lighting fixtures are from Lightolier Co. of Jersey City, N. J., with electrical wiring by General Electric Co. of Bridgeport, Conn.

Whenever one of the town's helors wanted to spend a few re hours in the shade of a nde, he'd choose June. When-r an aircraft tycoon decided to ertain influential Army officers 'd phone June. She was the ennial Escort of visiting fire-n. She seemed always available, . on these frequent occasions of sculine demand, she would trot to Ciro's or the Mocambo, ssed in a gown which fit like a burn, and she would dance, le, talk, and proceed to drink escort under the table.

t the Rudolph Haines party, example, she did exactly that ne. Rudolph was my producer because I was new in Holly-d at the time, he got me a date June. I shall never forget the k of first sight. She was wear-a midriff evening dress which drawn with spectacular tight-around her curved extensions. was heavily perfumed. She too much gold jewelry. Eye-es and fingernails were too lac-ed and too long. And when I her on the dance floor at Ciro's, snuggled up against me so ely that I expected the print of dress to come off on my white er jacket.

ver double scotches I learned she was thirty-one, weighed pounds, and had a convertible "which means, darling, that I change my hair at will from de to auburn to brunette." Just f I hadn't noticed!

She told me, after I solemnly promised not to laugh, that her real name was Clara Clapsaddle (honestly), and that she came from Racine, Wisconsin. I asked what she'd done back there—a question you are supposed never to ask in Hollywood—and she told me she used to model. Having visited Racine, I doubted that.

The more June talked, the more I drank, largely because her conversation was as interesting as a laundry list, and because I could stand neither her voice, which was brassy, nasal, and rasping, nor the trite and vulgar colloquialisms with which she punctuated her speech.

All of this is the truth, so help me! And that's why her metamorphosis, her growth into a position of prominence today is so amazing, so unbelievable.

The complete change in her development, in her character, in her manner, was brought about by a house, the same one she now occupies. But in telling you that, I'm afraid I'm getting ahead of my story. Let me stay in sequence and say that after the Haines party, I ran into June several times, mostly at the studio where she'd talked Rudolph into giving her a small part in our picture. As usual, she was loud and crass and vulgar. "When are we gonna tear a herring?" she'd ask, or, "You haven't soured on me, have you, angel?" or "How's my favorite character?"

A year later, by concentrating on the right men in the industry, June Waters became a big star, so big in fact that she was empowered to choose her own writers. Oddly enough, she chose me to punch up the script of "Advance on Romance," a movie especially dedicated to all the twelve-year-olds in the world. And it was while we were working on this, that she first brought up the subject of a house. She was tired, she said, of spending her life in apartments. She wanted to build a "real" home in Bel Air, one of the exclusive residential suburbs of Los Angeles. She asked if I knew a good architect, and I, chiefly to help the guy eat, recommended Alan Scott.

A tall, bony-faced, pipe-smoking bachelor of forty, Scott was the best architect I knew. He had built a small house for me that cost $5,000, and he really loved architecture. He had talent, integrity, and, unfortunately, very few clients. Most of the time, he worked for other architects, for the smooth personality boys who charm wealthy middle-aged women into building homes they don't need.

Scott's one passion in life, his one ultimate hope, was that some day he might earn enough money to build for himself a house on the plans of which he had labored 15 long years.

When I gave June his telephone number, I honestly never expected her to ring him, but ring him she did. I ran into Alan at the club a week later, and gratefully he told me about it.

"Know that house I've always wanted to build?" he asked. "Well thanks to you, I'm doing it for June Waters."

For a moment I thought Alan was kidding. But he obviously meant it.

"I don't believe it." I said. "I know June. She's the type that would go for a lot of glass brick and hot colors and blackamoor lamps. What the devil would she want with a house like yours?"

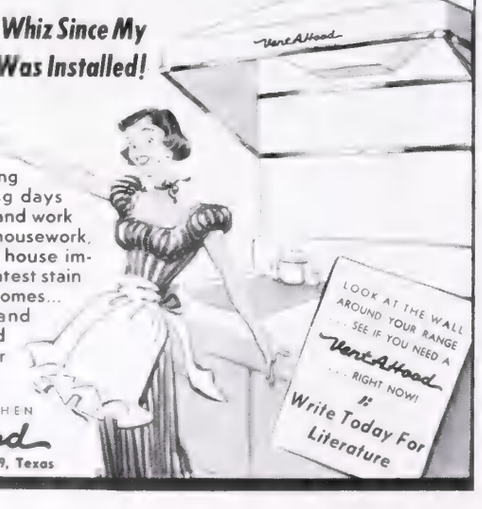
Scott grinned. "Matter of fact," he admitted, "she didn't want it. I want it. I want it so damn badly that I sold her on it. I told her the house would bring out her true, retiring beauty."

I put my hand on Scott's forearm and shook my head mournfully. "And to think," I said, "that I recommended you as an honest architect."

"I am," Alan insisted. "A few months after June Waters lives in that house, she'll become a lady."

The very thought struck me as outlandish and I laughed.

"I'm dead serious about that," Alan continued. "I have a theory about houses and people and I've seen it work. Take a tramp and let her marry into a good home and overnight she becomes the watchdog of the community's morals. Take June Waters and let her run a simple, unpretentious house and she'll lose her tough veneer like that." He snapped his fingers. "You know the story about Picasso and Gertrude Stein, don't you?"



I said I didn't.

"When Gertrude Stein first came to Paris, Picasso painted her portrait. She was very proud of it and hung it in her living room. Friends of hers who saw it, however, were disturbed. They went to Picasso and said, 'Pablo, we've just seen that portrait you did of Gertrude. She doesn't look like that at all.' Picasso smiled at them. 'Never mind,' he said, 'she soon will.' "

Anyway, the house was started during the war. No sooner was the foundation finished than the Government forbade all private construction. No one could say when

MINOR DETAILS ARE EQUALLY WELL PLANNED

There are no dark and dismal "backstair" areas in the truly American house, since we rate family convenience more important than mere show. Even less important stairways are well lighted, well designed. This beautiful one is in the Havens house designed by Harwell Harris.

More and more, the food served in these houses tends to be expressive of the abundance of American life, with its preparation and serving based on scientific knowledge of health.

American houses have a quality of self-assurance which comes from the fact that they are intent on their own ends. The truly American house is primarily designed to meet the needs of the people who may live in it. So, its primary concern is not with what someone else may think.

This slight shift in emphasis has made an enormous change in the appearance of this evolving American house—much greater than you might think possible by so slight a shift in aim.

In contrast to the truly American house are three types which cannot qualify. They are the ill-mannered, adolescent houses, so beloved of young designers, whose primary aim is quite evidently to be so original that they will shock and thereby get publicity. Then there are the houses whose chief aim seems to be to try to conform to a design thesis (or artistic cult), rather than provide for the lives of their occupants. (As, for instance, the houses which insist on ribbon windows regardless of whether floor plan or orientation calls for them.) A third group of houses, which we cannot consider American, is the group which exhibits poverty of intention. These are expensive houses which show a lack of regard for privacy and the amenities of life. They show a lamentable form of inferior planning, and meagerness of invention which might conceivably be pardoned in the lowest cost housing for slum clearance, but nowhere else. Such a house reminds one of nothing so much as a "gold-plated rabbit hutch." None of these expresses American ideals.

It is also true that we are still building many houses that are not truly American. You should learn to recognize these, too: the houses with dark, impossible-to-keep-clean kitchens; houses with interminable stairs, dark, unventilated rooms and wasteful halls; houses wit provision for the normal acti of a family. There are the h with inadequacies and incon ences of every sort, that do recognize the full rights of th dividual to live as well as income and his times permit.

These sad, half-a-loaf buil display the fact that they not the outgrowth of democ thought, not worthy to be c American. By their very stru they condemn their inhabitan a mediocre life. These usually into existence because bui (and sometimes architects) take advantage of the ignoran people, who haven't had a ch to "live better" and, therefor gullible and undemanding they enter home ownership fo first time.

How American a house is nothing to do with money or There are, and have been, rich and beautiful houses whi not embody our ideas of the life. These are houses in the children are banished t nursery, not sharing the life house; houses which show a disregard for those who have

e work: houses which limit the tivities of those who live in them, uses that force a difficult pattern life, which imprison their own-s, rather than free them. These uses loudly proclaim the fact at they are not American. For to American, living means freedom live easily, well, conveniently, well as beautifully.

he houses which are either the forerunners of, or the actual ex-ession of the American spirit in chitecture, are widely scattered time and place. We have spoken the work of Richardson in New ngland and of McKim, Meade & hite. In the South, the American irit begins to shine through the g hospitable-looking houses in hich the tall porches of the Greek vival house were broken up into series of usable verandas—homes ll somewhat classic in detail but tirely un-Greek in spirit.

The first real flowering of Amer-an domestic architecture occurred the Middle West in the shadow the classic revival which re-lted from the success of the orld's Columbian Exposition in 93. The most noted of the Chi-go domestic architects was Frank oyd Wright, but George Maher, alter Burleigh Griffen, William Gray Purcell, George Elmslie, Dwight Perkins, Marian Mahony Griffen, and many others were members of the Chicago group. On the Pacific Coast the same forces which were behind the Chicago School were behind the work of Bernard R. Maybeck and Greene & Greene. On a lower aesthetic level, but still a result of the effort to express the American way of life in an American house, were the California Bungalow and the Craftsman house, both of which swept the country between 1904 and 1916.

Ironically, our indigenous American architecture of the last century has been almost totally neglected by architectural historians, so we know relatively little about it. But all the evidence points to the fact that it has been more influential than we have believed.

As our current modern house designing matures and crystallizes into sharper forms, it is clear that there is a continuity between our early housing and the better houses of today. But make no mistake: our skillful, modern architects are not copying old forms. Rather, they are moved by the same social values. Thanks to greater technical facilities in materials and equipment, they are able to carry the ideals of our American life to a higher development than the early masters. Any similarity between old and new is due primarily to our continuing national standards and values which are still the same —perhaps even more intensified.

WHAT IS A TRULY AMERICAN HOUSE?

Unless our national ideals are entirely reversed, the truly American house will continue to mature and to spread until it becomes the only type built in the United States.

If you want to reproduce the spirit of a Renaissance French court, that's your right as an American. But if you allow your house to proclaim the fact, don't be surprised if the news is met with raised eyebrows and amusement, and you are pitied as an "escapist" who can't cope with life today. And don't be surprised if your family shows a distaste for such a home.

Ever since the first colonist set foot on these shores, an American way of life has been slowly developing. This has been reflected in the character of our houses, which has changed as our ideas of how we wanted to live have changed. Our houses must continue to change if they are to remain ours. No matter how completely a house is identified with our past, it cannot now be our house unless it is molded by our present.

The American house of today is that house which is most fitted to the life of today. But it is also a house which clearly expresses the fundamental American aspirations and ideals about the dignity of every man, which are still pretty much the same as they were in 1776. The more clearly your house expresses these ideals, the more it will help you to achieve an American way of life.

We must learn to look for the meaning of everything in the object itself. We must learn what things have to say to us and about us.

Let us look our houses, our furniture, our gardens squarely in the eye and demand: What are you doing for me? What are you telling people about me and my family? Are you, or are you not, expressing my ideals of American family life —the best ideals that have ever flourished in the history of man?

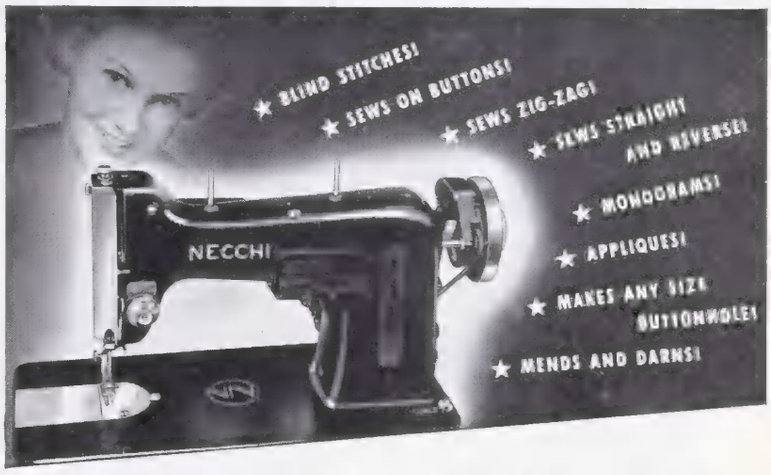
First, you need a large house that has high ceilings. The system works beautifully in Cathedrals. The summer tourist in Italy soon finds that out. It does not work so well for the small, compact house—and our houses are getting more compact all the time. The reason lies in certain mathematical facts: the bigger house gives you proportionately a very much bigger reservoir of cool air to last you through the day.

Secondly, you need a climate with dry summer heat, not muggy heat. In Washington, D. C., for example, you want a breeze so badly that you are bound to open the windows—and then, of course, the warm daytime air pushes out the cool night air.

Thirdly, you need a climate with cool nights. This is almost the same as saying a dry climate, because only dry clear air cools off really well at night. The humid summer air of the Eastern Seaboard and the Gulf Coast stays quite warm at night, too. So, in many parts of the United States, you can't capture enough night coolness to last you through the day. Net result: The summer problem is not the winter problem in reverse; it is a different problem. It calls for some thought.



What is it really that makes a house hot in summer? It isn't only the warm summer air. Practically anywhere in the United States, you can be fairly comfortable outdoors in the shade of a tree. What bothers you in a house is that your own house—the walls and the ceilings—is warm. You know how radiant panel heating works. A quite mild heat in the floor or the ceiling gives you just as much heating effect as strong heat from a radiator would give you. Well, in summer, when the sun and hot summer air heat up the materials of your house, you have just exactly such a set-up. You sit there on a 95° day with the heat on.

That is summer discomfort in houses. Our houses, most of them, make the indoor weather much hotter than the outdoor weather is. And that is what insulation must prevent in summer: this torture of warm walls and warm ceilings shining heat at you. It does not need to keep out the 90° warmth

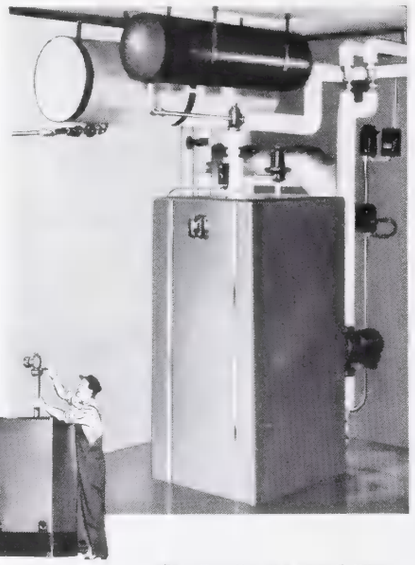
"WE WERE AWFULLY TIRED OF ALL THIS . . .

"Too hot one minute . . . too cold the next . . . and never enough hot water to bathe a bird!"



so we converted our old hot water heating system to

B & G *Hydro-Flo Heating

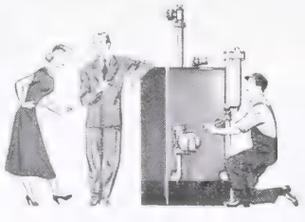
You don't have to build a new home to have the comforts of B & G Hydro-Flo Heating! The same Hydro-Flo equipment used in today's most modern homes can be applied to your present hot water heating system. Thereafter, you'll have all the benefits of automatic forced hot water heating. Heat is supplied instantly when needed . . . smoothly modulated to meet every change in the weather. No chills—no money-wasting overheating. Besides, more hot water than you can use for kitchen, laundry and bath.

It's as simple as this—



1 First, your heating contractor installs a B & G Booster Pump. This is the unit that provides forced circulation under accurate automatic control.

2 Next comes the B & G Flo-Control Valve. This valve remains tightly closed except when the Booster Pump is running, preventing heat from rising into the radiators. Hence, it protects against an "over-ride" in temperature and also permits summer operation of the Water Heater.

3 Finally, the B & G Water Heater. From this unit comes an ever-ready supply of hot water every month of the year. You never need worry about expense because this is the low-cost way to produce an abundance of hot water. Always plenty for automatic washers and showers.

Your heating contractor will show you how easily you can convert to B & G Hydro-Flo Heating.

of the summer air, but it must stop the terrific heat of the sunshine (and sky glare) from heating up the surfaces that surround you.

For example, it makes a difference in summer how you insulate your roof. In many houses now, the insulation lies right on the attic floor. This is the most economical arrangement for winter. You put your insulation on the smallest surface, and, therefore, you get, per dollar spent, the thickest layer. And thickness is what counts in insulation! Also, that way, you don't have to heat the attic space. But for hot summer evenings, this arrangement is not best. Here is what happens:

The sun shines on your roof (which is probably dark-colored), and heats it up: no mild 90° business here, but more nearly 140° to 160°. As the roof gets hot, the attic gets hot. Even if it is well ventilated, it still gets hot. Ventilation can't dissipate all this radiant heat. The hot roof radiates heat right down on the attic floor, where the insulation lies. So, the insulation gets warm. This is inevitable. Insulation is, after all, no magic stuff. It gets warm, when heated, just as anything else does. It merely takes a little longer. After being blasted with 160° heat from one side all day, with 90° summer air on the other side, it's bound to get warm.

And then, of course, it stays warm for a while. You see, there is a day-and-night factor, a time factor, in the summer problem that isn't in the winter problem. The heat outdoors lets up as the sun goes down. So you open all the windows, and you expect to be cool, but you are not. Well, get a stepladder and reach up and feel your ceiling. It is warm to the touch. Not hot, but mildly warm, and that's enough. That's all it would be if it were a radiant heating sort of ceiling, and it were winter. The radiant heat it sends down bothers you doubly when you lie down to sleep. You then expose the whole length of yourself to these heat rays. So you have your time factor. During the day, your insulation kept you cooler than you would have been without it. But in the evening and during the first half of the night, the insulation keeps you hotter than you would be without it—unless you do something about keeping the insulation cool.

To keep this night-time carr over of heat from bothering yo you must put two things betwee yourself and your insulation: (1 Ventilation, to wash away the war air that forms under and over th insulation. (2) A "radiatio shield" of some kind, to catch th heat rays which the warmed-up i sulation sends down. This is o wisdom in New Mexico or O Mexico or Arizona. People the were experts in summer heat co trol; they had to be, in that h region. Their old-style house ha a roof on top—and, of course, got extremely hot. Underneath an attic space perhaps three fe high, with air-holes for throug ventilation; and underneath tha a lightly built structure that forn ed the ceiling of the rooms. B the air-holes let hot air out of th attic space, and kept it from ge ting too oven-like. And the fal ceiling caught the heat rays th came down from the hot roof.

The theoretical-ideal set-up f hot weather insulating would be layer of insulation above a lay of moving air, repeated as ma times as you could afford.

For hot summer climates, Hou BEAUTIFUL's Optimum Standar recommend that you put additio insulation against the under-si of your roof. This uses more th twice as much as putting it on t attic floor only—the present sta dard practice. It also means y have to take extra care so y won't get condensation and mo ture there. It is more of an engi eering job. But it pays off in su mer. The insulation keeps the (treme heat of the roof from comi through too much. Ventilation

Editor's Note

Insulation is, obviously, not the only way to keep a house com fortable. There are other device whose functions interlock with the work of insulation: adequate heating plants with proper zon control air cooling devices, shade trees, evaporation roofs, dehumid ifiers, attic fans, and the like But in the interest of clarity, w are not bringing them into thi discussion. We have discussed them in the past, and will do s again in the future. Understand ing what insulation does, per se is very helpful, even primary, t understanding how to combine i with other Climate Control devices the attic carries away the warm air. The attic floor (ceiling of the rooms below) catches the heat rays which the warmed insulation gives off in the evening. And if you live where there are also cold winters, you'll have insulation in the attic floor anyway—for its winter-time job of keeping heat in and saving you the job of heating the attic. (See Optimum Standards.) It may heat the outside surface of your west wall to perhaps 120°—hot to the touch.

Naturally, once this terrific heat has got into the structural materials, it takes effective insulation, plus the right installation, to keep it from creeping all the way into the house. Now, the best way to keep a house cool in summer is to throw the sun heat back before it can heat up even the outside of the house. This can be done.

You can throw back a lot of sun heat simply by the color of your roof or wall. A black roof throws back almost none of the sun heat that hits it. A red roof throws back only about 25%. A white roof can throw back about 80% of the sun heat. It stays very much cooler. So does a roof covered with reflective aluminum (especially made for roofing).

Much the same goes for the walls of the house, especially the west wall which is always the hottest. Red brick will bounce back about one-third of the direct sun heat it receives. White paint, white plaster, or white wash will bounce back about 60% of the heat; aluminum up to 80%.

An aluminum wall? It sounds grotesque. But you begin to see them around. You see them, as yet, mostly on sheds or other work buildings. Such aluminum buildings can be delightfully cool.

But the thing to remember is this: The color of your walls and roof is just as important as your insulation. The early Americans were not so dumb when they started our American tradition of white houses.

Now that shiny stuff—aluminum foil. How does it work? How do you use it? If aluminum is such a good conductor of heat, then how can a paper-thin sheet of it serve as insulation?

Try an experiment at the breakfast table. Move your finger slowly toward your chromium-plated electric percolator. You get no warning feel of heat. Then you touch it—ouch! With an ordinary pot full of hot coffee, you would feel the heat when your finger was still adds space · beauty · comfort to your home

Knocking out walls is not the only way to get more "living room" in your home. Knocking out space-grabbing radiators, and replacing them with modern Dunham Baseboard Heating, is often just as effective . . . and a lot easier on your budget.

Easy and economical to install, Dunham Baseboard Heating adds beauty and charm to any home—enables you to decorate your rooms and arrange furniture as you please.

And for comfort! . . . you've never known anything like it. Heat distributed through the baseboard flows evenly into every corner of every room. You get added comfort from lower fuel bills, too.

To find out what Dunham Baseboard Heating can do for your present home . . . or the one you're planning . . . send for our new booklet, "The Magic of Baseboard Heating." Please enclose 10¢ to cover cost of handling.

an inch away. You would get a warning: "Don't touch. It's hot." This is because the pot, like any warm thing except mirror-like metals, sends out heat rays. A shiny percolator sends out practically no heat rays. That, of course, is why they make it shiny. When a thing sends out heat rays, it thereby cools off. When you stop the heat radiation, you thereby stop an important heat loss. The shine, in other words, is a form of insulation.

That is one-half of the idea of reflective insulation. The other half comes in a minute but, first, be sure you understand the background. There are always three main ways in which a warm thing cools off. Heat creeps away by "conduction" into a colder material. For example, when you stand on a cool pavement, heat creeps from your feet through your shoes into the pavement, and you get cold feet. Heat is also washed away by cool air. "Convection" is the technical word for this. Example: The wind picks heat off you and chills you. Thirdly, heat jumps away, as heat radiation, from any warm thing over to anything that is cooler. For example, heat jumps from the fireplace directly to your face, because the fire is hotter than your skin. It jumps from your skin directly to a cold window pane in winter, because your skin is warmer than the window.

Even though it may seem otherwise, heat always moves in one direction only—from a warmer to a cooler substance. Never from cool to warm.

Well, metal foil insulation does nothing much about the first and second ways of heat loss except incidentally. Its main job is to stop radiation. A reflective surface, properly manufactured, acts as a barrier for radiant heat. Funny thing is, it doesn't necessarily have to be shiny to be reflective, either. Not every shiny metal surface is heat-reflective; not every heat-reflective metal surface is shiny. The reflective power depends on methods of manufacture and the nature of the surface—not on looks. So your eye cannot be the judge.

Reflective insulation is a two-way barrier. It stops heat rays going and coming. That is the other half of the story. When heat rays hit a shiny metal surface, they can't land on it; they bounce right back. For example, you can buy a shiny chromium-plated bucket to ke ice-cubes in. One of the reasons keeps the cubes cool is because throws back the heat rays wh pounce on it from all directions a warm room. In the case of percolator, the shiny metal surf keeps the heat in; in this case, same sort of surface keeps the h out. That's the idea of "reflect insulation."

How do you use it? You can it much as you would use flu insulation; and that is, so far, customary use. Go back to the h low air-space in your wall. have explained that such a holl space is not as effective as it mi be, because of the drafts that velop in it. We have explained h fluffy material stops these dra We have not explained another r son why a simple air-space is fully effective. It's this: Heat r jump from the warm side, acr the air-space, over to the cool si through the air. Now, a reflec foil placed midway in the air-sp of a frame wall stops that. Ri away, your air-space becomes ab six times as good an insulator it was before when it was em

But remember the main ic Reflective foil stops only radi heat—the kind of heat that ju across an open space. If its surf touches any other material, its flectivity is diminished. It must ways face an air-space of at l one-eighth of an inch, and th quarters of an inch is optimun

So, you see, there are as m kinds of insulation as there types of knives for kitchen w But just as you can't make a c with flour alone, so you can't m comfort with insulation alone. must combine its use with other necessary ingredients: g heating plants, fans (and coo devices, if you can afford suc thing), the right colors in pa and roofs, awnings, enough ven tion. And you must use these o ingredients in the ways and pl they can do good.

Insulation, by itself, is a g thing. But it is not magic, un used in the right combinations with the proper corollary aids your particular climate's probl But used right, as outlined in Optimum Standards on pages 129 you can take most of the s out of your local climate. page 184 for a list of insul makers, grouped according types and uses.)

Decorator's Diary

Highlights from a decorator's notebook—as good as a first-hand shopping trip through the home-furnishings stores and showrooms

Saw a new chair at Jens Risom's showroom that's going to settle a long-standing difference I've had with the McLaughlin's. A total of one sofa and two easy chairs is not at all adequate for the living room of their place in Smithtown—not with the full house they always have from May to November. But they've been adamant in their determination not to buy any more chairs until the children have reached the harmless-to-upholstery age. Jack is fourteen now and about at the point where he can be trusted most of the time. But there are three younger ones ranging downward to eight, plus a hoard of neighbors.

When the McLaughlins see the Risom chair, though, I'm sure they'll give in, since it's as nearly childproof as a chair can be. The seat has a reversible foam-rubbe cushion with a removable fabri cover fitted with a slide fastene Likewise, the back cushion, whic attaches to the frame with bi snap fasteners. They can order a extra set of covers, or two or thre of them, when they buy the chai or any time thereafter. And the won't have to worry about wha happens to the arms, because the are of good solid birch. It's one o those nice in-between chairs, com fortable enough for anyone wh isn't deliberately planning snooze, but light enough to b moved around easily. SCIENTIFIC TESTS PROVE that a new automatic Gas water-heater heats 3 times as many gallons of water in an hour as any other all-automatic system. That's why Gas is so important to automatic clothes washing. It gives you enough high-temperature hot water to soak, scrub and rinse a whole week's wash . . . then dries it to quick, fluffy perfection . . . all in less than a morning. No wonder modern laundry planners always begin with an automatic Gas water-heater and end with an automatic Gas clothes-dryer!

HIGH-LOW TEMPERATURE CONTROL. Only Gas is fast and flexible enough to give you the exact temperature you want when you want it! Snap-action thermostats on automatic Gas water-heaters respond to any setting . . . from 170° for germ-killing automatic dish-washing . . . to 130° for regular household use.

"New Freedom Gas Kitchen-Laundry" combination—featuring a new automatic Gas water-heater and new automatic Gas clothes-dryer.

DAY AND NIGHT SERVICE—every day in the year! A new automatic Gas water-heater never waits until the middle of the night to replace the hot water that went in your morning bath. Never leaves you high-and-dry because of slow fuel deliveries or sudden storms!

NOW! MORE DOLLAR AND SENSE ECONOMY! Gallon for gallon—new automatic Gas water-heaters cost less to run, less to buy and install . . . are more long-lasting and trouble-free . . . than any other completely automatic water-heaters ever made!

Maximum saving with Gas water-heaters over any other separate all-automatic water-heaters. Based on fuel costs in 34 key cities from Maine to California. In all but 7 cities Gas costs decidedly less for water-heating.

The s to use the patterned version orders or panels to accent the or to mark off different areas room, or to set off a specially tant feature like a piano or place. There's really no end number of tricks you can with it if you have the wits nk them up. Three patterns available now — "Chinese ." "Classic Leaf" which is informal than it sounds, and se" which is a pleasant little tric. And they come in ten colors including a blue, a ium red, three greens, three s, and two grays. For a really l effect, you could combine r three tones of one color in nderfully subtle monochro- scheme.

Noticed some more of those higher coffee tables at Manor House. Look to be about 21 or 22 inches from the floor. Dunbar has some new ones of this height, too, and I must admit they are a welcome change from the 12- and 15-inch tables that sooner or later I'm sure will give us all curvature of the spine (except of course the youngsters who sit on the floor). But the low tables do look very nice in a room, which is doubtless why they have been so popular. The higher ones, I find, are much harder to place. Talked this over with Edward Wormley who says the secret lies in keeping away from symmetrical arrangements. If you center a 21-inch table in front of a sofa, it is likely to look out of scale. But move it a foot or two toward one end and it will look right as rain. Another reminder to keep out of those decorating ruts!

Took Jane Bannister over to the Dunbar showroom to pick out the coffee table that her Aunt Ida promised as a wedding present. At least I'm sure a coffee table is what Aunt Ida had in mind when she said: "You'll find the sweetest joy of home is having a cup of tea in front of your own fire." But young Jane interpreted that in her own way. Like so many of the youngsters these days she's a confirmed floor-sitter, and what should we find at Dunbar but a set of three cushions that are meant for sitting on the floor. They're made of foam rubber, about the shape and thickness of sofa seat cushions. But the fabric covers are hinged together, so that the cushions can be piled up to make an ottoman, stretched out to make a mattress, or set at angles to each other to make a seat with a back. "One for Jim and one for me," said Jane. "We'll put them on either side of the fireplace and that's where we'll sit to drink our tea." Aunt Ida will be surprised, I'm sure. But she can hardly put up an argument.

YOU INSULATE your house only once; the job must be done right the first time. And when it's done right, you'll say, "Why did I wait so long!"

Yes, why keep on throwing away up to 30¢ of every dollar you spend on fuel? That's almost one-third of your fuel budget, totally wasted.

You can save that money, up to 30¢ on every fuel dollar . . . and have more comfort besides . . . simply by insulating with Johns-Manville Rock Wool, "blown" into the hollow exterior walls and attic spaces of your home.

BUT REMEMBER—your choice of a contractor is all-important. You can't SEE the difference between good and poor work in insulation.

You can be assured of good work when you call the approved Johns-Manville "Blown" Home Insulation Contractor. He is trained to "blow" J-M Rock Wool scientifically, in full measure, to give you utmost benefits. Ask him about easy monthly payments—FHA approved terms.

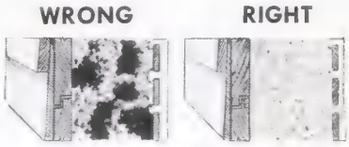
WRONG RIGHT



The J-M Contractor is trained to cover attic floor areas like these evenly, leaving no "thin" spots between joists to rob you of fuel and comfort.

WRONG RIGHT

He completely fills all the hollow exterior walls and the heat-leaking spaces above and below the windows.

WRONG RIGHT

He blows Rock Wool to the right density in sidewalls, to prevent voids or "empty pockets" that leak heat and reduce efficiency.

FREE Write today for FREE copy of 24-page book, "Comfort that Pays for Itself." Tells the whole fascinating story of the insulating "wool" made of rock.

Tells how this amazing fireproof material is installed by air pressure . . . how it protects health, saves fuel, keeps houses up to 15° cooler in summer. Address: Johns-Manville, Dept. HB-9, Box 290, New York 16, N. Y.

GARDEN BOOKS WORTH READING

How to Increase Plants, by Alfred E. Hottes. A. T. De La Mare Co., Inc., New York. $3.

Professor Hottes has added one more excellent book to his already long list of such volumes. Not only is this book written in a simple, direct, easy-to-read fashion but he has made complicated procedures easy by means of questions and answers. He tells how long you can keep seed and how, how to multiply plants by cuttings, how to graft, and how to share your plants with your friends and neighbors. The last chapter is given over to a useful list of plants and the various ways to increase them. It is a book which will be a definite aid to both amateur and professional. —E.F.S.

Garden in Your Window by Jean Hersey; Prentice-Hall, Inc., New York; $3.00.

Those who enjoyed her I Like Gardening will find Jean Hersey's latest book equally pleasant reading. She makes plants come alive. She grows plants for the fun involved, which is as it should be. Worry about what awful troubles might possibly overtake the plants is a disease of the beginner, for with maturity comes the author's easy way of taking garden problems in stride. For example, you will find her ideas on pest control very workable. —J.E.H.

The Gardener's Travel Book by E. I. Farrington; Oxford University Press, New York.

Even non-gardeners shouldn't travel without a copy of this book in their cars.

Mr. Farrington's guide is so complete that you will probably learn much about the gardens of places you feel you know well.

Gardens are listed by cities. Information includes admission charges for public places, whom to contact for arrangements to see noteworthy private gardens, and suggestions as to the best time of year to see each garden.

I only wish that Mr. Farrington had given street addresses for all the gardens (he does for some). Local residents often are mighty poor sources for information on how to find places. —J.E.H.

Florist Crop Production and Marketing, by Kenneth Post; Orange-Judd; 1950; $10.

Probably few horticultural books exist that have so thorough a scientific documentation. Certainly no American garden book can claim so much factual proof, so little that must rely merely on the author's opinion from his observations in the field. Dr. Post has been in charge of greenhouse research at Cornell University for nearly 20 years. His annual short-course programs for florists draw a national audience of the top-drawer florists.

If you want to know the how and why of any phase of growing plants in greenhouse growing, this is the book you need. Even if you have no greenhouse, reading Florist Crop Production and Marketing will make gardening more interesting and you a better gardener. Every real garden club (the dirt garden club variety) needs a copy in its library. The cost is justified even if only the program chairman uses the book. He or she can dig out numerous fascinating, useful programs. I say "dig out" because this is no book for casual reading. It is a reference book. —J.E.H.

The Scented Garden by Eleanour Sinclair Rohde. Medici Society Ltd., London.

If you like scent in the garden you will like this book. Although it is English, being a new and enlarged edition of a book which has gone through five printings in the Old World, there is much in it which will be of assistance to American gardeners. It is the most complete and practical book on the subject I have seen.

Although written in the rambling, chatty style characteristic of so many English books, it is replete with facts as well as history and personal anecdotes. Not just the commonly-known plants are discussed but many we consider for their fragrance: crocus, violet, species tulips, and shrubs such as crab apples, fothergillas, corylopsis, and the various honeysuckles. The same goes for aromatic herbs as the artemisias, hyssop, and sweet cicily.

Another helpful feature is the approach. The plants are taken up by seasons—a valuable aid to fragrance gardening. You can pick your plants to match the time you frequent the garden most. The last chapter is a listing of fragrant plants with size, description, season, soil preferences, sun or shade and how to grow them.

In winter they make their way south to Malaga, the Canary Islands, or Estoril. Unfortunately, Horace (65-8 B.C.), Rome's matchless bard, never got to The Greenbrier. But if he had, you can bet he would have gone lyrical. Knowing the good things of life, he would have extolled the rolling magnificence of Greenbrier's 7000 woodland acres, the exhilarating climate, the matchless cuisine. And no doubt the over-all atmosphere of gaiety would have been the subject for nothing less than an epic. Surely, Greenbrier's fabulous baths at the world-famed Spa would have reminded him of the good old golden days of the Eternal City.

So we say, if it's a vacation you want, a vacation where the days and nights are replete with healthful pleasure and jolly companionship, The Greenbrier is your address. Average rates are but $19.00 a day per person, meals included.

Bigger game

If you've hunted the usual places, brought home the usual trophies, and are looking for bigger game, how about one of these:

Austria has made available 116 of its best-stocked, most-famed hunting estates, either for all-out lease or shooting expeditions, to Americans bent on deer, stag, chamois. Write the Austrian State Tourist Department, 48 East 48th Street, New York 17.

India, says Thos. Cook & Son, whose African wild game safaris have filled many a den with creditable trophies, is now available for tiger hunting, and the most desirable season begins in November. Cook stands ready with information, and will help make arrangements.

Arizona holds perpetually open the season on mountain lion, with October, according to old-timers, a better month than most. Cougar hunting is a tough sport, requiring a well-trained pack of dogs, a guide, a horse, and nerve. But if you're interested, contact one of these Arizonans, all well-known hunters, with their own dogs: Frank Colcord at Young, Giles Goswick at Mayer, Floyd Pyle at Payson, Jess Burke at Alpine, Leo Greenough at Cottonwood, and Marvin Glenn at Douglas.

Alaska, where everything grows bigger, boasts also some of the world's biggest game, and opens season on most of it in September. Here, too, the going is rugged, requiring a guide for each member of the party, even the one who is shooting only with a camera. But if it means everything to you to come home with a Kodiak bearskin twelve-feet square, or moose antlers with a spread of seventy inches or more, write airmail to the Alaska Development Board, Juneau, for its listing of places to hunt, and a listing also of the licensed guides available in each area.

At ease!

If it's fear of air sickness that is keeping you home, heed these words to the wise traveler from American Airlines Medical Division, based on a year's study of motion sickness, be it on land, sea, or in the air. Just why people get sea-, air-, train-, or car-sick, no one really knows. Science has proved that alcohol increases vulnerability, a light meal is better than none, and the new drug, dramamine, now available on many carriers, while dangerous if you need to keep alert, nevertheless is sure-cure eight times out of ten. But, even more important, this study confirms that apprehension alone often brings sickness on—and, by way of helping you to be less apprehensive, points out that actually only about one-half of one per cent of all air travelers ever get airsick at all!

Ultimate

Even those to whom the rest of the state is an old, old story admit that Key West is something different under the Florida sun. Closer to Havana than to Miami, it has a Latin flavor that is not only tangible and colorful, but authentic. The several hundred Conches living there perpetuate speech and ways reminiscent of the Bahamas whence they come. And all over Key West you are very much aware that the sea which dictates its equable climate, fashioned its history, and today inspires its diversions, was a livelihood before it became fun. The fishing is fabulous. The 156-mile trip from Miami down the Keys by Overseas Highway, whether by Greyhound bus or in your own car, is one of the nation's more worth-while travel experiences. Key West also has lately become, through a new car-ferry service, one of the more interesting ways to get to Havana. The place has one large luxury hotel, the Casa Marina, open only for the winter season and one large commercial hotel, La Concha, open all year. The roof-top Quarter-deck here is an excellent place to get acquainted with local delicacies like turtle steak, conch chowder, and Key lime pie. A great number and variety of other accommodations are available too. The Key West Chamber of Commerce will send you a list.

It Pays To Be Ignorant

n always attracted to magazine ticles that deal with decorating akes. They never fail to interest because usually they contain 's which I thought were strictivate. Misery wanting what it o I cut these out, tack them to ulletin board, and they help ake me feel I belong.

ere are some mistakes that can out happily, though. Like the we furnished our first home al years ago. I decided to see I could do in second-hand s. I came home on the truck a tufted love seat, a chair to h, and a marble-topped table. d my husband the stuff was ch and worth a fortune. It d out to be Victorian and nothing at all. Victorian was a dime a dozen. (Bruce Butt- or somebody who was later osed to have been responsible ne Victorian revival, was busy moment with something else. in second-hand stores everye there lay items going beg- which today are bringing high s in antique shops.) I kept on g it because I thought every- floral, faunal, or marble- d was French. (I nearly sank gh the pavement from em- ssment once when a friend y mother's met me downtown, said she'd heard I was going in for French, and was it French Provincial or French Pronounceable But Not Spellable? I didn't have the slightest idea what she was talking about, and I don't remember what I replied. But it was most nonplussing at the time.)

The small amount of money involved had something to do with it, too. And I knew nothing about the rule (it was in effect even then, but I can do only one thing at a time, and when I decorate, I can't read) that says you don't put large patterns in fabrics on tufted furniture. I went ahead and had the tufted pieces done in a loud green and red damask which lost its pattern completely, except for a mad jumble, once it was pulled into those dimples the buttons make.

That's where one of the nice mistakes comes in. It was stunning. Honestly! Everybody said so. All the girls who came to see our flat (they were dying to see it because I was the first girl in our crowd to do her place entirely in French) thought I was the smartest thing! It wasn't until years later that I discovered my errors. And by that time, I was so thoroughly convinced I was a marvelous decorator. I didn't care. (I guess I do care now, though. When the love seat and chair had to be reupholstered, I'd have done them in splashy stuff again if I dared. But, by that time, I had got around to suspecting a little something, and I was afraid. It pays to be ignorant in more ways than one!)

There was the little matter of the bisque figurines, too. Before our Sue was born, I felt I wanted her welcomed by parents who owned family heirlooms. So I bought a few heirlooms from a family that lived around the corner. I bought several pairs of little old china men and women (so help me, that's how I referred to them, and not in whispers either), and I placed them around her room because they made the room look dainty, and they seemed somehow to belong there. They stayed there for a number of years until they got popular in places other than second-hand store windows and until the magazines began to wise me up. I coaxed them all away from Sue eventually (this wasn't as hard as it sounds because she leans toward Modern, the traitor), and spread them around the living room. Shortly after that they got to be nice decorating—terribly smart, indeed, quite scarce, practically unobtainable, and then out of reach financially. Today when somebody tells me those bisque figurines simply make the room, I just smile and say thank you. The truth is sometimes so darned dull!

Then there was the Unglazed Something Toast Rack. I was looking for a gift for my mother's anniversary, and, when I saw the Unglazed Something Toast Rack, I felt it was just the thing. The second-hand man from whom I bought it was a smarty who knew all the answers and insisted on telling me what everything was. (This adds to the price, I have since found out.) He had a cigar in his mouth when he made the announcement about the Unglazed Something, however, and, although I asked him to repeat it several times, I never found out exactly what he thought it was. All I knew was that it was a gadget for holding toast, and he wanted two dollars for it; it had small, beautiful flowers on and, therefore, it was Victorian.

I took the Unglazed Something Toast Rack home and I made a piece of toast to show my husband how pretty it looked. The toa didn't fit, though. No matter h thin you sliced the bread, the sl in the U.S.T.R. were too narrow couldn't give it to my mother l cause she has always been the pra tical type, and if you give her toast rack that won't hold toa she simply hands it back and as you to please exchange it for slip, size 38. So I put it away the pantry shelf on which I ke such items. Eventually it turn out to be French (wouldn't y know?), and it is for guess wha Letters! It stands on the little h table now and it's the most pra tical thing in the house. On da when six or seven manuscripts a rejected in the same mail, it hol them all without crowding.

The lowboy in the living room a case in point, too. Some yea ago I needed extra drawer spa and I took from my sister's attic dresser, which she no lon needed. I really wanted it for t upstairs hall, but after I paid t cartage I was sorry because didn't fit. It was too long and jutted out too far. I had the tru men carry it downstairs again, since they weren't going back Albany that same night, and sin they needed the truck space to h a local load, they promised to turn for it in the morning.

In the meantime, my husba arrived home and he had to fin place to sit (the dresser took practically the whole of the t downstairs hall which we use a sitting room). He and I toget lugged the dresser to the liv room, juggled the furniture arou a little, and pushed the dres against the wall to get it out of way. It didn't look too bad. I h to have drawer space downsta too, so we left it. Now when peo remark about the beautifu grained rope-edged lowboy knew nothing about grain exc bread, by the way, and I thou at first they were saying "do edged"). I say, "Yes, it is lov isn't it?"

To me, though, the nicest mist in connection with all this made by the sister of a friend mine. Sister was in town from Middle West on a visit, and Fri brought her here to call. As t drove home, Sister, who is re nishing and buying antiques for first time, said, "Isn't that ho simply darling?" Friend repl "Yes, and Jean got the stuff next to nothing." Whereupon Si said, "Look, maybe that's what think, but I've been buying it I know better!"

Don't be timid when you find you must end a wall or lower part of it because of a change in grade. A namby-pamby solution such as a lot of little jogs is no solution at all. Here you see one that is brought down in obvious steps. It serves its purpose, is pleasing to the eye.

How to cope with garden walls

PHOTOGRAPH BY RICHARD AVERILL SMITH

When you change the height of a wall, particularly where you want to continue it at its new level, hide the change behind a planting of shrubs. Plants take your eye away from the change and it passes unnoticed. This is especially true of free-standing walls.

• Could you end your retaining wall by doubling it back on itself and running it into the bank? This way you eliminate an end standing out like a sore thumb. Don't continue the wall indefinitely, just to taper it down. The bank also anchors the wall and holds it firmly.

• You can end a wall very easily behind a tree or shrub. Evergreens, either broad-leaved like rhododendrons or needle-bearing, are best for this purpose. They stay on the job all year round. You can also use the evergreens to screen a stile or a break in the wall.

building would start up again, but that didn't discourage Alan. He suggested to June that she use the intervening time to shop for art, china, furniture, and accessories.

Her first impulse, he later told me, was to rush down to Benton's, the largest department store in Los Angeles, and to buy everything in one fell swoop. But diplomatically, Alan put his foot down.

"Now look, June," he explained, "you wouldn't play in a movie without first reading the script, would you? Well, it's the same way about furniture. You've got to get acquainted with the subject. You've got to learn your lines."

Whereupon he devoted his every spare moment to coaching her. He took her to furniture showrooms, china shops, fabric stores. They bought nothing—which must have taken some firm restraint from Alan, because I imagine June was itching for the thrill of throwing her new-made money around. (Instead, Alan insisted that they go merely as sightseers, examining everything, fingering cloth and china, thumping wood, comparing designs and deciphering hallmarks.)

Any time he heard of a worthwhile auction, no matter how far up or down the coast it might be, he'd call June and they'd fly off together to browse around—but never bid—and in those days that must have killed the Waters, a spotlight hog if ever I saw one.

Naturally, Alan was right there teaching her all the time, pointing out the good from the bad, the classic from the contemporary, the handmade from the machine-made, the formal from the informal. He even hired a cabinet-maker to explain the fine points of good furniture to her. He gave her books to read on such varied subjects as wood finishes and china, pressed glass and Georgian silver, and apparently he saw to it that she actually did read them. He led her to and through every important museum in the state. (As a by-product of her museum-introduction to oriental design, she developed the discriminating taste for jade which has resulted in the world-famous Waters Jade Collection.) Once he gave up a whole week to touring the studios of the best ceramists on the Coast. And while it's hard to understand how he could ever bear to do it, he actually took June to visit in the homes of his friends, all people who shared his cultured tastes and whose very tablespoons were lessons in good design.

I shouldn't have known anything about this if I hadn't run into Alan one day about a month after June's indoctrination had begun. He told me, like a father bragging about his little girl's report card, that they'd been on their first money-spending shopping trip that morning. They'd gone back to the department store to look at sofas and chairs, and June had punched cushions, tested springs, and appraised cabinetwork like a veteran. She then told a high-pressuring salesman—with perfect truth—that none of his stuff was worth owning, and marched out of the store. Alan said he felt like a surgeon who had given sight to a blind child.

I guess I'm a cynic by nature, but June's department-store antics filled me with no such ecstasy. "Alan," I said, "why don't you stop kidding yourself? You've sold June Waters a bill of goods, getting her to build that model house of yours. Now your conscience is bothering you, so, in order to soothe it, you're trying to impose your own standards on her. I'm telling you it won't work. She's a little too old to play Galatea to your Pygmalion. She's never had any taste and never will—in men, in clothes, in anything. I don't care how you do up that house or how much you teach her, you can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear."

Alan, of course, refused to accept that. For a writer, he said I had a particularly closed mind. As a matter of fact, June was leaving on a USO tour of the country that night and had just asked him for a list of shops and museums to visit en route.

"And what did you tell her?" I asked, sarcastically.

"I told her," Alan said, "that when she hit Boston, it might be a good idea if she inspected the hooked rugs at the Fine Arts Museum. In New York I recommended the pewter and the lighting fixtures at the Metropolitan. I also told her to look up my brother so he can show her around the art galleries. When she gets to Virginia, I want her to visit Williamsburg, especially the Governor's Palace. The living room there has one of the handsomest needlepoint rugs I've ever seen. She's even going to st over an extra day in Albany look at the Shaker furniture in New York State Museum."

"And what makes you think," demanded, amazed at the ma gullibility, "that she's going to all that?"

"When people are seriou shopping," Alan said calm "when they really intend to spe money furnishing a house, th want their money's worth. Th like to know something about background of what they're b ing—what makes the differe between a good and a bad vers of the same thing. Once they kn a little about it the more they w to learn. June's in that spot ri now. She doesn't want to get stu That's why I think she's going listen to me."

"Alan, my boy," I said, "far it from me to disillusion you, I'll bet the only Shaker she'll on this trip is a cocktail shake Alan shrugged his shoulders. two months," he said, "we'll which one of us was right."

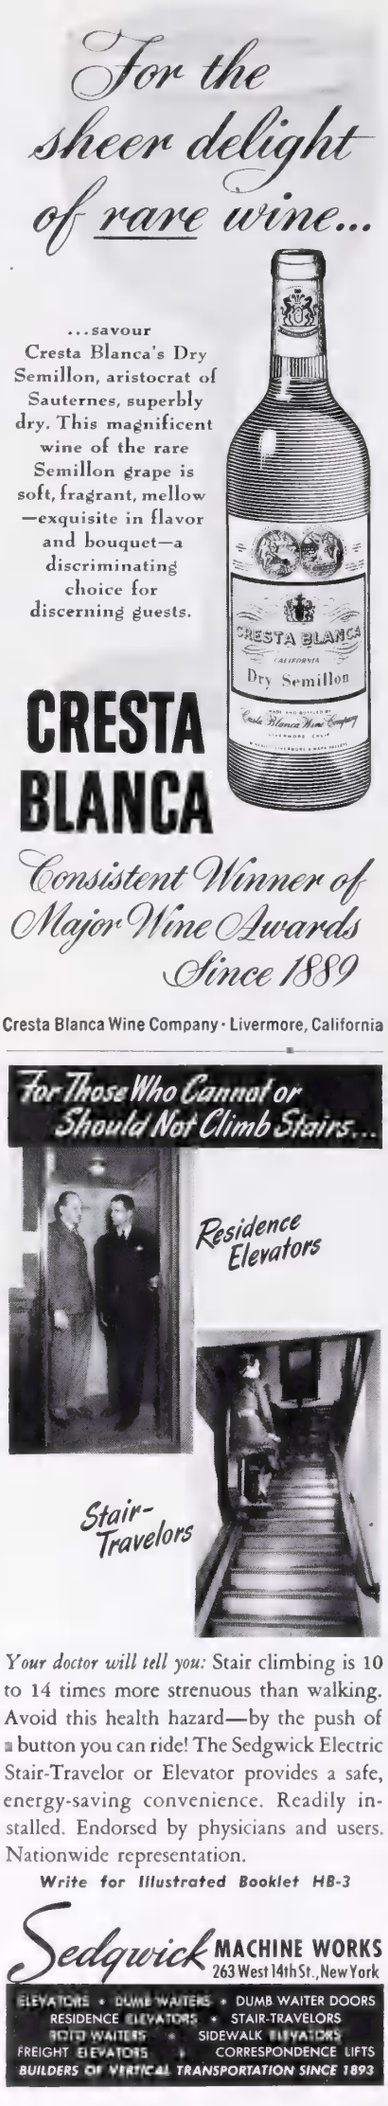
In two months, however, I been drafted into the army shipped overseas.



I spent three years in the se ice, then returned to Europe fo couple of years doing feature ries for a New York paper. thought of June Waters only wh I saw her on the screen which most infrequently.

Eventually, I reported back the studio, and after a week on lot, it seemed as if I'd never Hollywood. They gave me the sa old office, the same old typewri the same old secretary. Her na was Bertha, and at ten each mo ing she'd go out for coffee and turn with The Hollywood Repo or Daily Variety and I'd stop wo ing and scan the gossip column

I was lapping up this luxury day when an item in E Gwynn's column raised my brows. The item said that J Waters had eloped to Yuma v Alan Scott.

To make certain my vision wa playing tricks, I read the n twice. "Oh brother!" I said to self. "That poor chump!" I k the old saw about opposites attr ing, but this was hard for me take. After all, Scott was a refi educated, soft-spoken man, the k of man who early in life begin look like a distinguished fa portrait. On the other hand, J was June.

A few days later, I got a ding announcement and an in tion to a house warming. "This told myself. "you can't miss."

I arrived at the Scott home early Saturday afternoon. as eager and curious as a neighborhood gossip. It was Alan's house all right. the tangible shape of the blueprint I had seen so many years ago when the house was only a day dream. It was simple. unassuming. but even from where I stood on the door mat there was a certain substantial beauty in its very simplicity. The battens looked as if the carpenters were proud of the way they had planed them. The stones in the terrace had a look of inevitable perfection. as if each one had been chosen for its precise position.

I was met at the door by June. I scarcely recognized her. Her hair was back to its original color, a soft. lustrous brown. She was dressed in a garment of subdued green. a dress which fit. and not at all like the elastic jobs she used to wear. Her smile was like the turning up of a lamp. She explained that Alan had gone to Westwood for some soda. and offered to show me around the place.

She spoke softly. with charm and tact. She was as warm and natural as her house; and the house. I must say. was pretty nearly perfect. inside and out. The Shaker pieces. the antique china. the Benton over the fireplace. the pewter—everything seemed to fit, to belong.

As June guided me. she talked with enthusiasm and a becoming kind of dignity about her house and how it had been put together. Moreover. she seemed to know what she was talking about. In pointing out different accessories, she described why and how and where she had bought them. She told me how she had commissioned two of her maiden aunts in Racine to copy the fabric designs onto her quilted bedspreads. We discussed the works of Grandma Moses and Aaron Bohrod whose paintings hung in the bedrooms. She confessed frankly that she had once thought that Early American meant copper pots. Currier & Ives, and lamps made out of coffee grinders. but that Alan had taught her differently.

As for me. I might as well admit I was pretty nearly speechless with amazement and delight. It was four years since I'd last seen her. but even so. it was difficult for me to believe that in four years any woman. especially this woman. could change so much. so completely, so much for the better. Her demeanor. her manner were so

SEPTEMBER HARVEST HINTS

Celery is often bitter if harvested while weather is still hot, but later the same planting may be of excellent quality.

Broccoli should never be allowed to go to flower. Harvest regularly to insure continuous production.

Tomato losses from cracking and decay can be reduced without loss of quality by picking when first color change appears.

Sweet corn suckers sometimes produce small but edible ears after the main crop is harvested.

Cabbage of the late varieties seldom split open, so may be left in the garden until you are ready to use.

Eggplant is best when fruit hasn't quite reached full size and seeds aren't yet fully developed.

Chard is best when coarse outer leaves are discarded. Store tender center leaves in refrigerator if not used immediately.

Watermelons, when ripe, usually have a brown tendril on the main stem opposite the fruit. Snapping melon with your finger for a deep sound is another clue to ripeness—a green watermelon goes "plink" and a ripe one goes "plunk."

RHUBARB REJUVENATION. Has your rhubarb "run out," producing only small stalks? Try lifting the clumps this fall and cutting into three or four pieces with a shovel and then reset in spaded and fertilized soil. Don't expect miracles next spring. The size of root grown during the past summer determines the vigor of next year's crop. But with reasonable care and judicious harvesting, subsequent crops will be improved.

FALL TRANSPLANTING. Cool days of late September are ideal for transplanting strawberries, bunching onions, and perennial herbs. There is still time for enough new root growth to anchor plants well before winter. Of course, southern gardeners will delay transplanting until the first cool fall days arrive.

NEW HERBS. You'll find a number of hardy perennial herbs ready for fall delivery by the herb specialists. Our family has never developed much enthusiasm for herbs, but this fall I'm planting some that are new to us, including the lemon-scented thyme and pot marjoram. Also a plant of the curly spearmint which southern herb fanciers declare to be the true julep mint.

SPACE FOR STRAWBERRIES. If you lack space for strawberries, try the stunt of my neighbor, Don Connor, who has a solid bed in one section of his flower border. Flanked by tulips in spring and followed by summer annuals, these strawberries are as attractive as anything he could plant.

PUMPKINS ASTRAY. The children have taken too seriously my earlier suggestion to eliminate artificial boundaries between flower and vegetable garden. Now there is a husky potato plant snuggled between the iris and a hill of pumpkins about to bring forth their first fruit where the verbenas are supposed to be. I guess if they really get interested in plants, garden design will follow in due course.

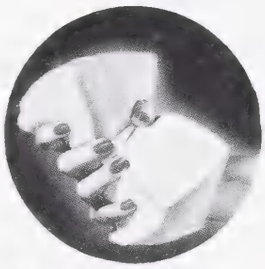
WEED SEEDLINGS. Check your lawn for new seedlings of dandelion and plantain a couple of weeks after the first cool fall rains. September is a good time to nip them in the bud with 2. 4-D. I've found early fall also a good time for killing large established lawn weeds. Vigorous growth of grass in fall and spring soon fills in the spots where weeds die.

MOISTEN COMPOST PILE. How's the moisture supply in your compost pile? Following a dry summer there may not be enough water to promote decomposition of the organic material. Hollow out the top of the pile to make a large basin and let the hose run into it slowly and long enough to really soak the pile.

START COMPOSTS SOON. I've found fall a good time to start a compost pile. Most of us are too busy planting in the spring and keeping cool in summer. Allowed to set through all of next year. compost started now will be in good condition for spring planting in 1952.

STUFFED RED PEPPERS. Last September after the sweet peppers had ripened. Del surprised us at dinner with baked red peppers stuffed with little breakfast sausages and golden corn cut from the cob. The peppers kept their red color beautifully. and I thought they were more tender than stuffed green peppers. It's a good way to use a little left-over sweet corn too.



TOMATO THINNING. Will tomatoes. flowering now. ripen this fall? It takes about 45 days from blossoming in summer: a little more when weather is cool. So if your first frost comes in early October, September blooms won't quite make it. If plants are overloaded with blossom clusters that have little chance of producing fruit. snip them off now to improve size and quality of fruit already set.

ORCHARD SANITATION. Raking up and burying unusable fallen fruit is a good insect-and disease-preventive measure. Easiest way is to dig a shallow hole near the tree and rake the fruit into it.

• Shiplap construction and extra width of this gate make the high wall seem less unfriendly. Solid, narrow gates look forbidding, invite the neighbors to criticize. Here gate and wall are painted the same attractive pastel color as house, so look a part of it.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER

• When you need air movement through same side of yard, use a gate like this. Keep openings high and their pattern strong so passers-by in a moving automobile won't really be able to see into the yard.

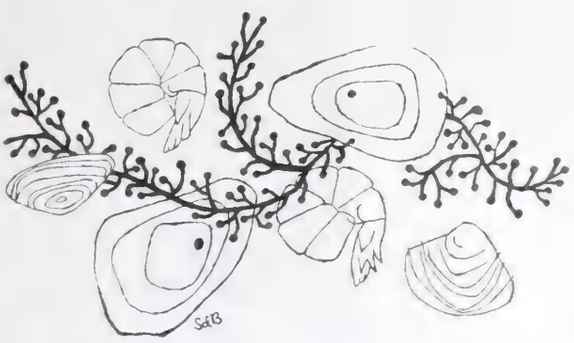
inches deep regularly each week. Don't start watering unless you are prepared to keep it up all summer. To wet the soil four inches down you need what amounts to a blanket of water an inch deep—much more than you or anyone else has the patience to apply from a hose held in the hand. Get a good mechanical sprinkler. Leave it in place until the soil is wet four inches deep. Dig out a chunk of soil with your trowel to test this.

USE WEED KILLERS INTELLIGENTLY. Lawns cut high (2 inches), fed liberally, and watered thoroughly offer little chance for weeds to get started. But don't hesitate to use chemical weed killers if you see weeds invading the sod. Since lawn grasses grow fast in cool weather, apply weed killers in the fall (September) or spring (May). This allows the grasses to fill in the bare spots quickly. Or apply them in July and then reseed the bare ground in late August.

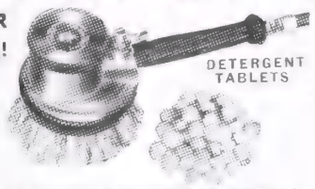


2,4-D kills dandelions, plantain, etc. without injury to the grass. But it kills clover, so don't use 2,4-D if you want to keep your clover. If you have crabgrass, spray the lawn in late May with potassium cyanate (lawn grass may turn brown for two weeks, but it recovers). Or wait until mid-July and then spray with phenyl mercuric acetate solution (PMAS) or spread "Scutl," a dry material.

CHOOSE A SEED MIXTURE HIGH IN BLUEGRASS CONTENT. If you are starting a new lawn or reseeding bare spots, always buy a special lawn mixture, not a single kind of grass. Mixtures are made so you get a quick cover of green (in ten days) while the slow-to-start permanent grasses are sprouting (often not for three weeks).

The price of the seed mixture depends mainly upon the amount and the quality of the bluegrass in it. The more you pay per pound, the more bluegrass you get—and the better the lawn, except in heavy shade. Look for the addition of fescue in the mixture for shady places.

Don't wait for the new wonder grasses you may have heard about lately—supposedly no more weeds. These grasses aren't likely to be available for another two or three years, if at all. Producing seeds of them is extremely slow and expensive. Bluegrass costs only a fraction as much to produce, and it makes a lawn that only the experts can distinguish from the new "special" grasses.



September or October is the best time to start a new lawn, and March or April second best. Late spring (after May 1) is hopeless. You'll get more weeds than lawn grass. Weeds thrive on hot weather, but newly seeded lawns barely manage to stay alive. So if you fail to get your lawn seeded before May 1, seed it to ryegrass to get a green cover for looks until mid-August. Then plow this under and reseed with your permanent lawn grass mixture.

WOVEN PICKET FENCES

For a third of a century we have made woven picket fences whose natural beauty has added charm to homes and estates in every state in the United States. These fences not only beautify your home and enhance its value . . . they also afford privacy and protection.

We make two types of woven fences, CLEFT, with ¼" between each picket, or CLOSE, with pickets butted tight together. You can choose from imported French Chestnut or domestic cedar. Lasts for many years and its rustic attractiveness increases with time. Made in several heights. Easy to erect from instructions we furnish. Never need painting. Our illustrated booklet shows the many types of fences we make.

GROUND LEVEL

For big flowers next spring, order top-size bulbs this fall and plan them at the proper depth. These are the two rules for success. The flowers develop from the stored strength in the bulbs, and for most kinds of spring bulbs the flowers are already present in miniature form within the bulbs when you buy them.

If you plant bulbs too deep, the developing flowers smother and the bulbs rot. Also, summer heat is hard on the bulbs. So, if you plant them too shallow, they split up into a number of bulbs too small to bloom. If they are planted at the right depth, even tulips need to be dug and replanted only once every three or four years of your show garden for summer bloom. Then pot-gardening can rescue you. Enjoy your full summer bloom, but in September replace these plants with in-bloom fall flowers grown in pots.

What fall flowers should you grow? Chrysanthemums, dahlias, and perennial asters (not the annual kind you grow from seeds) are the mainstays. Then choose from Japanese anemone, coreopsis, helenium, and purple coneflower. You can count on lots of bloom year after year from any of these hardy plants. As for the annual flowers you grow from seed, you can get gorgeous fall bloom from marigolds, petunias, and zinnias, but only if you plan for it. Marigolds need only plenty of water and an application of plant food to the soil in late August to look their best right until freezing weather arrives. If you cut off the old seed heads, your plants will produce a few more flowers than if left alone, but this is a job you can skip if you wish. Not so with petunias. If they have bloomed heavily all summer, you won't get much fall bloom unless you shear off the seed pods. Use your hedge shears and cut the whole plant back to within six or eight inches of the ground in late August. This removes most of the leaves, but within ten days new leaves will completely hide the bare stems. You'll get an even heavier fall bloom than you had during the summer because petunias thrive on hot days and cool nights.

Insuring full fall bloom on zinnias is trickier. These are hot-weather flowers. Often by September they are worn out, lanky, sometimes falling over, and usually leafless on the lower half of the plants except for a few rusted, dried remnants of leaves. But this is all so unnecessary. When your young zinnias get eight or nine inches high, pinch off the top two or three inches of the main stem. This will force the plants to branch; produce three to five branches instead of one main stalk. You delay flowering by several weeks, but you obtain a husky, branched plant that won't become top-heavy by September. Then to keep the lower leaves green and healthy, choose a place in your garden where the air circulates freely. Many people who notice the rusted, dried leaves on their zinnias erroneously think that exposure to the breezes has caused the trouble. So they deliberately choose sheltered spots—and thereby intensify their troubles. Rusting of zinnias is a disease that spreads on plants growing in moist, stagnant air. Regular weekly applications of an all-purpose garden dust keeps the disease under control. Nature will do this automatically if you keep your zinnias away from "dead" air spots.

Good fall gardens are rare, because few people plan for them. You can't leave them to chance.

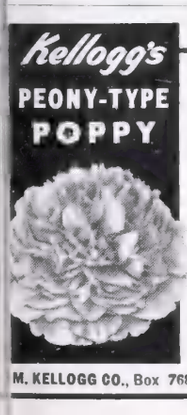
charming, so poised, that if I had not known, I should have insisted that June Scott had been this way always.



Alan returned in a short while, and he was genuinely glad to see me. He fixed drinks and we drank to the occasion, and then he took me for a stroll through the gardens. He asked what I'd done in the war and listened attentively while I told him. Presently, I shifted the conversation gears, and, in true Hollywood fashion, I exclaimed that his house was "simply terrific."

"I'm glad you like it," he said, "but what I really want to know is what you think of June. Tell me—on the level."

"Have you ever heard the story of Picasso and Gertrude Stein?"

Alan Scott fixed me with a smile. "Yes," he said, "I believe I have."

"I'm sure of it," I said.

J & P

If you are near Rochester, New York, this month, go on over to Newark, New York, to visit the Jackson & Perkins rose garden, now four years old and the best rose show in America. The fall bloom should be the best of the whole year. The garden is open seven days a week.

Tulips

Don't let September slip by without a tulip order in the mail. No garden should be without at least a dozen each of Red Emperor, Clusiana, Mayblossom, Pride of Haarlem, Clara Butt, Mrs. John T. Scheepers, and Eros.

Revival

The rock garden craze of the Thirties appears to be enjoying a resurrection in America, but fortunately the plantings are leaning heavily on evergreen, woody plants instead of the transitory alpines of two decades ago. There's a big improvement in taste, too, among the designers. America needs good rock gardens. They offer one solution to the need for a good 12-months' view from today's big windows and glass walls.

No shade

Were you lacking in shade this summer? Then put in your order for a tree to be moved in this winter. Order now and the nursery can make a selection that will fit your specifications for fall color of the leaves. You might as well have the best. (There's a big difference between individual trees of the same general kind.)

New plants—next year

Perennial flowers started from seed in September will be ready to go into their permanent places next spring. You'll get bloom next summer—saving a whole year over the usual timing. I can't understand why so few people use this trick.

Wonderful

Canterbury bells and foxglove are wonderful plants—because they are so full of character. Too many people ignore them because they aren't as foolproof as, for instance, iris. But they are worth every bit of trouble. Suppose they do only live for two or three years? They are easy to start anew from seed.

Fall planting

I've been on the fence for years about the business of fall planting. The advantages are obvious—nurseries have more time to pack the plants better, the plants are freshly dug instead of out of a winter in cold storage, and you do get the choice plants of the lot instead of something from a picked-over collection. But there is more risk of non-survival if the winter happens to be bad. I've checked survival carefully (fall- against spring-planted) for the past five years—and there hasn't been enough difference to give up all those advantages of fall planting. Try it yourself this year.

Winter heat

It's not too late to order a home greenhouse to be erected before frost. Then you'll garden through all 12 months. More than likely your present heating plant can heat your greenhouse, too. Why not enjoy fresh flowers from your own garden all winter long?

Summer snip

Don't let your wisteria, trumpet-creeper, etc., grow into a tangle of shoots. Snip back each new shoot to three feet now. You'll only have to cut away the excess growth next spring, so you might as well nip it off now. Getting rid of some of the leaf growth cuts down the need for soil water.

Faster than you think

Many people put off starting privacy plantings "until we can afford to buy big plants." Better to start them at once. You'll be surprised how fast they grow.

Shoosh

Last spring I had occasion to visit a number of the redwood groves. Ever notice how amazingly efficient these trees are as sound stoppers? On a smaller scale, you can apply the idea to your home grounds. Any evergreen can help give you privacy from the noises of industry and passing traffic.

Mint walk

Looking for a loose, green carpet to grow between bricks or paving stones? Try the Requien mint. I saw it in Seattle recently. It's so fragrant it perfumed the air when a foot brushed against it. Seattle gardeners thought it should be hardy in the East at least to Philadelphia, and probably New York.

HOW TO USE AN ELECTRIC MOWER

PHOTOGRAPH BY LOUISVILLE ELECTRIC MFG. CO

Electric mowers, like this "Pionee rotary, will do any grass-cutting i you can do with a hand mower.

Lawn owners interested in pow mowers often are surprised to lea that they can buy a light-weig machine which operates from t regular household 110-volt curre

Once they hear about electr mowers, they wonder how to ke from accidentally cutting the el tric cord. Actually, it's no trick all if you mow back and forth, sketched above. Trees—which see such a problem to the uninitiate won't give you any trouble. Y can NOT mow round and roun the way you use your hand mow

Be sure you buy a mower sp cially designed for use with electric motor—not just a ha mower souped up with an electr motor as an afterthought. The m tor itself must be made for la mowing, since the usual househo electric motor doesn't operate sufficient speed to cut the gra neatly and to prevent formation windrows of the grass clippings.

Rotary mowers cut whether y push them forward or backwa Some manufacturers supply rev sible handles so that you mer flip the handle when you reach t end of the swath. This can save lot of time for you. All reel-ty mowers, of course, cut only in direction, so you must make a turn at each side of the lawn. Th is no danger of nicking the elect cord as long as you always t AWAY from your last cut.

Use only the insulated elect cord furnished with mower.

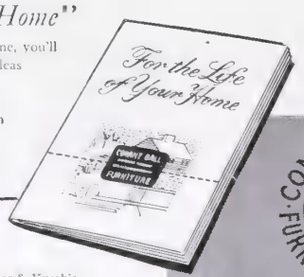
So Old...So New...So Perfectly Right...

and so typical of Conant Ball



From out of the past . . . the grand days of Early American living . . . come these new and refreshing pieces of Conant Ball traditional furniture. Each and every one is either a faithful reproduction or a respectful adaptation of a masterpiece of Early American art. Each and every one represents the true and tireless spirit of a design that is always perfectly right for your home.

Made in solid rock maple . . . with a light, distinctively beautiful finish . . . these pieces are typical of the many other choice examples of fine furniture craftsmanship, for which Conant Ball has been so famous for close to one hundred years.

Send for this Booklet... "For the Life of Your Home"

Whether it is Early American or Modern furniture you prefer for your home, you'll surely find this booklet helpful. It is filled with many exciting decorative ideas created by leading authorities. It illustrates, in full color, some new and stimulating treatments for interiors. It even tells you how to protect your furniture from harmful elements . . . how to keep it young and gay. It's worth many times its cost. Send only $.25 for your copy to Dept. HB-10, Conant Ball, Gardner, Massachusetts.

Empress Dresden

CREATED in the magic kiln of Schumann of Bavaria, EMPRESS dinnerware is the superb example of Old-World craftsmanship. The EMPRESS decorations are wisely dignified—Dresden floral sprays highlighted in coin gold. Their depth of color, richness, and surface brilliance remain unexcelled. The distinguished Schumann backstamp, fired on every piece of EMPRESS, is your complete assurance that you possess china of world renown.

Chateau Dresden

With its open-work border, CHATEAU is a conversation piece wherever discriminating people gather. It complements EMPRESS dinnerware perfectly as a luncheon, tea, buffet or supper service, or at any informal occasion. CHATEAU is decorated with the same delicate Dresden floral sprays found on EMPRESS and bears the illustrious Schumann of Bavaria backstamp.

Buy EMPRESS and CHATEAU services as you would fine silver—by the complete set or in place settings. An EMPRESS five-piece place setting, including cup and saucer, butter, salad and dinner plates, around $13.50. Complete open stock service for every occasion. CHATEAU cup and saucer, $5. Five plate sizes, ranging from $2 to $10. Prices slightly higher where geographical location necessitates increased transportation costs.

Also available are CHATEAU and EMPRESS fancy service pieces, such as nut dishes, round comports, bonbon dishes, cigarette sets and ashtrays, which may be purchased singly. Open stock at leading stores, or write direct for name of nearest retail dealer.

"THE HABITANT LINE . . . PERFECTION IN PINE"

There's beauty and good living in a CONCRETE HOUSE

Your family will enjoy a lifetime of security and comfort in a house built with sturdy concrete masonry walls, concrete floors and a firesafe roof.

Concrete imparts beauty and character to any house because concrete masonry can be laid in a wide variety of pleasing and distinctive patterns. The walls can be left natural, painted any color with durable portland cement paint or stuccoed in beautiful textures.

A concrete house, properly insulated, provides year-round comfort in any climate. It's warm in winter and cool in summer. Being weathertight, it stays clean and dry in all seasons.

A concrete house also is economical to own. Its first cost is moderate, it requires little maintenance and it gives long years of service. That means true low-annual-cost shelter.

A concrete house provides maximum resistance to storms, decay, termites and vermin. It's also firesafe. Concrete can't burn! There's no better protection for loved ones or prized possessions.

Before you turn a spadeful of earth investigate the many advantages of owning a concrete house. Write for a free copy of the illustrated booklet, "Why People Like Concrete Homes." Distributed only in the United States and Canada.

HOW TO GET YOUR CONCRETE HOUSE . . . and what will it cost?

Phone a local concrete masonry manufacturer for names of architects and builders experienced in concrete house design and construction. They know conditions in your community and can answer your questions about plans and costs. Take any plans or sketches you have obtained from any source to an architect. Have him show you how your home—of any size or style—can be built economically with concrete walls and subfloors and a firesafe roof.

GLARE PROOF LAMP

FURS BY ROBERT—DETROIT

One of the priceless things a woman finds in ownership of a Cadillac is the knowledge that she has surrounded her family with every possible motoring safeguard. Braking is sure and instantaneous; steering is smooth and certain; vision is wide and clear; and the car's ability to hold the road is phenomenal! Moreover, the riding and handling ease is so exhilarating that the driver remains fresh and alert throughout even a full day's journey. Yes, once you have known the feeling of security that comes with a Cadillac, we think you'll agree . . . it's worth its price in peace of mind!

ICHABOD CRANE, by Richard Davis, is one of an exciting collection of new ceramics designed and signed by famous American painters and sculptors, and executed in Stonelain—a stoneware with a porcelain texture. Washington Irving's famous character comes in a rich deep green, mounted on walnut base, 8½" high, $15 plus 75¢ shipping charges. Associated American Artists, 711 Fifth Ave., New York.

A LADY'S MEASUREMENTS must be accurate, whether she's letting down a hem or knitting a pair of socks for her Argyle-mad husband. So give her this 72" tape measure, and it will be the pride of her sewing box. The plastic case has a handsome sterling-silver monogram. Underline last initial, please. $3.65 incl. tax and postage. Madolin Mapelsden, 825 Lexington Ave., New York 21.

BIG GAME HUNTING in the Far East is grippingly reproduced with these miniature cast-lead figures, imported from England. Each piece is hand-painted, and the set includes: 2 elephants (about 6" long), 2 tigers (one wounded with the spear in him), a white hunter and rajah riding howdahs, 2 mahouts on elephants' heads, 4 natives with spears. $7.95 ppd. J. J. Anthony, Box 402, Milwaukee 1, Wisc.

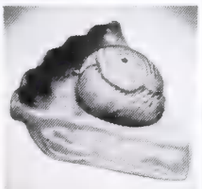
LAZY DAISY. What you're looking at is one of the sensational gifts of the year. A combination Lazy Susan and individual hors d'oeuvres server, it is made of fine glazed earthenware in dark green with chartreuse. The "petal" dishes are removable and are ovenproof. Think of those hot canapes! 16" wide. $7.95 ppd. Crane's, 419 E. 57th St., N. Y. C.

A WEE DROP to warm the cockles of your heart, whether you're at a football game, on a ski slope, or driving along a winter road, is fittingly carried in Scotch-plaid flasks. Plaid jackets are removable, and the screw-on caps are canny Scotsmen guarding their precious potion. Pint size, $5.50; half-pint (fits in a lady's purse), $4.50. Ppd. Game Room, 1538 Connecticut Ave., Washington 1, D. C.

ELBOW PATCHES. If your husband has a favorite tweed jacket, he'll almost double its life if he reinforces the sleeves with these elbow patches. And apart from their practicality, they make a good-looking sport jacket even more so. You might get some extras for the knees and seats of the children's leggings, too. Brown, tan, or gray suede. $1 pr. ppd. Johnny Appleseed's, Inc., North Beverly, Mass.



Western Saddle Horse Salts & Peppers $1.25

NICE FOR ICE: NICE PRICE. The Lustro-Ware Ice Bucket holds about 30 standard ice cubes for approximately 30 hours. That performance, plus its incredible price tag, plus its design, makes it a handsome bargain. The copper and mahogany-colored plastic can't corrode, rust, or tarnish, and the double plastic walls give fine insulation. $2.95 ppd. Foster's House, 15 Cole Court, Princeville, Ill.

ALL BY HERSELF your little preschooler will tie her own oxfords, zip up her jumper zipper, button her own party dress, if she has this wonderful book to show her how. Each page has a snap, button, etc. appliquéd so the child can practice how to dress herself. Illustrations and instructions in verse are done on washable sheeting. $2 ppd. FUR SLICKER. Here is the brush that furriers use. It's made of silk-steel wires, scientifically angled to penetrate the hairs gently, and if you use it frequently on anything from sables to squirrel, your furs will look better and last longer. It combs, cleans, and glazes fur garments and trimmings. But don't use it on curly-haired furs. $1.50 ppd. Madison House, Madison, Conn.

PERENNIAL PARTIERS are these four nested tables that you'll carry to the scene of the fun by the center brass handle that lifts to release each table. AMONG LIFE'S DELIGHTFUL EXPERIENCES

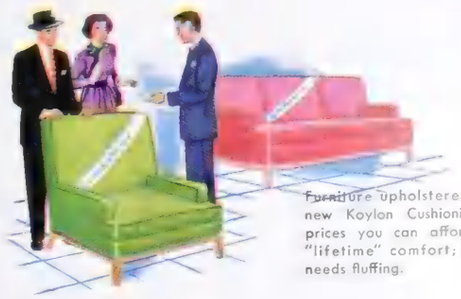
How enchanting—the proud showing of her first evening dress. Here is a joy to be lived but once.



Equally unforgettable—and a delightful experience every night—is the glorious refreshment of blessed, relaxing sleep on a Koylon Foam Mattress.

Now Koylon is made a Revolutionary New Way!

It's the new Koylon Foam with delicious buoyancy, with a greater area of airy support and healthful ventilation . . . now more than ever a cloud of superb sleeping comfort, to float and relax you, to soothe tired nerves. Because new Koylon is stronger and tougher it offers you many years of life's greatest blessing—scientific, restorative sleep. Fine stores will tell you the fabulous story.

- New Koylon is made in one complete piece, nothing to come apart or break down.
- Double cores mean more healthful ventilation. Koylon keeps dustfree, odorless, sanitary.
- Exclusive damask cover is woven and treated so it won't shrink, creep or bunch. Stitched top and bottom to hold true to mattress edges.
- Koylon foundation is reinforced hardwood with tempered steel springs, hand-tied 8 ways.

Furniture upholstered with new Koylon Cushioning at prices you can afford. It's "lifetime" comfort; never needs fluffing.

How to Create the Most Delicious Desserts in the World

Continental Dessert Delicacies

by Alice Sidon $2.50

Here for the first time in print are 200 of the most delectable desserts ever concocted, most of them treasured European "heirlooms" that Americans have relished abroad or in foreign restaurants here—wherever fine food is treasured. Every one a gem of incomparable delicacy and subtle flavor, they range from cakes, cookies, pastries to cremes and gelatins, souffles, puddings, sauces and little breads—include such luscious delights as Alexander Slices, Brioche, Vienna Cream Puffs, Hungarian Pancakes, and 58 Tortes, the most complete collection of these ever published.

All recipes have been translated into easy-to-follow American measurements and methods. A wonderful treat for an imaginative hostess. Only $2.50 and the lady said... "Yes!"

"Would you like a Suntile kitchen," said the architect, "done in beautiful new colors?"

And the lady said, "Yes!"

She's been having a wonderful time choosing her colors from the almost limitless number of combinations available. Decorating's easy when you have Suntile's Color-Balance to help you. You can blend your ideas into a color-perfect room that will actually seem to smile at you!

Aside from its beauty, Suntile makes one of the most economical interiors you can choose. It's long-wearing, real clay tile that never needs refinishing or redecorating. It stays clean and color-bright with no more maintenance than the stroke of a damp cloth. That's why so many architects also propose Suntile for the utility room, the bathroom and every hardworking room.

When you know all the facts about Suntile, we're sure you'll want to say, "Yes!", too.

Your local Authorized Suntile Dealer is the man to see. He knows tile and he can give you excellent advice on its installation, plus a guaranteed job every time. You can get his name from your phone book, or by writing a card or letter to us.

LITTLE GRINDERS. Because of their size, just 2½" high, they're particularly appealing. But when it comes to grinding fresh pepper right at the table, they do a man-sized job. Made of hand-turned and hand-polished English walnut, the Sheffield steel grinding mechanism is the best in the world, and fully guaranteed. 7.95 the pair; $3.95 each, ppd. Ford & Taylor, New York 18, N.Y.

COLONIAL DAMSEL and her waistcoated beau make a pretty pair for your dressing table. And their price is pretty, too—just $5 the pair. We think that's remarkable for hand-colored china figurines, mounted on filigree solid brass bases. They come with 7" acetate shades in pink, blue, or green with satin bow trim. 15" tall. Ppd. Kathy Arthur Gifts, 143 E. Highland Ave., Chestnut Hill 18, Pa.

LAUNDRY CAGE. We bet every college dorm in the country will be blooming with these pretty bags. White collar girls will hang them on closet doors. Globe-trotters will slip them in with rationed packables and they'll take up less room than a scarf. Made of rayon taffeta in Kelly green, navy blue, or fire-chief red, it's $1.95 ppd. Your Decorator Chooses GOODALL FABRICS to Create the Newest Room Beauty for You!

HOME FASHIONS start with your decorator and your decorator starts with Goodall! Goodall gives your decorator the newest in color themes, in textures, in perfect styling for your home. In the room shown here, Goodall's hand-printed drapery fabric, "Print and Imprint" with "Golden Glow" casements, sets the decorator's theme. She chose color-harmonized "Van Dyke" brown in Goodall's new "Chatham" to upholster the sofa; Goodall's loop-piled beige "Allegro" for one chair; spiced the whole with new "Cloisonne" upholstery in bright copper sparkled with metallic yarn, for a side chair. The result: a restful room, new in fashion, right in beauty, lasting in satisfaction because the fabrics are GOODALL!

Visit your decorator's or the decorating studio of your favorite store.

(A) Drapery Fabric: "Print and Imprint" (B) Side Chair Fabric: "Cloisonne" (C) Armchair Fabric: "Allegro" (D) Sofa Fabric: "Chatham" Casement Fabric: "Golden Glow"

Every Beautiful Goodall Fabric is Blended-for-Performance. They are woven of not just one fiber but are actually a combination of several fibers: a variable blend of Angora Mohair for resilience and texture, rayon for subdued lustre, wool for body and cotton for durability. That's the reason Goodall Fabrics drape so perfectly, hold their shape indefinitely . . . resist dust, refuse to wrinkle, need fewer cleanings. Besides, this unique process gives Goodall Fabrics their richer, clearer colors and distinctive elegance.

Romance of the Sea

THE NEW WALLACE
"THIRD DIMENSION BEAUTY"
PATTERN IN STERLING SILVER

Dynamic and thrilling as it unfolds the true beauties of the mood of adventure found in Nature's fascinating symbols of the sea.

Fully sculptured in "Third Dimension Beauty," the mermaid silhouette is the exact body outline for this enchanting pattern.

The motif is the ocean's gem
Gay flora flows in rhythmic swirl
Rich setting for the lovely pearl.

The majestic shell, the scrolling wave, the delicate spray and the sparkling bubbles complete the imaginative accomplishment.

"Romance of the Sea" is shown wherever fine sterling silver is sold. Also Mr. Warren's Grande Baroque, Sir Christopher, Grand Colonial, Stradivari and Rose Point. Prices for six-piece settings: $27.40 to $37.50.

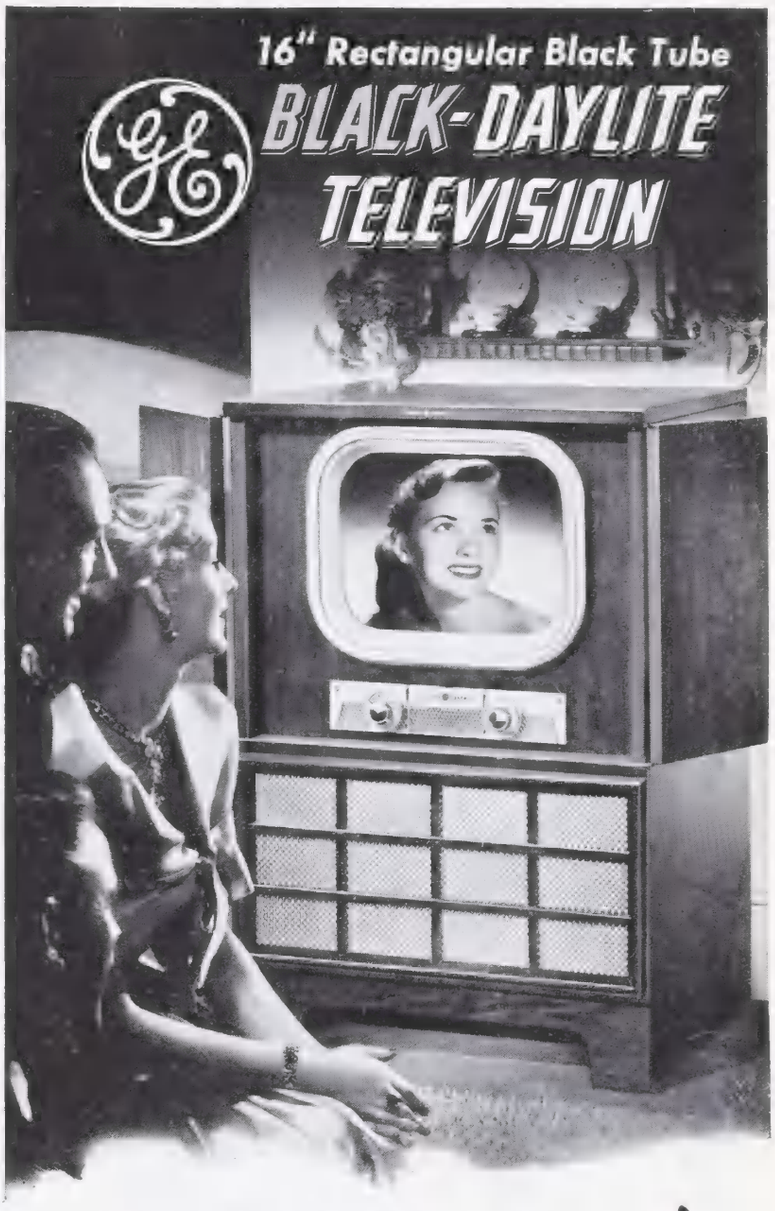
DRAWING BY JANE OLIVER

Sullivan and Gilbert

by Richard Williams

IN reversing the order in which the names of the two famous collaborators is usually given, I am not attempting to be turvy-topsy. I do so to stress Sullivan's name. And I stress his name only because the particular occasion belongs to him. Next month, on the 21st to be precise, it will be 50 years since Sir Arthur Sullivan died. We are celebrating a half-century anniversary.



Two years before he died, he made another of his repeated attempts to succeed in the domain he thought fitting his dignity and ability as a composer—the domain of grand opera. He produced an ambitious work to a libretto by Pinero called The Beauty Stone. It ran for a scant seven weeks. It was immediately followed by a revival of some of the Gilbert and Sullivan operettas. Such revivals could always be counted on to fill the theaters which had been emptied by his grander muse.

Among the works now performed was The Sorcerer, one of the earliest products of the Gilbert and Sullivan collaboration. Sullivan himself conducted, though by this time he was a sick and suffering man, and after recording in his diary the huge ovation which he received, he wrote, "Call for Gilbert and self—we went on together, but did not speak to each other." This was the last time he saw Gilbert, and it was a mute and inimical meeting.

In the succeeding two years, Sullivan kept on working, though frequently interrupted by such pain as even morphine would not still. He also traveled. He was wealthy—the operettas had made him so—and he was able to indulge his inclination for spending money freely. He journeyed to the continent, to the Riviera, to Paris, to Berlin, and to Monte Carlo where, as was his passion, he gambled heavily. His health continued to decline and he finally crept back to London. There he died a lonely and restrained death. The two men most closely linked to him were absent. His quarrel with Gilbert had not been resolved. And D'Oyly Carte— the man who had brought the two together—was so ill that the news of Sullivan's illness had been kept from him. Sullivan's funeral procession passed through the street below D'Oyle Carte's window and, with the intuition of long friendship, D'Oyly Carte guessed whose funeral it was. The nurse who entered his room found Carte prostrate before the window.

"I have just seen the last of my

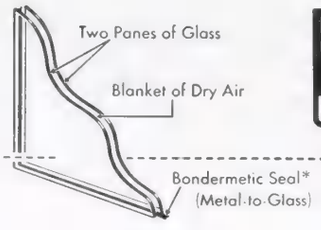
This window gives you the benefits of storm sash without their bother and expense. Extra comfort and fuel savings. No ladder climbing. No extra window washing. No storage problem.



It looks like regular sash . . . and it works like regular sash. But instead of having single panes, it is glazed with *Thermopane insulating glass—a double-glass unit with dry air hermetically sealed between the panes. Because the insulating glass is built right into the sash, your window insulation job is done, once-and-for-all, when your house is built.

Thermopane—in every window of your house—is the modern way to insulate your windows. Thermopane is made in more than 80 standard sizes, as well as special sizes. Sash for Thermopane is made in many types—double-hung, casement, picture windows and other styles—of either wood or metal. Your L·O·F Distributor can furnish full information. Or write to Libbey·Owens·Ford.
